DIY - DOING IT FOR THE GLASTERS KIDS

IWOULD like to thank the DIY Sound System for making Glastonbury one of my most memorable to date. This year, they played on Saturday night in a small tent just over the brow of the hill which was a stone's throw from the dance tent. The DIY DJs mixed a seamless fusion of deep, jazzy underground house that was so spiritual it was unreal. If you can get in touch with Armand Van Helden, would you please tell him to contact DIY for some mixing tips.

I would also like to say hello and thank you to all the people I danced with at dawn. They were full of smiles and joy, especially the Irish lads who were a pleasure to meet.

PAUL DAWKINS, Wolverhampton

GLASTONBURIED

OH how I gasped when it was reported that a number of cases of e.coli had been discovered among the Glastonbury bog-bathers. I have every sympathy for people afflicted with such an awful disease, but it does seem rather ironic. Anyone fool enough to want to spend the weekend in a sea of mud, watching appaling bands and DJs play a few miles away and pay through the nose for the privilege deserves to catch a nasty disease. All the more so if they choose to spend their hours wallowing neckdeep in cowpats, dog shit and, given the state of the toilets at every outdoor festival, human ordures. Instead of shelling out ridiculous sums to partake in ridiculous acts, next time they should just hose down their back gardens for a few days, dress up is stupid hats and stick a Carl Cox CD on. Sod off Glastonbury, and sod off all the mud fools. PETER JOHNS, Winchester

GOLDEN GRAHAMS

WITH regard to the comments Dennis Skinner made (Muzik, 27), I thought he needed putting straight on a number of matters. Firstly, Muzik is a dance music magazine, so stop talking bollocks about "Tory market forces". I suggest you buy a copy of "The Economist" instead.

Secondly, what right has he to label a night at Peach as a money-making cheese-hole? I've attended Peach many times over the past four years at various venues such as Cafe De Paris, Leisure Lounge and now at Camden Palace, and I can safely say it is one of the most successful club nights in London. The atmosphere, DJ line-up and value for money are second to none. As for labelling Graham Gold's Kiss FM show as commercial pop... get a life. How can tunes such as Lost Tribe's "My Soul" and Spirito's "Frontiers" be commercial pop? I would like to suggest that Dennis Skinner stops writing letters on subjects he knows nothing about.

I'm 23 years old and I love the music Graham Gold plays, both on the radio and in his clubs. It's uplifting, banging house music just the way I like it. I hope this doesn't put me into Mr Skinner's "retarded 16-year-old" category. Cheer up, you sound like a right miserable git! STEVE, via e-mail

HOW can Dennis Skinner dismiss Graham Gold's Kiss FM show as popdance when in any one week you can guarantee he'll play tracks from all areas of dance music and not just those which conform to some blinkered idea of what constitutes "proper house music".

So what if we don't all run around shouting "top banana"? Graham Gold is on the radio and is paid to get people in the mood for a good night out. But what do I and thousands of other clubbers know? We're probably out "larging it" at places like Peach while sad cases like Mr Skinner are sat at home worrying themselves silly over what music and clubs it's alright to like this week.

To slag off the punters at certain clubs as "suburban morons" is to be guilty of the kind of snobbery you'd expect from the Tories he purports to condemn.

Clubbers at places like Strawberry Sundae, Peach and Freedom are real people who choose to drive miles to spend their hard-earned money dancing to music which they are just as passionate and knowledgeable about as those people who have the arrogance to tell us what is or is not house music.

House music has never been restricted to any narrow definitions. As the song says, "house is a feeling". And that's something Mr Skinner will quite clearly never be able to understand.

ANDY HALL, High Wycombe

WIRED UP AND PISSED OFF

QUITE why you used over 10 column inches of the already tiny Wired Up section to justify yourself because of some criticism from the UK-Dance mailing list (Muzik, 27) confuses me, especially as the vast majority of your readers have no contact with UK-Dance.

You seem surprised that the list reacts when exposed to the mass media (you), yet are hyper-sensitive when the list has a go at certain journos who should have developed thicker skins by now. Surely you've heard all these criticisms before? Why waste so much space on them? You didn't even print the list's Internet address so that anyone interested could check it out for themselves.

I don't think people are saying you shouldn't cover lists like UK-Dance. I suspect many of us are flattered that you feel we're that important. Certainly, I'm more than happy for more people to know about, read and even contribute to what is one of the more lively music lists.

However, having a go at us from your privileged position in a widely distributed monthly magazine, without attempting to talk to the list in the obvious way (like, writing to it) is just plain rude. And the assumption that we're all academics or students is just a lazy generalisation which does you few favours.

PHIL, via e-mail

SCORN IN THE USA

WHILE innocently reading your article about Erykah Badu (Muzik, 26), I stumbled across a typically uninformed piece of journalism implying that the USA and its media are bigoted because rappers have been "discredited and labelled racists."

The examples in the article are faulty and no comparisons can be drawn between them. The media in America would not dream of criticising black artists due to political correctness. The Fugees, however, have not merely "voiced their pride in their race, revealing their pro-black politics", but said they would rather kill their grandmother than have a white person ever appear in their videos. If this is not a case of reverse racism, I would like to know what is.

Also, if you bothered to listen to the lyrics of Bruce Springsteen's "Born In The USA", you'll find he is singing about growing up in a working-class town and is critical of nationalism.

Of course, race relations are a problem in the United States, as they are anywhere in the world but isn't Muzik supposed to be a magazine dedicated to music, not politics? I hate to see cliches piled upon political ignorance and the results to be read as truths. MARION SCHNELLE, Oslo

ECSTASY GENERATION LIVES

THE Barry Legg Bill may well present a number of problems for clubland as we know it. In my opinion there is no way it will spell the end of the "Ecstasy Generation" (Muzik 27) any more than the past targeting of other drug cultures by the police and legal system has.

Prohibition didn't stop Americans drinking alcohol, nor did banning marijuana in the early 1900s stop them smoking weed. Drugs have been illegal for decades but still their usage and availability is on the increase. For example, the availability of quality grass has greatly increased over the last few years. Although things took a dive when the authorities first wised up to the presence of Ecstasy, the quantity and quality of the drug is on the rise once again. Whenever the law or its methods of enforcement change, a new way is always found to get around it.

The legislation proposed by Mr Legg won't make the slightest bit of difference to people's drug intake. All the new legislation will do is to push E culture back into unsafe venues where there are no first-aid facilities. At the end of the day, deaths from E, most of which are still heat-related, will rise.

Any government which was really concerned about the well-being of its citizens rather than just winning votes from a general public stirred up by media hysteria would legalise or decriminalise Ecstasy to make its inevitable use as safe as possible.

Eculture will not die, but because of this bill, more clubbers will. Barry Legg should examine his conscience because he is as much of a killer as any dodgy pill. MIKE, Sheffield

THE WYNNER TAKES IT ALL

THANKS to Muzik for your interview with D Wynn (Muzik 25) because I'd never heard of him before. To get to see him play a brilliant set at Tribal Gathering this year really made it for me.

But I have to disagree with the letter from Hterag Son Of Jack concerning Kraftwerk (Muzik 27). Kraftwerk are Kraftwerk. They've done it all, and they did it all first, well before Juan and Derrick started playing around with electronics. You only had to listen to that new track they previewed in their set at Tribal Gathering to see they will never sound any different.

On a different note, can I just say that I:Cube's "Picnic Attack" is probably one of the most beautiful albums I've ever heard. It thoroughly deserves the 10 out of 10 you gave it.

ALEX WILLIAMS, Cornwall

A BIGOT WRITES

SO the happy hardcore ravers have nowhere left to go in Scotland (Muzik 27). Hooray and Hallelujah. Leave them to hang round street corners, jagging up smack, drinking Buckfast and stabbing each other - it's what schemies are good at. Who really gives a shit about them? Scotland is a better place without raves. They should've died in 1992 anyway. Me and my pals have written to Edinburgh Council requesting that mental Dutch gabbers shouldn't be allowed to take over our country. So tell your rave readers in Scotland there isn't a hope in hell of them getting another rave here.

THE ANTI-RAVE SOCIETY, Scotland

BERLIN BUMMER

I'VE just returned from the Love Parade in Berlin and felt the need to comment. We were on the MFS/E-Werk float, heading up the avenue as Paul Van Dyk played pure pumping bliss. I was in awe of the sheer amount of people. With the great vibes, you couldn't help but smile, and circling around the monument was simply breathtaking.

But that's when it all went horribly wrong. The speech in German by the promoter was pointless to say the least. But the thing that puzzled us the most was when Mark Spoon went on to play what can only be described as a death vibe set. Shining moods turned sour. When Carl Cox came on, we thought we were saved. Were we fuck!

You would have thought that playing to a million people at an event as special as this, you would at least practise and buy some new records to take these people on an amazing trip. Most of the people around me were just standing there in bewilderment. How did these guys get

So, it's Carl Cox and Mark Spoon for Those Who Lost It (in a very big way) and the MFS/E-Werk float, BT, Paul Van Dyk, Sasha and John Digweed for Those Who Completely Rocked It.

LYSA & GUY OLDHAMS, Bolton

CREAM TAKE

I AM writing in reference to Cream's nominations for this year's SAS Awards (Muzik 27). So they are the "only club taking risks and setting standards" are they? I wouldn't say having a club with three rooms of house music is taking much of a risk, it's more like elevating playing safe to Olympian standards. Neither could you describe replacing the excellent Rocky, Diesel and Ashley Beedle with Nick Warren as risky. Then again, he is signed to deConstruction, and we all know the inextricable links between the two companies don't we?

Are we to take it that the Cream boys are now sufficiently sick of the "bugle" that they have decided to just blow their own trumpet these days?

KARL HOOPER, Liverpool

NOT SO KOOL FM

I HAD the misfortune of listening to the recent Kool FM compilation. It's disgusting to see the good name of the station dragged through the dirt with such a crap effort. There's not a decent track to alleviate the boredom. It was totally soul-destroying. But then things went from bad to worse with MC Inane and his pal MC Muppet rabbiting all the way through the second record. Maybe the pseudo-junglists at Breakdown Records should have a long think about their choice of career.

KEVIN O'RIORDAN, via e-mail

OFF "ONE IN THE JUNGLE"

I STOPPED listening to Radio One's "One In The Jungle" six months ago because I was pissed off with the monotonous, unimaginative basslines, garden-variety beats and the talentless, unbelievably annoying, thoroughly pretentious rantings of the DJ.

Six months on, I decided to give the show a second chance and, Lordy me. it's exactly the same!

Maybe I'm "hangin'" with the wrong "crew". Or maybe it's because I haven't got "E-nuff respeck" for the "scene". But just which scene are they trying to represent? One generally located in London and populated by miserable looking blokes in puffa jackets who wish they were in New York?

What could and should be a showcase for some of the most innovative, exciting music of our generation is squandered by some myopic wanker with a record collection which is as flat as fuck. Thank God for John Peel.

LEO GIBSON, Newcastle

A QUIP

SO Daniel Ross says that Reclaim The Streets are all about "protesting about society's car culture" (Muzik 26) does he? Funny how I didn't see them pushing their sound system into Trafalgar Square on a supermarket trolley.

DAVID, Bradford via e-mail

PRODDING THE PRODGE

ISN'T the new Prodigy album a corker? Isn't it going to be one of the great "Top Of The Pops" moments of all-time if they do "Diesel Power" with Kool Keith? And aren't they going to be on just about every magazine cover for the next couple of months?

But I have a few more questions... What is Nazi apologist Crispian Mills doing on their record? Is that a quote from fat bastard and mass murderer, Herman Goering, on the artwork? Can we expect more "We don't give a fuck about politics" quotes from Liam & co in interviews? Answers please, boys, and make it fucking sharpish.

PABLO MONEY, south London

THEY ARE NOT AMUSED...

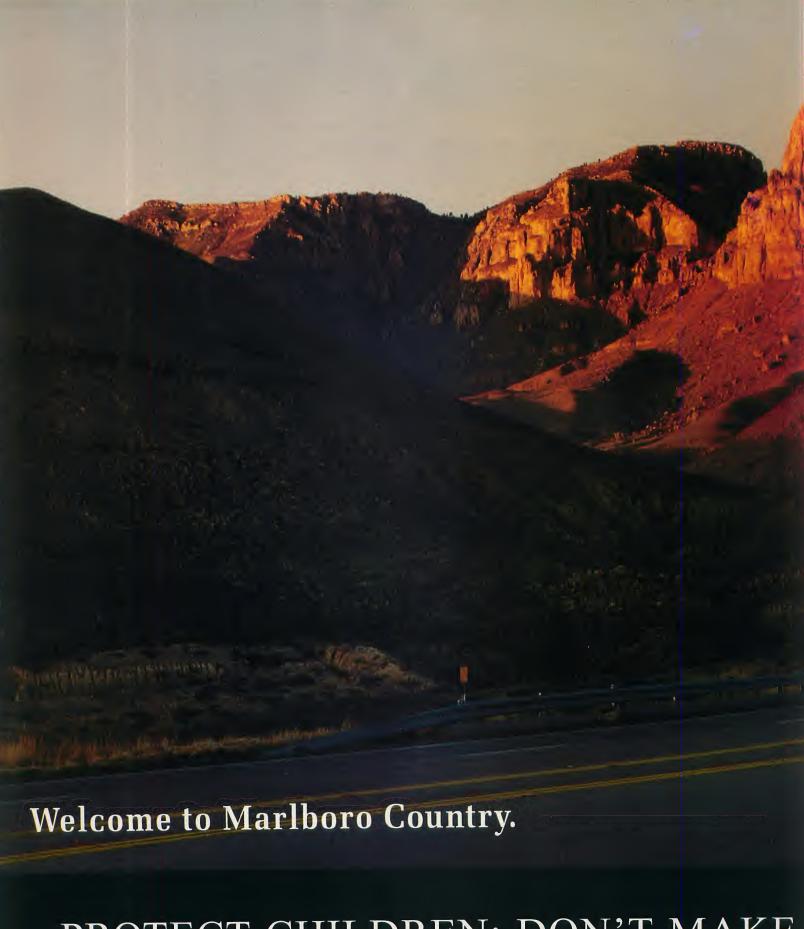

IF Source Direct (Muzik 27) have got their own label, a five-album deal with Science, a pair of BMWs and are vanguards of "the new generation", then why don't they cheer up a bit? Gloomy sods. VINCE BRYSON. Runcorn

SPEED GARAGE -- THE SOUND OF IBIZA '97 (MIXED BY SPOONY) Featuring Double 99, T.J.R. Featuring Xavier, Gant and all the summer anthems

Featuring Underworld, The Chemical Brothers, David Holmes, Armand Van Helden, Perfecto and Fatboy Slim

O Christmas is still many moons away, our wallets are emptier than a desert wadi after a heatwave and our heads are throbbing like every single person at the SAS awards ceremony personally performed the dance of the whirling dervishes on our craniums wearing steel-heeled platforms. And in spite of it all, we've dragged ourselves from our customary summer slumber to provide you with Muzik's first-ever free CD. That's free as in costing you nish. A veritable cornucopia of club pleasures it is too, a double-headed beast of bass-riding monsters and exceedingly tasty exclusives.

First up, you get our rough guide to the latest sound to conquer Ibiza, the UK and dancefloors worldwide - speed garage. You've read about it everywhere, you've scratched your head in bafflement, but now, at last, here's your chance to discover what it's all about.

And if you're not suffering cardiac tremblings from all that freebie greatness, then feel the earth move like a Tonka truck mow-down when you get to the second part - a selection of tracks from some of the winners at last month's SAS awards.

All in all, it's quite probably the best freebie dance CD in the whole world. Ever. Enjoy.

Part One: Speed Garage – The Sound Of Ibiza '97 (Mixed by Spoony)

THE first 35 minutes of our "Best Of Dance" CD is devoted to the speed garage phenomenon which is sweeping UK clubland. What began as an underground Sunday scene in the capital, some three years ago, is now the new Saturday Night Fever in nightclubs from Ibiza to Manchester. With its dark, rumbling jungle basslines and traditional 4/4 beat, many believed that this music wouldn't take off but in reality, it's the marriage the dance world has been waiting for. And if you're still not convinced, check DJ stalwart Spoony's short but deadly mix (exclusive to Muzik) which features some of the finest cuts from the last eight months. It includes the Judy Cheeks instrumental bootleg complete with jungle rewinds and bullet shots, as well as the massive T.J.R. featuring Xavier which features leading producers, Matt "Jam" Lamont and Karl "Tuff Enuff" Brown at the helm. From the legendary chart-smashing Double 99 which has single-handedly defined a genre to the stillunsigned New Horizons on the superb 500 Rekords imprint, it's all here. Then there's Spoony mixing two copies of 4 Deep Connexion, as well as A Baffled Republic and the awesome bassline on Julian Jonah's remix of Boris D'lugosh. If you've been to Ibiza this year, you'll know what we're talking about. Welcome to the summer

DJ SPOONY from the Dream Team collective on his exclusive Muzik mix:

"IT'S from the heart. It is exactly how I would play in a club. Muzik's selection was bang on, it reflects the harder stuff with Judy Cheeks to the more soulful material from New Horizons and Gant. I really believe that in the next two years the music that we're playing will end up being recognised in the SAS Awards as we're now starting to play in the very same clubs which are winning at the moment.

Speed garage will be an institution in its own right by then. Yes, Ibiza this year was wicked. I was amazed at the knowledge of some of the kids out there. It's a great place to see how far speed garage will go because there are all walks of life out there. I'll be back in Ibiza in September for a Lords Of The Underground party. Can I also say big shouts out to Timmi Magic and Mikee B, my partners in the Dream Team. Enjoy the mix!"

PEED GARAGE – THE SOUND OF IBIZA 7 (Mixed by Spoony)

JUDY CHEEKS - "Reach And Spin (Dub)" T.J.R. FEATURING XAVIER - "Just Get's Better"

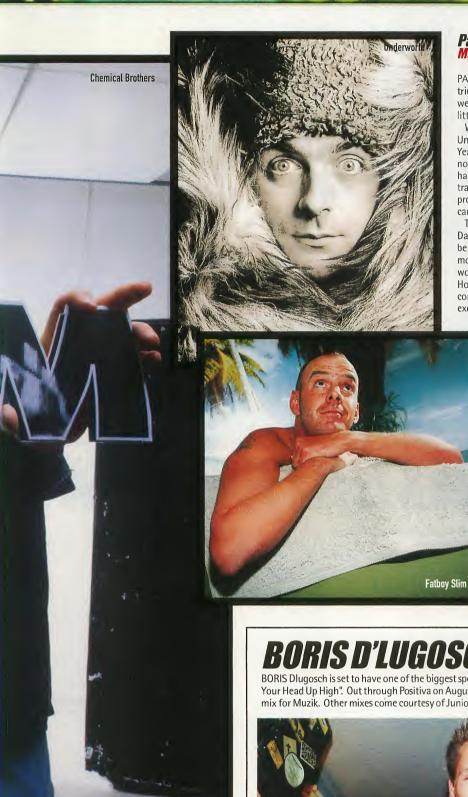

DOUBLE 99 - "Rip Groove"

NEW HORIZONS - "Find The Path (In

4 DEEP CONNEXTION - "Twisted Future" A BAFFLED REPUBLIC - "Bad Boys"

GANT - "All Night Long"

BORIS D'LUGOSH - "Hold Your Head Up High (Julian Jonah Mix)"

Part Two:Muzik SAS Dance Awards – The Winners

PART two of our dance CD concentrates on some of the winners who triumphed at the glittering SAS awards ceremony last month. Okay, so we couldn't invite each and every one of you, but hey, how's about this little peace offering until our Wembley Stadium bash next year?

We got exclusives, golden oldies and soon-to-be-massives. First up is Underworld. Now, yes, we know that "Born Slippy" won Single Of The Year, but if you haven't heard it by now, you're must be a wandering nomad of the Gobi desert suffering from some sort of ear condition. So hark ve back to the classic "Cowgirl" instead. Next up is an exclusive track from sarf London DJ Terry Francis, winner of Best New British DJ, proving that not only can he mix up deep techno into a whirly storm, he can produce it too. Creamy, sir.

Then, we're straight into the Northern Irish soul world of Belfast's David Holmes, winner of the Best "Essential Mix" award. "Freaknik" will be on his new album, "Let's Get Killed", but you're hearing it at least a month before the masses. The Chemical Brothers rocked everyone's world in 1997, stormed America, rifled the charts with "Dig Your Own Hole" and from that album comes "Piku". One listen and how could you conceive of arguing they weren't Best Band this last year? Three more exclusives take us down the home stretch. From our winner of Best Remixer (and the man who turned Tori Amos into a simpering sex siren) Armand Van Helden, "Daaboodaa Munks". From Brighton's Skint label, winner of Best Independent Label, Fatboy Slim takes a scalpel to "Everybody Loves A 303" before whirling it round an orgasmatron and renaming it "Everybody Loves A Filter". And finally, to represent the sound of Best British DJ, Paul Oakenfold, who could ask for a greater slice of trance heaven than this exclusive LSG remix of those Aberdeen hypno-Gods Transa's "Prophase"?

SAS? Simply Amazing Sonny.

UNDERWORLD - "Cowgirl"

TERRY FRANCIS - "Furry" (exclusive)

DAVID HOLMES - "Freaknik" (unreleased)

ARMAND VAN HELDEN -"Daaboodaa Munks" (unreleased)

FATBOY SLIM – "Everybody Loves A Filter" (unreleased) TRANSA - "Prophase (L.S.G. Remix)" (unreleased)

Boris d'Lugosch Hits big time

IBIZA'97-BETTER THAN EVER

T's four years now since I was one of the first journalists to slag off Ibiza, when an otherwise superb holiday was marred by some of the poorest DJing and music I've ever heard. For the next three years, coating off Ibiza became the thing to do. And it bloody-well deserved it. But now we're being forced to eat our words. And I'm glad because Ibiza is once again the inspiring place it used to be. A place where your dreams are realised (albeit temporarily) by hearing emotive music, meeting wonderful people and generally bringing back some unity to club culture. In 1997, it is also a hotbed for new, young clubbers who, in years to come, will keep dance music alive.

The new Ibiza crowd may not want challenging variations of dance music, but the fact they're choosing to come here after all this time proves Ibiza will never die. Ibiza is still as critical to dance music as Pete Tong, Ecstasy and turntables. It is a breeding ground for people who have their first clubbing experiences at Es Paradis or Amnesia and may, as a result, never imagine life without clubbing again. And quite frankly, they are exactly the kind of people who probably deserve more of our time and attention than the now jaded first generation of clubbers. Let's not forget that we are here to push amazing music while having a good time. And if you can't do that in Ibiza, then you can't do it anywhere.

The beauty of Ibiza is still the sheer diversity of what you can get up to. A musical soundtrack is available everywhere you go. From the sunset vibes of the new Savannah bar, Mambo and Cafe Del Mar, to speed garage at Es Paradis with Garage City on Sundays, to Dave Seaman at Cream at Amnesia and then Deep Dish and Sven Vath on the European nights. Visiting Pacha for its breathtaking Funky Room is where the true Balaeric spirit still thrives. If you're really brave, you'll check out some of the outdoor parties on hill tops (hang out with Oakenfold or Paul Daley to find them) or you'll storm through the West End just to see that there is no difference in the records being played there and those being played by Ibiza residents like Jason Bye. On a recent trip through the West End, we heard a set of the most upfront speed garage. Surely a sign of the times.

As for the British nights, well, some of them are still here. Miss Moneypenny's are struggling at El Devino but respect to them for trying somewhere different. Manumission are obviously ramming Privelege, while Ministry Of Sound's night at Pacha is a huge favourite but much of this is due to the venue's general appeal. Renaissance are slowly sorting Pacha out on Wednesdays and Cream are having it right off at Amnesia on Thursdays. But this year there are no big British nights on Saturdays, which means this is the night to check out some of the Spanish-promoted events. We stumbled onto Sergio's La Luna night at Amnesia on a recent Saturday and found Sven Vath playing to a 3,000 crowd which included around 500 Brits. For me, that was perfect Ibizan clubbing. Sven Vath was on the podiums with the dancers, he was opening bottles of champagne and passing them down to clubbers and he even had the Prince Of Arabia dancing in the VIP lounge!

Back in San Antonio, A Clockwork Orange are always packed, again with a crowd who will develop into serious clubland devotees. And for a real laugh, watch out for the DJ line-up at Exstasis where the likes of Mickey Finn can be found rocking the joint to a clueless crowd. Ignorant Ibizaphobes always sound shocked when they hear that Finn, Fabio and Grooverider play here, but they've been doing it for years. Like everyone else, they love the inspired environment, the hedonistic attitude and, of course, the weather. The freedom in DJing, once spoken about so passionately by 808 State on the classic Ibiza TV programme, "A Short Film About Chilling", may no longer be here, but when dance music is going through the change in clientele that it currently is, you can't expect much else.

In the five years I've been going to Ibiza, I can safely say this is the best time I've ever had on the island. The British promoters who give clubland a bad name have retreated to their Ritzy homes, the jaded clubbers have finally thrown in the towel and got married, and everyone else is having the time of their life. If there is anybody left in Britain who has yet to experience lbiza, do so now. Go there and treat this as Year Zero for dance music because, let's face it, for around 30,000 new clubbers in lbiza, that is exactly what it is.

words Ben Turner

★ One of the highlights of the Ibiza season looks like being the return of Jose Padilla's Cafe Del Mar/Moondance events.

GREAT IBIZA '97 MOMENTS

★ Hearing speed garage all over the island. The soundtrack for Ibiza 97.

★ Phat Phil Cooper for climbing up a tree at Amnesia and then falling out of it.

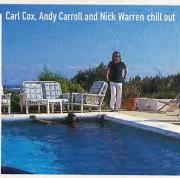

★ Sven Vath making the Prince Of Arabia dance to Hardfloor's "Acperience".

 \bigstar Being off it at the New Star Bar and meeting people with no teeth. NO!

★ The fire at Manumission. We'll talk about witnessing it for years to come.

Ihiza 1997 the tunes of your holiday

1 NALIN & KANE - "Beach Ball" (Hooj Choons/ffrr) The Ibiza anthem of 1997 picks up where BBE left off, albeit a slower, more melancholic version. As big in San Antonio's West End as it is in Ku, this is the record which will get you thinking of all those new friends you made while completely off your head in the greatest nightclubs in the world. Class.

2 THE HEARTISTS - "Belo Horizonte" (VC)

Capturing the spirit of Pacha, Caludio Coccoluto comes up trumps with a blatant rework of Airto's "Flora De Samba", the original of which is played at Bar M every night.

3 BRIAN TRANSEAU - "Flaming June" (east west)

Hearing Dave Seaman drop this in Amnesia as 3,000 people were "coming up" was an experience we will never forget. Exactly what this record was made for.

4 TODD TERRY - "Something Goin' On" (Manifesto)

Most played record in 1997, this is a vital DJ tool to pick up a new generation who find it hard to stay awake after 7am. "Feeling good in every way. Hey, Hey...

5 TAKADA – "Ola-Le (Ashley Beedle's Sun Barrio Break Mix)" (Disorient)

A surprise hit but when that bassline bleeds, the girls just get those hips swinging. Massive at Mambo and Savannah and also a beautiful sunrise anthem to boot.

ON MILLER has opened a new etroit's A club in the city. Gruvshack is an intimate 150-capacity juice bar with Miller himself DJing on Fridays and Korey on Saturdays. Miller's also starting a new label, Luna Recordings. First release comes from Ubiquity, apparently "very beautiful house music, very sexy, just the way you like it!" ... Just in case last month's news story had you wondering about the future of Milton Keynes' TH ICTUARY, rest assured. The top spot venue have had their public entertainment license renewed for another year without any material alterations after glowing reports from the local council and police... GILLES PETERSON and NORMAN JAY are mixing the next in the excellent "Journeys By DJ" series. We've seen the intended track-listing and believe us, it's a beauty... THE STARSEEDS, this year's answer to the much-missed One Dove, finally get round to releasing their apparently well lush debut album "Parallel Life" next month... Apologies to IKE KNOWLER, the main resident DJ at the old Quadrant Park in Liverpool, for getting his name wrong in the last issue... FABIQ PARAS, the man who once made sitars and house music sound unfeasibly good together, returns with a new Soundclash Republic single this month. "Sixty Pounds Don't Get You High" is out on Duality on September 15... Once you've recovered from our own SAS awards, mark out November 10 in your calendar. That's the date for the MUSIC OF BLACK ORIGIN AWARDS, with categories covering everything from reggae and hip hop to jungle and gospel. Nominations to come soon... Liverpool's 3 BEAT have started a new label. Glow is dedicated to house and prog trance. First single, Coloured Oxygen's "Global House" is out now... Smooth jazz-jungle types EARL GREY release their debut album "Purveyors Of The New Groove" on Coxy's Worldwide Ultimatum label next month... KRIS FDS has teamed up with the only person in the world who's a bigger caner than he is -INE WELSH - to start a new record label, Bubbles. The pair are also recording together as Hibee-Nation, in tribute to Welsh's Edinburgh footie team... TEKNOTIKA's excellent "Seductive Sounds" is out now on Eye Q and not Warners as we said... Newcastle's top record shop, TRAX, has changed its name to FLYING, adding to the growing Flying empire. Numbers and address stay the same... Seen loads of adverts around for the Masters At Work-mixed album? Wondered why the hell you can't buy it yet? That's because its release has been put back to September... JAY-7, responsible for what Westwood called "the best hip hop album in the last three years" is playing the Radio One stage at the Notting Hill Carnival on Monday, August 25... If you're wondering who's done the vocals on SLACKER's "Your Face", it's Joanna Law and not (as many, including us, thought)

GOLDIE TEAMS UP WITH BOWIE

OLDIE has recorded a track with ageing rock star cum reinvented junglist, David Bowie. The result is apparently a Fifties-style ballad. It follows Bowie's conversion to jungle which led to his "Earthling" album and a surprise performance in the dance tent at the Phoenix Festival.

"When Bowie asked me if he could be on my album, I said 'okay' and wrote a tune for him," said Goldie. "It's a remarkable piece of music. It's what he should have been doing on 'Earthling' instead of playing the jungle man.'

Provisionally titled "Saturnz Return", Goldie's new album is due for release in October. As well as the Bowie track, the album features a link-up with KRS-One called "Digital" which is scheduled for release as the first single with an Armand Van Helden remix. Noel Gallagher crops up playing guitar on "Temper Temper", for which Goldie himself provides the vocals, while "Letter Of Faith" is a ballad with former flame, Björk. "Dragonfly" is a Latin-style track with Cleveland Watkiss, while the opening track, "Mother", features a 40-piece orchestra and runs for over an hour. Other tracks include "Believe", a soul track with "Timeless" vocalist Diane Charlemagne, "Fury", which was recorded three years ago with Moving Shadow's Rob Playford and "The Art Of Walking Demons", which is two separate tunes with the same bassline.

"It's silly long" replied Goldie when asked just how long the album would be. "It's like a triple album."

How did it compare with his debut album, "Timeless"? "It's a fuck of a lot deeper. 'Timeless' is still a blinding album, but this one is in different class."

★ Goldie has also talked Metalheadz quitting their successful Saturday night at London's Leisure Lounge. He blames the venue's management for failing to implement changes that Metalheadz had requested, as well as a lack of patience when numbers began to fall due to student summer holidays.

"I was always saying we needed to make a few changes. I was even prepared to pay half the money to do things like moving the DJ booth, but they never happened. Then they said they weren't happy with the numbers. They fell from our average of 1,200 to around 1,000. The very lowest was about 640. But it wasn't as if the place was fucking dying."

Goldie also alleges that the club "decided to call all the DJ agencies and host a drum & bass night the next Saturday. It's the usual fucking scenario of greedy fucking clubs." Metalheadz are still looking for a new venue for a new weekly Saturday night. In the meantime, they've announced that they will soon be starting a monthly Friday night session at The Hanover Grand in central London.

Size for the Mercury Prize

REPRAZENT, the Bristol jungle collective headed up by Roni Size, have been nominated for the prestigious Mercury Music Prize for their ground-breaking Talkin' Loud album, "New Forms". While the odds on Reprazent winning the prize are currently quoted at 16/1, the inclusion of the album is seen as long overdue recognition of the cultural phenomenon of drum & bass. The judging panel even described drum & bass as "the new jazz Speaking to Muzik, Roni added: "I'm a bit taken aback really. I've never even been to an awards ceremony. I hope this changes the way they look at the whole of dance music. It's taken a long time for dance music, especially drum & bass, to be taken seriously." Other nominees include The Prodigy for "Fat Of The Land" (the current favourites), Primal Scream for "Vanishing Point" and The Chemical Brothers for "Dig Your Own Hole". The winner will be announced on Thursday, August 28.

VIRGIN SIGN GOD

GOD has signed to Virgin. Or at least top London garage and house producer Grant Nelson has. Owner of the Swing City and Nice 'N' Ripe labels, Nelson is perhaps most famous for his Todd Terry-derivative G.O.D. bootlegs, with the third in the series currently tearing up speed garage venues. According to Virgin

A&R man, Andy Thompson, Nelson will continue to do his own projects on his own labels, while Virgin will aim for "the kind of production values that records on bigger labels have to have.

Nelson has already begun work on his first single for Virgin with a new vocalist. It's scheduled for an autumn release.

ROAD-SIDE DRUG TESTS ON THE WAY

IGURES released by the Department Of Transport show that illegal drug-taking has risen by 400 per cent in the past 10 years among people involved in road accidents. Cannabis figured in 60 per cent of incidents where illegal drugs were detected and the cases largely involved people aged between 20 and 30. According to the DOT study, drug-taking figured more times than alcohol in a sample of 301 road accident fatalities since October 1996. Of the fatalities, 66 were over the alcohol limit compared to 69 who were found to have taken drugs. Of the 50 cases that involved illicit drugs (as opposed to medicinal substances), 30 revealed cannabis use. There were no cases involving cocaine or LSD and "very little evidence of Ecstasy".

Baroness Hyman, the Roads Minister, confirmed that the Association of Police Officers was examining drug enforcement measures in other countries and was currently considering how on-the spot testing instruments could be developed to make it easier for officers to detect signs of drug impairment. In the light of this survey, the Government is likely to consider a highprofile "anti drugs and driving" advertising campaign if this preliminary trend is confirmed."

However, there are already problems with road-side testing. Unlike alcohol, cannabis can stay in the bloodstream for up to four weeks yet its affect on driving is limited to 24 hours. In addition, devices would have to be developed to detect a huge range of illegal substances including cannabis, amphetamines, LSD and Ecstasy. Paul Manning, the traffic committee secretary of the Association of Police Officers commented that "These early indicators show that the police service will need to look more actively for signs of drug use and not just alcohol when dealing with drivers."

TECHNO BULLOCKS??

DAVE CLARKE was involved in a bizarre incident which nearly claimed his life last month when a photo shoot for his latest single, "Shake Your Booty", was stampeded by a herd of bulls!

Clarke was having his photo taken near to his country house by Muzik photographer Hamish Brown when the incident occurred.

"There was a huge herd of cattle in the field" said a rather shaken Brown. "Dave turned round to us and said, 'If I say 'Run', run!". We asked him why and he told us some woman had been trampled to death in a field in the area last vear.'

'Halfway across the field, Dave suddenly shouted 'Run!' We turned around and all we could see was these bulls coming straight at us. It was like that scene in 'Jurassic Park' with the stampeding dinosaurs. Fucking terrifying."

The group, including Brown's assistant, made it to the next field, dropping camera equipment and film rolls in the process. After nearly an hour of hiding, Clarke went into "stalker mode" to coax the cattle to the other end of the field so the gear to be reclaimed successfully.

Dave Clarke added: "I just thought it was really funny because I was dying for a pee, so I was running crosslegged. I was wearing a black shirt at the time, so they probably just thought I was a big black and white cow." ★ Dave Clarke is currently in the studio with Yvette Michele who was the first female R&B signing to Loud. She releases her own album on September 8. It has been produced by Funkmaster Flex.

NEW PLAID ALBUM

PLAID, the electronic pioneers who formerly made up two-thirds of The Black Dog, have announced details of their first album since their seminal 1991 debut, "Mbuka Mvuka".

A single, "Undoneson", will be released in September, followed by the album, "Not For Threes" in October. The band's Ed and Andy have spent much of the last two years as part of Björk's backing band, so it's no surprise that the Icelandic one performs vocals on the album track, "Extork". Nicolette also contributes vocals to a track called, "75% Water". The album also includes a new vocalist, Mara Carlyle.

"It's still heavily electronic" commented Andy, "But all those other elements have kind of blended in. The title refers to the extension number used in hospitals to dial the cardiac arrest team. I guess it means that if we crash, we don't really want to be resuscitated!" ★ The Black Dog, now consisting of sole remaining member Ken Dowie, have parted ways with Warp. There are reports that Dowie has been collaborating with William Burroughs, the Sixties beat author.

WITH

CACHA'C CICTED

The prog house president's sis apparently resides in LA now, which is how she came to bump into NY DJ Keoki. For some reason, Keoki let fly with a barrage of offensive remarks about her bro! In reply, she poured her drink over him. And, when he poured his back over her, she simply threw her glass at his head.

MAMBO BAR IN IBIZA

So Jeremy Healy walks into the Mambo Bar and asks for a drink. When asked to pay for it, he pulls the old, "Don't you know who I am?" stunt. To which the barman replies, "I know exactly who you are and you probably earn more money than everyone else in this bar put together. That's 1,000 pesetas please."

PRIEST AT DARREN HUGHES' WEDDING

Dance music's wedding of the year, and what's the cloth-man talking about? About how Cream has similar qualities to the church and how, when he went down, it "enlightened" his mind! Hmmm...

NICKI LAUDER

The ex-Formula One world champion was spotted in the funky room at the Ministry's night at Pascha having it and then some, to a cool deep house set. Oh, and then leaving the club without settling his £80 bar bill.

GEMINI

Playing at Brixton's Dogstar recently, the great Chihouse man sank innumerable Jack & cokes, blew up the sound system, continued to spin with the sound booming out on, erm, the monitors, and then moved upstairs to spin a rather top funk set as well.

JOHN KELLY

A fire at Manumission's Ku party caused chaos with 9,000 people panicking like mad. But quick-thinking Kelly saved the day, switching on his mic and calming everyone down with his soothing Scouse tones, asking them not to panic. Honourary fire-hoses all-round.

BANDULU

So there we were about to slate them for their no-show at T in The Park's Slam/Muzik tent when we discovered they'd got caught up in the recent riots in Spain.

Rumours that Lucien was spotted at the front, shouting, "C'mon Senor, let's ave yer paella-face for poonshin'" cannot be confirmed.

A CERTAIN MUZIK JOURNO

There he was, at the Phoenix festival, stranded without the aid of artificial stimulants. Desperate measures beckoned and he strode into the cinema tent, waited until the quietest moment, then screamed, "Has anyone got any fucking drugs?". No less than 10 people rushed up to him!!

THE PRODIGY

For doing what Oasis couldn't – crashing straight into the American charts at Number One with "Fat Of The Land". And for doing the same in every territory in the world except for, bizarrely, France. And for selling three million copies of the cracking album in one week. Charly says, wow, that's a lotta dosh.

PHAT I

PHAT PHIL COOPER

The notorious Mr Cooper climbed up a tree on the Amnesia terrace in Ibiza, only to inevitably come crashing back down, landing on a table full of bottles and glasses. Both arms streaming with blood, he then carried on dancing before finally removing his shorts in front of the entire dancefloor.

SWI

The American r&b trio are getting a bit uppity these days, apparently. Seems like they cancelled their video shoot because one of them didn't have the correct nail varnish with her. Sisters Without Varnish, it is then.

FRIC MORILLO

Some of you may already know that the NY DJ is teaming up with Sneak, Armand, Sanchez etc as a loose coalition. Their first choice of name? The Mongoloids. When told what it meant in Britain and that it might not go down too well, Morillo came up with the bright idea of changing it to The Mongs. Oh boy...

PHIL PERRY

Down at Bristol's Lakota, Billy Nasty had worked the crowd into a frenzy. Our Phil was due on next, and whoops... Somehow the Full Circle man managed to remove Nasty's final tune just as it was coming to an excruciating climax, bringing the entire club to an embarrassing temporary halt.

KIERAN FROM ATLAS

The man behind the counter at London's coolest nu jazz record store and sometime Bushflange artist, got a little carried away at Gilles Peterson's house after UFO's storming club night. He was found the next afternoon, slumbering quietly under a bush in Peterson's garden.

ANNIE NIGHTINGALE

Like a cooler older sister she might be, but that doesn't excuse La Nightingale's excruciating patter from Glastonbury, loaded with inane drug puns. "Coming up... For those of you who ARE coming up" and "No pills, but plenty thrills" were just two painful examples. She'll be saying "Top banana" next.

ARMAND VAN HELDEN

Let the backlash begin. His two sets in one night (at Glastonbury and Cream) saw him kill the vibe which Paul Bleasdale had splendidly built up. But then, if you DJ and never once look up from under your baseball cap to see if the floor's rocking, maybe that means you just don't care.

NICKY HOLLOWAY

Holloway demanded a lift back from a London label boss' wedding, then insisted on being dropped off in the middle of the countryside cos he was so scared of the driving. He walked for two-and-a-half hours before being picked up by the police who took him back to his hotel. Where he stayed for a week. On his own.

MINISTRY OF SOUND

Not being ones to indulge in mocking our potential rivals, but we couldn't fail to notice that the new editor of the forthcoming Ministry Of Sound magazine comes straight from that hotbed of new talent, underground techno nutology and dance music nous, erm, "TV Hits".

ACITIO

For making life hell for our poor lamb of a techno man, Dave Mothersole, on his recent visit to the Isle Of Wight. Antics included storming Carisbrook Castle without paying, clambering over the castle walls chased by National Trust parkies, abusing passing tourists and ridiculing anyone riding on a donkey!

Hey you!! Rat on a DJ. Grass up a misbehaving celebrity. If you've got a good bit of goss, then you're a person after our own hearts and we will clutch you to our bosoms. Because we need YOUR nominations for Saints And Sinners. All contributions accepted. The juicier the better. Just jot down the story and send it to us at "Saints And Sinners" at the usual address.

SAS Awards Ballantines

CARNAGE Absolute carnage with knobs on. And that's just the aquatic scene in the overflowing men's loos before 1997's SAS Awards ceremony at the Victoria Rooms in Bristol has even started.

That's to say nothing of Goldie and Brandon Block gurning and rave dancing (circa July 1989-stylee) to Acid Brass, as the big band rockets through such classics as 808 State's "Pacific State" and KLF's "What Time Is Love?". Or, for that matter, of the waiter who asks each and every celebrity guest he serves if they could, like, serve him, too. "Have you got any drugs to spare?" he enquires. "Just an Eor something, that's all?"

And so, with the bash resembling a formal dinner occasion remixed into something like a children's tea party, a riotously drunk Christmas office do and a Bacchanalian excess-fest, we're off. We are ready to holler rude comments (only joking, mind) at award presenters like former EastEnder Danniella Westbrook and "Girlie Show", um, girlie, Sara Cox. We are ready to whoop loudly as deserved winner after deserved winner mumble insane things into the mic as they accept their smiley awards.

Additionally, we are ready to wonder what exactly the fuck is going on as Armand Van Helden, who can't be here to collect his Best Remixer trophy, appears on the massive TV screen in the form of a puppet who wishes to "Represent, keep it real," and make sure that we're "down with the program". "Teletubbies" has nothing on this.

Among the crazy goings on, there is also mutual admiration aplenty, with the dance music scene proving that, in the stupendously wise words of Sister Sledge, "We are family". Or drunk and soppy besht, besht mates, at the very least.

Terry Francis, whose wife. Claire, is mere minutes away from exploding into tears as a result of the excitement brought on by her hubby winning the Best New DJ award, says of The End picking up the prize for Best Club Venue: "They really, really, really fucking deserve it, because they're not playing run of the mill music and they realise that things have got to move on. Mr C and Layo are rightfully over the moon."

"It was great to see Skint win," gushes Orbital's Paul Harnoll. "I did all my early raving down in Brighton. I remember Damien Harris DJing at the Zap, then stopping to interview us for a magazine, then working in a record shop the next day. That kind of enthusiasm's got to pay off in the end."

Continuing the "Ah, sweetness" of proceedings is Underworld's Karl Hyde.
"I'm thrilled that The Chemical Brothers, Orbital and Metalheadz all won something," he exclaims. "It's really positive that we've all got together to celebrate these massive achievements. It feels like it doesn't matter that we're a little annex of the major industry, we're self-perpetuating and always will be. The fact that the industry at large is interested in what we're doing at the moment is almost incidental. Ha! Cos we've got each other."

Lord grumpo-grouch of the evening, on the other hand, is Nicky Holloway. No doubt unable to top last year's display of flabby nakedness (he stripped off at the aftershow party) he instead sits on his own in the bar all through the ceremony. Boo! No, come to think of it, double-boo!

And while we can still remember a little of the evening, let's briefly mention a migraine-suffering Mr C demanding that someone from Muzik nip out to the shops to get him some aspirin before he picked up The End's Best Venue award: the Chemicals walking back to their table with their snowboard prizes for Best Band: David Holmes, winner of the Best "Essential Mix" award, coming up with the toppermost dedication of the evening: "This is dedicated to the guy who does the scratching on my new LP. The only thing I can scratch is me arse"; Brandon Block attempting to kick the video wall down when Caner Of The Year nominees, Liverpool FC, are flashed up on it, Mark Jones speaking live via mobile phone to Mary Anne Hobbs on her Radio One show with the constant droning of a security guard telling him to move along in the background; and, with a fair degree of inevitably, Dave Beer (who appeared to be wearing something akin to a dress) and Derek Dahlarge having, oh yes, a chair fight.

Still, it wasn't all about awards, clapping our palms off and furniture-assisted rucks. No, it was also about following a convoy of several zillion taxis to the seriously palatial Royal Ashton Court Manor and then dancing like certifiable mad things to the rugged jungle laid down by Roni Size's Full Cycle crew in one room, and the swishy state-of-the-art house and techno of Terry Francis and Frankie Knuckles in the other. Or, in the case of one Muzik mag journo, to partake in sexual gymnastics in the nearby woods. Not on his own, by the way.

Come 7am. everyone's 'retired" to the Hilton Hotel to drink Ballantine's whisky, lager, red wine, vodka, revolting mergers of all the aforementioned liquids, smoke themselves stupid with umpteen packets of Lucky Strikes and eat ginormous breakfasts. Claire Francis, meanwhile, is still blubbing madly and bursting into tears at the drop of a hat. Bless.

And then it's all over. All that's left to state is that, even if we do say so ourselves, we have built magnificently on last year's inaugural SAS Awards to make this year's event a towering symbol of dance music's mammoth rise.

Where's Mr C and his aspirins when you need them, eh?

"WE'RE STUNNED! AMAZED! WE NEVER EXPECTED IT!" MUZIK TALKS TO THE WINNERS

BUGGED OUT'S PAUL BENNEY

(Small Club Of The Year)

"For people to put pen to paper and vote for our night out is great. We've got to dedicate this award to all the clubbers and DJs who make Bugged Out so special.

TOM CHEMICAL

"It's a wonderful feeling. We've only ever won awards for our videos before, so this feels great. We're really pleased that Underworld won Best Single for 'Born Slippy' too. It's cool that they came up with a record which sounds as good on daytime radio as it does at six in the morning in a club.

SKINT HEAD HONCHO, DAMIEN HARRIS

(BestIndependentLabet)
"It hasn't really sunk in yet. We're feeling very strange because we didn't expect to win it at all. There are so many other independent labels that make up the British dance scene and just about all of them deserve this award, especially Wall Of Sound. This has been our year but they're bound to have theirs as well. And we have to dedicate our award to Roger Wildchild because remembering him spurs us on. We miss him loads.'

RONI SIZE

(Producer Of The Year)

"I'm happy just to be here and I'm not thinking about the award too much yet. I'm glad that all these people are here in my home town. I feel responsible for them in some way. I want people to go away from Bristol with good things to say about the place."

UNDERWORLD'S KARL HYDE

"It's exciting because we've been in the studio all year. It's exhilarating to see that all these people exist outside of the four walls we've been locked inside and it's nice to be here among people we haven't seen for years. This is a special award to win When you win something among your peers it means so much.

PAUL HARTNOLL FROM ORBITAL

"It's lovely to win something that's voted for by readers. We've been around for seven years and we're glad that, finally, there are all these other dance bands around who can really play live as well. I mean, Daft Punk... they really proved themselves at Tribal Gathering: they were jamming away like troopers. To come here and win an award from a magazine which is dedicated to electronic music is the best feeling in the world. It's the togetherness which is important and tonight is evidence of how far the whole scene has progressed."

WALL OF SOUND'S MARK JONES

(Caper Of The Year)

"Errrrr-urrrgh-mmmmm-hrrrr-brrrrr. We're pleased with the award. It's a team effort and as a member of the squad I feel fucking delighted. In truth, though, it could've gone to anyone of about 75 per cent of the people in this room!

TERRY FRANCIS

(Best New DJ)

"I've stuck to my guns for ages and haven't changed my style or gone more commercial for the sake of it. To have that recognised is wicked. There's a lot of other people involved in the scene I'm on and they all deserve this award too.'

SAS Awards

PETE TONG

"I've got a bad hangover from last night and by the 18th award I was seeing double. Still, I might have a thumping head but the SAS Awards does dance music a brilliant service and I'm getting used to being a compere now... it's like riding a bike, I guess."

BRANDON BLOCK ON RELINQUISHING HIS CANER OF THE YEAR CROWN (IN JAMAICAN PATOIS, OBVIOUSLY)

Infitting talk is from the mouth of Nigel sey who, with partner Affe Yusuf, runs the bournemouth-based deep house imprint, House Of 909. Set up in 1995 as an offshoot of Affe's 909 Perversions techno label, the imprint has been thrilling househeads ever since with a stream of understated, elegant releases which take the basic deep house formula and spice it with delicious jazz sensibilities. Those same jazzual sensibilities are provided by an ever-

The recting of excitement is bolstered by your recent deal with Pagan, which has seen Richard Breeden's wealthier label release two excellent House of 909 EPS (the "Deep Distraction EP" from May and julys "Moodswings") with a third to follow soon. Not to mention a compilation album featuring highlights such as tracks from the earliest EPs, "Voices from Beyond" and "Future Soul Chrhastra" as well as four brand-new cuts.

But the gogers are certainly not resting on their laurels. The two head honchos express deep dissatisfaction with the glut of second-rate house music currently clogging up the racks, and are determined to uphold their own strict quality control levels. GREEN HOUSE EFFECT

Labels, labels everywhere and not a drop to drink. Know that feeling? Fear not, for glistening like an oasis in a vinyl desert here's Victor Imbrez' GREEN LIGHT imprint

VICTOR Imbrez, as lovers of projects Alcatraz (of which he was 50 per cent with Jean-Phillipe Aviance), Submerge, Coco, Lithium, Quench, Circle City and Subway will know, is one hot recording property. The proverbial flavour of the month, actually. And, as if to prove it, he's just re-released Subway's stunning "You Can Do Anything", featuring the sultry vocals of songstress Dihann Moore, on his own Green Light imprint for the UK. It's hypnotic house with distinctly European production values. It's also very cool.

Vic's overnight success has been some 20-odd years in the making. He allegedly embarked on a musical career aged five as a self-professed "wannabe drummer", before graduating to the electronic ivories. Later, as a fan of early industrial, he gigged around the States with various live acts in an indie vein before eventually recettling in his hometown of Washington, DC resettling in his hometown of Washington, DC.

Things went well. . . and not so well. He signed with Deep Dish's Yoshitoshi where he released a series of quality cuts including "Submarine" before falling out of bed with the imprint over a series of performing rights payment and fee issues. No bother though, our Vic just set up the Green Light (house-based vocal cuts), Red Light (tuffer stuff) and Amber Light (ambient) imprints.

"Most of my records are sold in the UK these days," explains Imbres. "It's a market I know quite well, and that's why I had a feeling that 'You Can Do Anything' would do the business for me. It was a track that was originally out in the UK on Toko, but it didn't do that much. Things are different now, people know my name and they know my labels.

"The track came about when I was doing some Alcatraz promotional work in Manchester back in February 1996. We met some friends of a friend and they wanted a remix. I did it, but it sounded nothing like the original, so I decided to put it out as a single in its own right. The 'Manchester Mix' is the original, and there are other remixes and a reworking by David H to follow. It's underground and it's cool." Underground and cool... Could a Subway be anything else?

WHAT IS YOUR DREAM VENUE?

"It would have to be a huge tent or just an open air space holding thousands of people with a massive wall of speakers surrounding the crowd."

YOU CAN MOVE THE VENUE ANYWHERE YOU LIKE. WHERE WOULD YOU PUT IT?

HOW WOULD YOU GET THERE?

"You can't get there...

WHO WOULD BE ON THE GUEST LIST?

"Nobody because you can't get there [laughs]. Maybe I'd invite Miles Davis. His music and lifestyle have influenced me a lot."

WHAT WOULD YOU HAVE ON THE RIDER?

WHO WOULD BE THE SUPPORT ACT?

"It would be my DJ collective, Kemuri Productions."

WHICH RECORDS WOULD YOU START AND FINISH YOUR SET WITH?

DREAM DATE

"I'd start with the sound of an explosion and end with the sound of falling rain.

IF YOU COULD HAVE A BAND, WHO WOULD YOU HAVE IN IT?

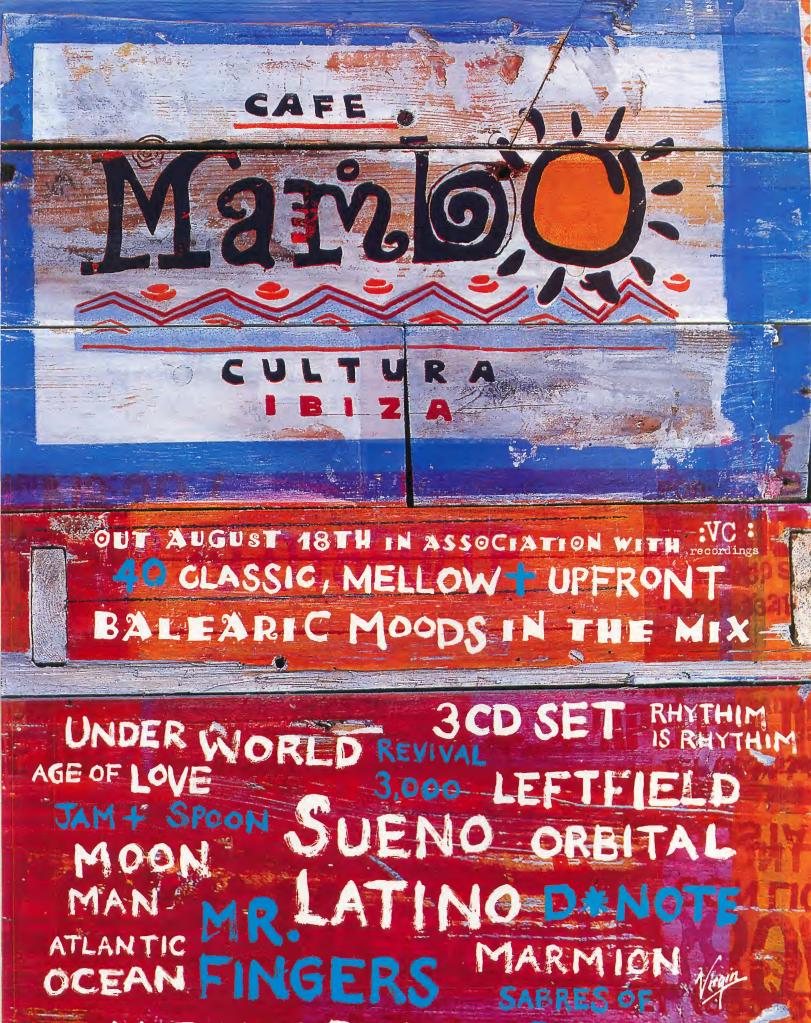

"I'd have a band or a whole orchestra consisting of DJs with Shadow, Cam, Vadim and Kemuri Productions. And visuals by Girl Studio and Vegetable Vision."

WHERE WOULD YOU GO AFTER THE GIG AND WHO WOULD YOU TAKE WITH YOU?

"I'd go with Miles Davis, pick up Jimi Hendrix on the way, go to Taco Bell and eat burritos."

FRIENDS, LOVERS AND FARMYARD ANIMALS

The sound of summer romance, or just the noise of farting horses? It's all the same to ALPHA, newly signed to Massive Attack's Melankolic imprint

I'M sat in an Italian cafe in one of London's more colourful backstreets, waiting for Alpha to arrive. The world is going through its motions and letting my mind wander with the salubrious dub formations of Alpha's spine-tingling debut long-player, "Come From Heaven".

And then it hits me. Alpha don't just create a soundtrack for a spliffed-up summer. They don't just roll soul over dubs of sensuous passion. No. Alpha is the sound of falling in love. Simple as that.

"That's it," agrees Corin Dingley, who with Andy Jenks is responsible for this soundtrack of summer loving. "It's definitely the kind of album you'd soundtrack a summer romance to. And then soundtrack the autumn break-up which follows."

"Come From Heaven" is a collection of tracks featuring a succession of vocalists, each bringing their own twist on the love found and lost theme. Helen White's sultry croon speaks of aching heartbreak on "Slim" while Wendy Stubs pushes the lament to a trembling extreme with her brilliantly dub-merged torchsong "Nyquil". Meanwhile, Martin Bernard's own vocal addition brings with it a flourish of nu-blues loneliness. An album of lovedup, let down and laidback soul.

"I don't think there's any soul in there," says Andy. "We've been far more affected by soundtracks, old dub and classic songwriters like Scott Walker. What we do is pretty laidback though."

You wouldn't expect anything else from a band who come from Bristol and are signed to Massive Attack's Melankolic imprint. But don't expect a Massive/Tricky/Portishead rerun, though.

"We're very aware of being lumped in with all the Bristol trip hop hype," explains Andy, "but that's not really us. We're far more interested in the music we make than the scenes that surrounds it. We're into the same kind of music as Massive and Portishead, so there will inevitably be comparisons."

More irksome was the task of finding a name. Originally promoed under the much-used name of Ariel, Corin and Andy were forced to come up with the new moniker. "We had to come up with it in a hurry," says Corin. "But the name's not important. The main thing is getting the musical chemistry right."

And they certainly do that, although there is one addition to the aural brew that may not get credited on the album sleeve.

"There was this horse outside the studio where we recorded the album and it had a bad case of flatulence," laughs Corin. "Every time we went outside it would just fart. That was a really big influence on us."

Hardly the stuff of romantic dreamscaped dubsonics. But hey, horses fall in love as well. . . Don't they?

BETTA BY FAR

Calling your album 'Betta Listen' is asking for trouble unless the release in question lives up to the boast. LAURNEA obviously knew what she was doing when deciding on a suitable title for her debut release...

LAURNEA. WHO SHE?

Pronounced Lar-ney, she's a refined singersongwriter who began her career at an early age in her home state of Nebraska before graduating to musicals and films, later appearing in Spike Lee's "School Daze" and soon in Tim Roth's forthcoming "Hoodlum". She's signed to Yab Yum Records which is run by Babyface's wife, Tracy Edmonds, but her material is not reminiscent of his output.

LAURNEA. THE SOUND OF...

Jazzy-soul over which Laurnea drapes and weaves and moulds her vocals. Rather than allow the arrangements to swamp her, she demonstrates her talent by altering her vocal to suit the composition.

LAURNEA. SHE SAY WHAT?

★ "I've been doing this since I was nine, working with different artists like Patti Labelle, James Ingram, Bobby McFerrin..."

- ★ "It's not that I didn't want Babyface's material on 'Betta Listen', we simply ran out of time for the tracks we were working on."
- ★ "The music makes me use my voice in certain ways although I had no idea I was doing this until people said there were so many voices within me. If a song sounds a certain way, I just sing it that way. It's just a feeling. It's all about feeling.
- ★ "People don't realise singing is acting. Each song I write is based on, or comprises, a character. I am never that person. On the track, 'Been A Long Time', I've never experienced what that woman has experienced. I don't have to go through it to sing about it with conviction."

LAURNEA. THE PHUTURE?

The album's first single, "Days Of Youth", has already broken the Top 40 and the soon-to-beclassic "Infatuation" (during which her voice trembles with longing like early Prince), is ready to be launched on an appreciative public. But more lasting than chart hits will be Laurnea's presence on the scene, thanks to her variety in instrumental. lyrical and vocal outlook.

THE APPLIANCE OF SCIENCE

Drum & bass maestros TOTAL SCIENCE are not only adept at turning out a decent tune, they also manage to do it for a handful of the finest labels

AS technicians, their sound is precision-fuelled, tight and technically advanced. As funky headz, they possess a groove-based fluidity which energises every beat. They are indeed, Funky Technicians, or as they have become known more recently, Total Science. . . Or Q-Project & Spinback or simply the Oxford bass cadets, Quiff and Paul.

Recording for a galaxy of drum & bass imprints, including Good Looking, Timeless, Moving Shadow and Creative Source, diversity is Total Science's hallmark. They make drum & bass which is both muscular and soulful, tough and emotional.

"It's got to have the rhythms," they reckon. "It can't be stiff, it's got to have movement and soul." Operating on the small but sussed Oxford scene, Quiff and Paul met, yep that's right, back in 1988 through a shared love of hip hop and electro. It wasn't long before they started looking elsewhere for kicks, driving west for Raindance raves and inevitably joining that renegade brigade of kids eager to capitalise on this new blend of accelerated breaks.

Peaking early, Quiff forged the dark rumblings of "Champion Sound" in 1993, on their Legend imprint. Although it was proof to the pair that they could raise the roof any time they fancied, Quiff and Paul put wholesale popularity aside in exchange for more explorative beats.

They ditched Legend and set up CIA (Computer Integrated Audio), in order to pursue the infinite continuum between digital technology and basic beats. . . The Total Science. Which neatly brings us to the dark whirlpool of scissored beats and loaded basslines of "Fourth Wave", the latest Total Science offering on CIA. Not to mention the gossamer atmospherics of "Telepathy" for Moving Shadow or the techno undertones which ripple beneath the echoing percussion of "Algebra" on Good Looking. While, as Total Science agree, it's the innovative unpredictability of it all which remains their inspiration.

"If you said this music was going to stay the same for the next 10 years, it would be boring. We're into drum & bass because it's always pushing forward and it allows us to do anything we want. You never know where it's all going to go."

'4th Wave' on CIA, 'Algebra' on Moving Shadow and 'Telepathy' on Good Looking are all out now

Super sharp shooter DJ HYPE sets his sights on Southampton's DJ Red

"I get all his stuff from Clayton at Trouble On Vinyl/Hardware. Most of the time I just get them on a plate. I might actually have been getting stuff and not known it was by him. Last time I talked to Red was when we were doing a Ganja Cru thing in Milan. He was in Italy with Kane and they popped over.

His productions are good for playing out. They've got energy and usually, they have a hip hop flavour with fat beats and fat bass. 'Enter The Dragon' seems to have been his most notable track recently. I actually got given it last year. He did me a special. They sampled one of the jingles off my radio show and slotted it into the tune. I was caning it on dub but unfortunately I lost it before it came out so now I'm playing the vinyl.

Has he got a new sound? Well, you don't have to have a new sound, but you do have to be very consistent and that's what I think Red is. He's offered me some tunes for the label and I'm looking forward to getting the tracks. I like to encourage people and if it goes out on my label, people tend to take a bit more notice. I think he's getting noticed because he's consistent now. Rather than coming with just one big tune and bang, everyone wants to know you, I'd rather hear the next one and the next one and the next one. . . and if all of those releases have been good. . . I like that consistentcy. I think Red is someone up on the up. He's a newcomer. He's getting a lot of interest."

MIND THE GAP

Techno seems to have become a dirty word of late. Cleaning up its soiled reputation and creating fresh definitions along the way is the Oxford-based VOID imprint TECHNO has always meant different things to different people. Over the last decade it's been bastardised, sanitised, destroyed and reinvented more times than anyone cares to remember. Saying you're into techno in 1997 means absolutely zilch. It would seem nobody even knows what that means anymore.

A depressing scenario you might think. Well yes, but then again no, because if you dig through the rubbish, you'll still find the occasional unblemished glistening gem. And fortunately Oxford's Void imprint is just that, a small but perfectly formed beauty spot in a landscape overrun with meaningless banging crap and insipid,

To the label's founder, Justin Winks, and the rest of the Void crew, techno never has and never will be anything other than electronic soul. Machine music which extracts and inspires real, heart-felt emotions. Tracks like "Inside Out" and "Hidden Emotion" by Future Beat Alliance and Yunx's "Arcane Memories" make you want to smile, cry, make love, dance, sit back and sigh at the very wonder, beauty and chaos of it all. Void's music isn't the soundtrack to a night out or indeed the soundtrack to a morning after, like all the best music its the sound of life itself.

"I like the idea that when someone buys one of our records, they take it home, put it on and enter a void," says Justin. "I'm not interested in putting out functional DJ tracks, I want more than that. As long as it has some real feeling, I don't care if it's 165 or 85 bpm.

'We all come from the hip hop and rare groove scene and that's still a part of our sound. In a way, what we're doing is looking back at the past and seeing where you can take that into the future. When we play out, we drop all kinds of styles, hip hop, drum & bass, soul, a bit of jazz, whatever. As long as it's quality we'll play it and that's how I see the label, quality first. We want to put out music people will be playing for years not weeks."

Yunx's 'The Bill Odyssy EP' is out now and 'Aerospace' by Total Science will follow shortly. Watch out for the forthcoming Future Beat Alliance album, 'Hidden Emotion', in early October

KLF - 'CHILL OUT' (KLF Communications)

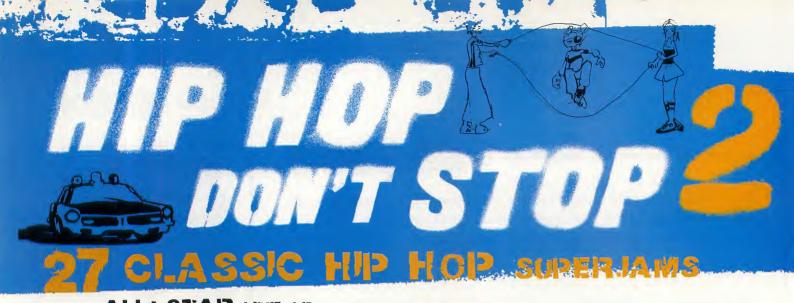

ANYONE who survived the acid house experience and/or was born before 1975 should have this album already. Those of you who don't, whether you're into jungle, trance, house, hip hop or Moroccan folk music could do worse than nipping down to Our Price and getting yourself a copy. You won't find it on vinyl, however. Maybe just American or Japanese CD import as the KLF kindly deleted their entire back catalogue four years ago.

The sleeve of "Chill Out" depicted a field full of sheep and featured a "File Under Ambient" sticker, which was a new idea at the time. With acid still being a firm Saturday night fave, many hours were spent staring at the cover, wandering around the countryside of the brain and admiring the lush green grass as well as smoking it.

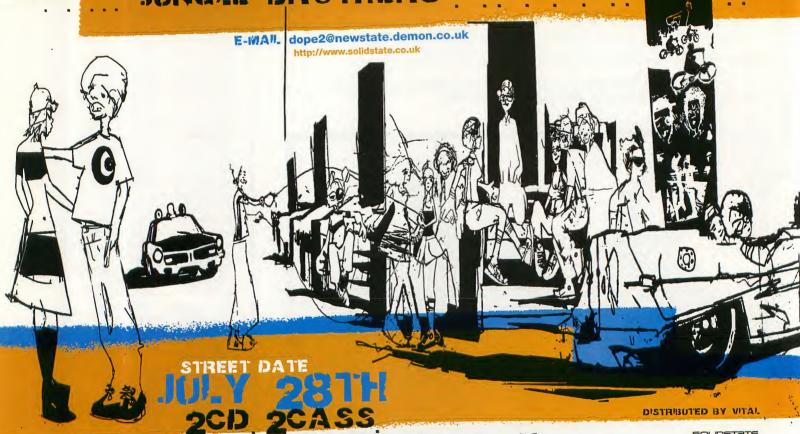

On its release in 1990, progressive house was at it's peak, Fabio and Grooverider's Rage at Heaven was, er, raging, northern clubbing was as strong as ever and anyone who returned home sweat-stained and grinding their teeth was sure to put the kettle on and the needle on this record. Sitting back, still rushing, the baa-baas of the sheep, the steel guitars, Elvis samples and tribal chanting (lasting 47 minutes) all took you on a demented sonic ramble.

The track titles read like an "Easy Rider" trip across America. "Six Hours To Louisiana, Black Coffee Going Cold" merging into "Dream Time In Lake Jackson" and "The Lights Of Baton Rouge Pass By" and with sleeve credits going to Elvis, Fleetwood Mac and Acker Bilk, the KLF once again proved just what awkward talented bastards they were. Truly a seminal album, it's certainly better than burning a million quid.

6-Star Raw Denim

Not as you might think the stinking Seventies after-shave but the finest jeans we've seen in a long time. These are jeans for people who know about jeans, they're dark indigo with red stitching, turn ups, button fly... Hell, they re classic, straight-cut, non-fit jeans made from raw denim. They are the real deal. Need a handy jeans tip? G-STAR say that most jean fans consider the slow bleeding of the indigo dye is one of the most fascinating aspects of a denim, however, there is also the purist who wants the dark blue colour to stay as long as possible. And how do you do that? Have your jeans dry cleaned of course. Neathur?

Win a course at Manchester's Midi School

IF you want to learn about dance music production, there are not many options around short of blagging some time in your nearest studio or spending a fortune on buying all the equipment yourself.

Which is where Manchester's MIDI School comes in. Based in the city centre, MMS provides a crucial training place for anyone keen on getting involved in the dance music industry. Employing experienced lecturers, engineers and producers (including engineers who have worked with the likes of Transmat, Björk and Oasis to name but a few), they offer a series of different courses in a state-of-the-art studio tailor-made for anybody wanting to learn about the workings of the recording studio.

As well as a three-month and a seven-month diploma course and a 10-week Bassment DJ Course, MIDI also do a fantastic four-day introduction course - Dance Music Production. Quality MIDI-based training is very hard to find, so this course is a vital addition to any novices curriculum vitae. Normally, to get on this course would set you back a cool £294, but Manchester's Midi School have very kindly offered to take TWO Muzik readers through the course for nowt. You don't need to have any previous knowledge of MIDI or a recording studio and musical ability is not a requirement.

All you need to do is tell us what MIDI stands for. Is it:

(a) Magical Instruments Digging Igloos?

(b) Musical Instrument Digital Interface?

(c) Mystifyingly Interesting Dogs Interactive?

Win Numark Mixer & Dreamscape goodies

IT'S already been voted Hardcore Vital Release in our July issue. It's not one, not two, but three CDs from the finest rave organisers on this planet. It's mixed by DJs Randall, Sy and our very own Slipmatt. Which means it's Randall's first ever mix CD. It's chock full of both classic whistle-screaming anthems and bang-up-to-the-minute groovers in a jungle and happy hardcore style. It is Dreamscape - Volume 1 and it's massive.

To promote the album, Dreamscape have teamed up with Numark, makers of very fine mixers to the DJ elite and the ordinary public. LTJ Bukem and Billy Nasty are just two of the Premier League who endorse Numark's products.

So what have we got to give away? Well, ONE winner will get a brand, spanking new Numark 1100Xi mixer, which is currently retailing for s180. They'll also receive a Dreamscape jacket, a Dreamscape record bag and, of course, a copy of the album. FIVE runners-up will each receive a copy of the album and a Dreamscape video.

To win, just tell us who was the partner of Randall in the old TV programme, "Randall & ??? Deceased"?

- (a) Hopkirk
- (b) Hoppy Hardcore (c) Hop-Along-Cassidy

Mark vour entries Dreamscape Competition and get them in by Friday, September 12. Don't forget to state whether you'd prefer CD or cassette.

OOH-LA-LA! And a bit of zut alors too! Why such excitement? Because the great master of cool Gallic grooves and all things groovily French, Monsieur Etienne De Crecy popped round our office recently for a cup of tea. And he only went and left a few bits and bobs for us to give away. Damned if were going to return them. After all, they're loaded up with the logo of his super-suave Super Discount label. There are lighters. And tea-mugs. And, inevitably, some copies of the recent Super Discount compilation album too. We've got FIVE of each to give away.

To win, just tell us what the title of Monsieur De Crecy's single, "Le Patron Est Devenu Fou" means in plain English. Is it:

- (a) The boss has gone mad?
- (b) The manager is in love?
- (c) The supervisor's brain has been taken over by aliens and consequently he believes he's Liberace?

Mark your entries Super Discount Competition and get them in by Friday, September 12. Please state whether vou'd prefer the album on vinyl or CD.

It's harder, faster, sharper and more bass-heavy than ever before, it has MCs, rewinds, ragga vocals and time-stretching. Its energy and hedonism is hard to find anywhere else in dance music right now. It's SPEED GARAGE, it's the summer sound of 1997 and it's hijacking handbag house as the new Saturday Night Fever

"Feel the groove, London Town, check out the bass, check out the flow. . . Play those vibes, play those vibes, play those vibes. . ."
MC. Passion FM, north London, July 1997

ABSOLUTE Sundays at The Aquarium, Old Street, east London. The Moet is flowing. A curl of smoke is rising into the thick and humid air. There are faint traces of perspiration down the back of the turquoise silk shirt on the guy donning Versace shades propped up against the bar.

As the MC takes a swig from the bottle of champagne in his hand, a barely-distinguishable squiggle of vocal rushes up the back of the neck and into a squeal of undulating sax that seems to hit the ceiling above. The air is expectant. It feels like something is about to kick off.

And it is. In clubs like The Aquarium, Numb Nums at EC1, Twice As Nice at The Coliseum, Experience at Camden Palace. At the Pure Silk, La Cosa Nostra and Sun City parties which are rapidly spreading out of London to Manchester. Cardiff, Scotland and the North. On the airwaves with pirates such as Magic, Deja Vu, London Underground. Chicago, Freek and Passion and on legal stations like Kiss FM where underground garage DJs Matt "Jam" Lamont and Karl "Tuff Enuff" Brown now have their own Thursday night show.

Enter speed garage, the ballistic, ebullient, bass-in-your-face underground sound of summer 1997. Its birth is the long-awaited point at which Nineties house music fast forwards, NASA style, into the millennium. Listen to the alien hyper-warble of Rosie Gaines' chart-smash "Closer Than Close" or the futurist bad-boy call to arms of Double 99's "RIP Groove" and you'll hear something that fearlessly takes from elements of existing forms of music (jungle, ragga and hardcore), slams them together, breaks every unwritten dance music "norm" and creates a new, irreverent, raw and energetic sound in the sonic stratosphere.

"People want something new and radical. Jungle broke through because it was different," says DJ Spoony of speed garage DJ combo, The Dream Team. "They've had two or three years of that and now they want something else, and that's us."

And so we have speed garage. A bolt from the blue, seemingly from nowhere, it has swept through the capital like wild fire, leaving a trail of new labels such as Industrial Standard, Ice Cream, 4 Liberty, Outlaw, Underground Solution, Catch, 500 Rekords, Confetti and 4th Floor, in its wake and catapulting underground DJs like Matt "Jam" Lamont and Karl "Tuff Enuff" Brown into the premier league.

"If anyone says this drum & bass-style garage has been around for years, they're talking rubbish," believes London garage veteran Grant Nelson, who has recently inked a six-album deal with Virgin. "I defy anybody to show me a record from last year like this. It's only just blown up and that's because of the pirates."

But while the sound continues to evolve, the roots of the speed garage network of clubs, pirates, DJs and posses can be traced to hardcore and even acid house. The "Sunday scene" and south London pirate radio stations are its most recent additions though.

According to Matt "Jam" Lamont and Karl "Tuff Enuff" Brown, the Sunday scene really kicked off with The Arches club in south east London where both men were residents.

"There was a nice little thing happening down there," recalls Karl. "The Arches was one of the first clubs to really build the Sunday scene," says Timmi Magic of DJ trio The Dream Team. It was at The Arches (like Spread Love at The Gass Club and the Ram Jam all-dayers at a south London pub. The Frog And Nightgown, before it) that a Moschino and Versace-clad, champagne-swigging crowd would come to hear the latest uptempo US garage dubs by MK, Victor Simonelli, Armand Van Helden and Todd Edwards played alongside UK productions by Grant Nelson and Joey Musaphia.

It was an out and out party scene. The clubbers would already have been out all weekend, maybe at ragga, hip hop or r&b jams. By Sunday, they were looking for a sound which was a little bit different. Something fresh and new to get excited about and dressed up for with a few traditional vocal elements to keep a continuum with what had gone before. What better way to finish up nights of partying than with a few hours of tough, fast and relentlessly optimistic garage tracks?

Of course, as the popularity of the Sunday scene increased, it wasn't enough just hearing this hard, fast and dubby new strain of garage on a Sunday night. And that's where pirate radio came in. First it was Freek, London Underground and all the south London-based stations, now it's anything up to 15 stations right across the capital.

"You'd tune into a pirate that would normally play drum & bass and all of a sudden they'd be playing pure garage," notes Danny Harrison who produces with partner Julian Jonah as Gant and Nu Birth. "It was like, 'fuck it, we're not hearing it anywhere else so we'll do it ourselves'. It's not record companies that created it and it's not journalists either. It's a black thing that started everywhere, but the pirates were the first people to really start playing the music."

Whereas the major labels were painfully slow to pick up on the jungle explosion, speed garage (closer to the mainstream having easier-to-comprehend beats) is being snapped up. Danny Harrison and Julian Jonah's twelve, "Sound Bwoy Burial", has been picked up by Positiva and Nubirth's "Anytime" by XL. Roy Davis Jnr's speed garage anthem, "Gabrielle", is to be re-released by XL with mixes by RIP of Double 99 fame.

Matt "Jam" Lamont and Kart "Tuff Enuff" Brown, like Omar from RIP, are turning out major remix after major remix. Most recently, their takes on Tina Moore's "Never Let Him Go" and Martha Wash's "Carry On" have become scene anthems. Even Danny Harrison, previously responsible for Congress' "40 Miles" and Nush's "U Girls", is surprised at the rapidity of assimilation.

"I think the majors got their fingers burned with jungle," he offers. "I can't believe the amount of remixes they're chucking at us now. Some middle-aged man has obviously decided that this is what the kids want."

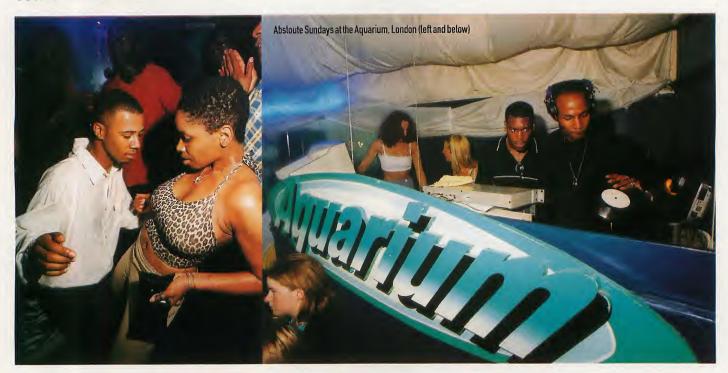

As Danny observes, in six months time the garage scene may well be full of white kids from Surrey but for now, the speed garage virus is seeping out of the underground and infecting everything and everyone in sight. Major label A&Rs are signing it. Commercial house powerbrokers like Pete Tong and Judge Jules are playing it. Even die-hard rave venues like the infamous Club Labyrinth in Dalston have replaced their hardcore and jungle sessions with speed garage jams.

THE FILLIE

Speed Garage: sound of the future

In the two-and-a-half years that Adrian Luckie has been organising La Cosa Nostra parties (along with co-promoters David Scott and Peter Odell), he's witnessed an inordinate rate of expansion. When the parties began, they would attract a couple of hundred friends. These days, it's 2,500 garage fanatics at venues such as The Emporium, Cafe De Paris and Heaven.

This summer, UK garage will kick off," asserts Adrian. "You can see it in the charts already. It's getting really big and it's going to explode.

Sometimes, you can hear the sound of imminent combustion in the music itself. The feeling of urgency in the vocals compressed to a buoyant rivulet of treble. The bass, an omnipotent, quaking cyborg baritone. The robotic cry of the time-stretched vocal. The organ stabs which impact harder and quicker with each hit of the beat.

Like hardcore, speed garage anthems such as Tina Moore's "Never Let You Go", Rosie Gaines' "Closer Than Close" and Operator And Baffled's "Things Are Never" augment their diva vocals into a hysterical, clipped squeak. The pitched up, carved up lyrics are often morphed into a completely different form, sometimes it's difficult to determine their original phonetic resonance. Speed garage, like hardcore, treats the vocal as oestrogen-fuelled cipher, detached from its original context. Floating free to catch whatever euphoric interpretation the listener wishes to tag it with.

And where jungle's darkside refracted a bleak chasm of millennial fear, the relentless uptempo of speed garage is its hedonistic nemesis. The sound of end-of-the-century dancefloor frenzy. Of an urgent, breathless will to dance on regardless. Of the amazonian power of the diva vocal.

Tuning into London's Passion FM late one Friday in July, the crossover points with hardcore and the halcyon days of jungle are patently obvious. There's a record which uses the same "What ya gonna do?/What ya gonna do?" hook as Da Intalex's 1994 drum & bass track of the same name. It's followed by Lennie De Ice's garage remix of "We Are E" and a bootleg which accelerates Colonel Abrams early house track, "Trapped", over a resonating rude bwoy bass.

TODD IS GODD

According to speed garage luminaries like Tuff Jam, Catch Records and The Dream Team, TODD EDWARDS is the man. The 25-year-old US house producer assesses why his sound has become such an important influence on the speed garage scene

"I was surprised I've influenced the UK sound. I'm very proud of it actually. Karl Brown and Matt Lamont are great. I love them because they're so true to the music. I got to meet Karl, he came out here to DJ. What a nice guy! He was very inspiring. I guess I can get into what they do because the drums remind me of myself! When you hear someone else doing something you do. it's more catchy to your ear. I'm not saying they imitate me but you can hear the swing in their drums, it's got that nice warm sound.
"I'm doing a remix for Tuff Jam - TJR's 'Just Getting Better', I like the vocals, I just did an edit for their radio show. My foresight is that we're going to have a very good working relationship. As for my influence on the UK garage scene, it's crazy! Who would have expected it? When I started out I was very influenced by Masters At Work and Kenny Dope's drums. When they were really hot with the major label remixing stuff, every track Kenny did had different drums which really impressed me. I was trying to... I don't want to say mimic him, but I was trying to get that vibe of the full drums, y'know that real good swing with the hard, clicking sound. I guess I just developed my own style of drums and it wasn't really mimicking his style any more. After that, I really got into experimenting with different vocal samples and it kind of went from there. I started to evolve, I didn't want to sit there and start on things the same way over again and again. You strive for perfection, it's not about 'Well okay, I'm producing tracks, let's keep mass producing them'. I didn't want to get boring, so l evolved a different style.

Then there are the MCs, the re-emergence of players like Mikee B, rave gods like Top Buzz. Lennie De Ice and Gavin "DJ Face" Mills. The cutting of plates at north London's Music House. The rewinds. The speeded-up vocals. It's possible that even more radical music could emerge.

Indeed, things are moving so fast, there's already a split emerging between those who want to move into proper songs, live instruments and real jazz and the legions of 16 year olds fiddling with samplers, fusing basslines, time-stretching vocals and garage beats with refreshing irreverency. Think back to the jungle/drum & bass divide in 1994-5 and this is all familiar territory.

"As far as I can see, there are two types of underground garage at the moment," says Grant Nelson. "There's the sort of stuff I used to do with Nice And Ripe, bouncy, pumpy American-style stuff, and then there's the jungle crossover stuff which is the biggest London sound right now."

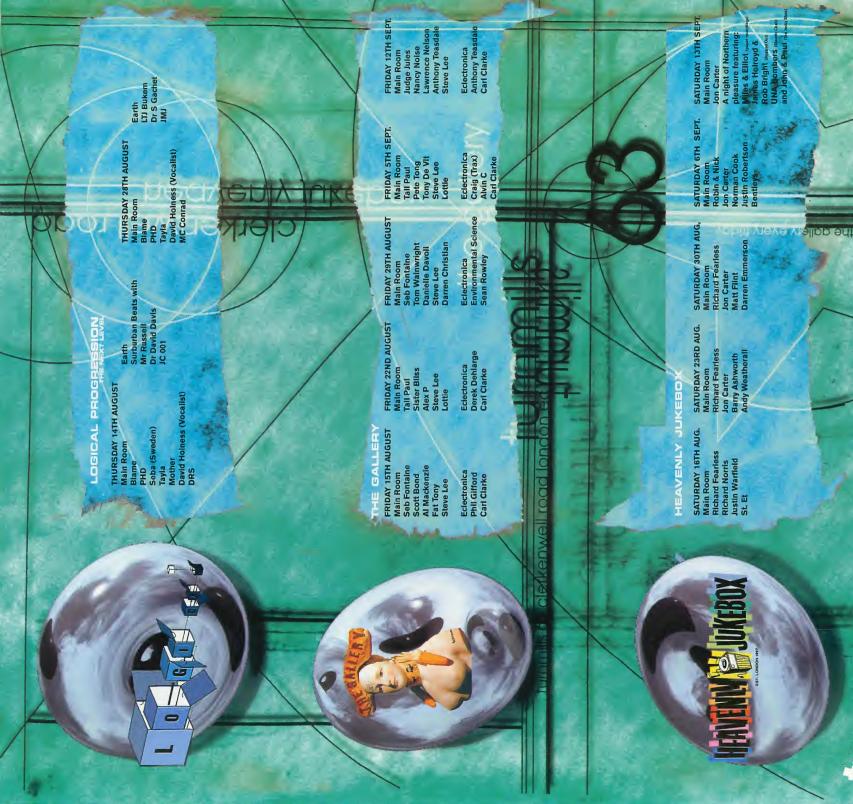

"It's purist isn't it, like anything," shrugs Karl Brown. "We love vocal tracks and we love things to have a nice meaning but there are people out there now who are just knocking up tracks with bass drums, vocal and a riff you can hang on to. There's lots of good producers out there but they seem to be lifting samples when they could be getting a vocalist in and a good keyboard player so that it sounds like a piece of art."

But down at The Aquarium or Twice As Nice on a Sunday night, the clubbers don't want art. When they go to hear Matt, Karl, The Dream Team, Mickey Simms, Norris Da Boss Windross, Mike "Ruff Cut" Lloyd, Ramsay & Fenn or any of the other garage jocks, it's for the shock of the new, the rush of the treble, the anticipation of the drop.

There's a girl dancing next to me in pristine hot pants and halterneck top. Is she having a good night?

"I love the club, the music and the people here are wicked," she pauses and surveys the crowd. thoughtfully. "But sometimes. . . When the MC's rabbiting on I wish he'd say something like 'This is the future sound of London'.'

speed garage versus handbag house

What happens when speed garage takes a jaunt up the M1 to Derby and makes an appearance in front of Progress' up-for-it handbag crowd? We booked DJ SPOONY into the Midlands club to see whether his box of prime cuts would cut the mustard north of the Watford Gap

YOU know you're at Progress, an archetypal bastion of commercial house with the glossy ads and big name jocks, because there's a group of lads in carefully pressed YSL shirts hanging around the entrance next to some girls in white lycra mini skirts and halter-neck tops. You know it's Progress because you can hear the weightless soaring of trebley epic house the minute you walk in the door.

"You're not going to find cutting edge fashion or music here," explains unusually frank promoter Russell, as he ushers us inside. "What you will find though, is something a little bit different to your average northern house club."

On first inspection this seems somewhat unlikely as we watch clusters of girls in stretch lace with orange sunbed tans queue up to pay at the till. However, tonight Progress is to be the backdrop for a spot of impromptu social engineering thanks to Muzik and the open-mindedness of the Progress promoters. Tonight, after the supercharged house onslaught, the unsuspecting clubbers will experience the sound of the London underground: speed garage. Rupturing sub basslines. Ragga sampladelia. Gunshots. Rewinds. Helium vocals. And not a snare roll in sight. For a whole hour.

They're expecting Jon Pleased Wimmin and Graeme Park. What they're getting is Jon Pleased, Mike E Bloc (because Graeme can't make it) and Dream Team member. Twice As Nice resident and speed garage guru, DJ Spoony. The gambit? Can speed garage, the sound of a predominantly black, pirate-oriented, London subculture break on the northern superclub circuit?

As we traverse the venue, the prognosis looks promising. Russell's right, it's not your usual handbag cattle market. The crowd isn't as homogenous as many northern house clubs. There are a couple of Asian lads with cropped hair and tight v-neck T-shirts. A crew of mellow looking b-boys in Tommy Hilfiger T-shirts and raggas hanging under the balcony.

The promoters are up front, dancing in the DJ box as opposed to snorting coke in a back office. In fact, there are few obvious casualties anywhere. Even the dancers on the podiums aren't stereotypical "Baywatch" bimbos in bikinis. They're himbos! With fluorescent orange chaps, leather g-strings, bulging pecs and tight buns. No wonder the girls look so happy.

"We came to hear Jon Pleased." says Emma. 19, who's wearing a strappy white dress and glittery silver eyeshadow. "The music's really uplifting and I can have a dance and a good night out with the girls."

Has she heard of speed garage? "No, never heard of it."

Quintessential Jon Pleased Wimmin is why they're here and as he flicks his blonde bob, adjusts his headphones and cues up the new single from Underworld, that's exactly what they get.

Huddled on a sofa under the balcony, there's another gang of girls wearing lilac hipsters and tie-front tops, babydoll dresses and knee boots and their hair carefully parted in the centre and slicked down.

"We come for the blokes, the music and to have a good time!" grins Sarah, 21. "Our favourite DJs are Jon Pleased and Lisa Loud. We like happy house," her friends chirp. Have they heard of speed garage? "No, what's that?" they ask with blank looks. No wonder then, that when Mike E Bloc comes on with a box of acid-laced, high-octane, synthetic house tracks, the crowd are nearly at fever pitch.

"The crowd are really having it!" observes DJ Spoony. "Whenever there's a big breakdown [about once every three minutes with Mike E Bloc] they start cheering and clapping. That's a great response for a DJ. I'm glad I arrived here early and got a general overview of what's happening."

When Mike E Bloc drops Double 99's "RIP Groove", the crowd erupts to the time-stretched vocals, gunshot volleys and monstrous bassline. "The crowd are actually quite familiar with this record," says Russell, explaining that DJs like Judge Jules have been dropping Double 99 and Gant's "Sound Bwoy Burial" at the club for a few months. However, the crowd is most responsive to Mike E Bloc's melodramatic finale which involves the sort of music that brings tears to the eyes of most house purists. And not tears of joy either. Yup, Mike E Bloc really knows how to drop the cheese. The crowd, needless to say, go ballistic.

"Who's this DJ Spoon?" asks a bemused-looking lad as Spoony takes to the decks. It's not Spoony's first time playing out of London, he was in Cardiff last week and he regularly guests in Bournemouth and Manchester. It becomes obvious as he builds from Todd Terry through a couple of old cuts on Swing City, RIP's mix of Ultra Nate, Bobby D'Ambrosio's "Moments Of My Life" and Van Helden's mix of Sneaker Pimps' "Spin Spin Sugar", that he's tailored his set to an out-of-town crowd. He's playing it safe with the minimum of ragga vocals, seismic sub basslines and no visible (or audible) pitching up. When he does drop into chasmic basslines, the crowd seem uncertain how to react. They've learnt a programmed reaction to the almighty snare roll, but unlike London crowds, they are not triggered into frenzy by the drop into bass, although the first big blast of bass does ignite tangible enthusiasm.

Like most clubs, the Progress punters react best to what they know. When Spoony (who like all good DJs knows how to crank it up) drops a piano-heavy mix of "Music Sets Us Free", the arms are in the air. As they were to Ultra Flava before it.

"I love speed garage, I'm really excited to hear DJ Spoony here," says, Tony, 20, who bears more than a passing resemblance to Spike Lee. "I think the crowd here will listen to anything so long as it's pumping."

Astutely, Spoony winds up with Rosie Gaines' "Closer Than Close", a record everybody knows. When Russell takes to the mike to announce the end of Spoony's set, there's polite and warm applause. "And next week we've got Tall Paul and Jeremy Healy." Cue unadulterated screaming, whooping and whistling.

Speed garage is breaking up north in commercial house clubs. Its radical reconstruction of the accepted templates of garage come at a time when commercial house is locked in a highly formulaic cul de sac. Once you experience the physicality of a corpulent, vibrato plate of sub-bass or the adrenatin-fuelled call to arms of an urgent ragga vocal, the tinny clatter of a snare roll falls strangely flat.

Speed garage isn't going to face the resistance jungle did because many of the reference points in the music are already familiar to most clubbers – the diva vocals. the hard US beats. . . And times are changing. Post jungle, nobody can afford to be resistant to new forms. Labels like Positiva and XL have been quick to sign up speed garage anthems. RIP are doing countless major label mixes, as are Tuff Jam. Pivotal DJs on the commercial house and garage circuit like Judge Jules, Graeme Park and Allister Whitehead are caning it in their sets and the clubbers at Progress certainly seem ready to accept it.

All that's left now is to sit back, wait and watch the landscape of clubbing change for good. It's official... Handbag house is dead, long live speed garage.

WHAT GOT YOU STARTED IN MUSIC?

"My Dad had a television and stereo repair shop so I always had access to equipment. When I was 14 or 15, one of his employees was a DJ and that's how I got into DJing. That was 1976. I started doing private parties and a few years after that I joined a record pool. Then in the early Eighties I met a programme director for a radio station in New York called WKTU. He took a liking to my mixing and I did a show for the station and from that, all the record companies started soliciting me to do editing and remixing work. After that, I started doing my own productions. Very early in my career I met my partner Silvio Tancretti and since 1986, I've been co owner of Northcott Productions. WHAT IS YOUR FAVOURITE GARAGE RECORD OF ALL TIME?

"I hate that question! 'Let No Man Put Asunder' by First Choice, '10%' by Double Exposure. More currently, erm... Michael Proctor's 'Deliver Me'. WHO HAVE BEEN YOUR MAJOR INFLUENCES?

"In general, the Philadelphia sound, the Salsoul sound, those kind of records. There was a more soulful, r&b approach to disco at that time. I like a lot of electronic music, in the early part of my career, I was into Arthur Baker and John Roby for sure. . . Kraftwerk. And a lot of the early Detroit stuff like Juan Atkins.

WHAT DO YOULISTEN TO WHEN YOU'RE NOT LISTENING TO HOUSE MUSIC?

"Talk Radio! Only kidding. Basically r&b. I'm into the traditionalist kind of stuff, artists who aren't really around right now like Phyllis Hyman, Regina Belle, Anita Baker, James Ingram. I'm a softie I guess.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE CURRENT UK GARAGE SCENE?

"It's good. My only problem with it is the fragmentation, that hurts the music more than anything because it makes it disposable. I think labelling only cheapens things and makes it a fad of the moment. A vocal record is a vocal record. I think pitching the music up hurts it more because the older people have a foundation of what the music is and was. The younger people get influenced by all these new things and it further deters them from finding the roots and what it really was. DO YOU HAVE ANY AMBITIONS LEFT?

"Yes I do. I want to do more productions on many different levels form ballads to r&b to house music, whatever. Less remixes and more productions for more established artists. I'd really like to work with Janet Jackson, Regina Belle, James Ingram, Teddy Pendergrass, Mariah Carey, Luther Vandross...

Where the hell is. . . LENNIE DE ICE

When Randall dropped the needle onto Lennie De Ice's "We Are E" at Living Dream, Lee Valley for the very first time in 1990, it's difficult to imagine just how radical it sounded. The resonant sub-bass, the stinging Belgian synths and brittle breakbeat configurations were to provide a template for seven years of hardcore and jump-up jungle. Initially released on De Underground records, "We Are E" took around six months to break, Sure, it was a strange tune, but strange is often the essence of a great music.

"We Are E" sold a total of 16,000 copies on De Underground and IE Records, plus a further 150,000 as part of the "Breaks And Beats 3" compilation on Passion records. Original twelves now change hands for anything between £25 and £50.

"We Are E" never really went away. It was re-released by Lennie with drum & bass mixes in 1993 and this summer, Lennie's speed garage makeover, "We Are IE", is getting caned by DJs like Ramsay and Fenn. But the question most people are asking is where the hell was he in the interim?

"That's a long, long story!" says Lennie, who's now 30 and lives in Leytonstone, east London. "I was on the underground jungle scene really. We set up the first drum & bass sound system at Notting Hill carnival in 1993 with Randall, Brockie, Tonic, Nicky Blackmarket. Then in 1994, we started doing a lot of remix work for Fashion and Polygram France and we were responsible for translating the history of jungle for Polygram Japan. We released a few singles in 1995 and more recently we've been working with Project 23.'

What is his take on the speed garage explosion this summer? "With the raggage, it's reverted back to the way hardcore was going to go before jungle came along. Everything's a cycle in dance music." he sagely concludes. And with his track record, Lennie De Ice is a man who should know.

'We Are IE' is currently doing the rounds on white label. There's little doubt a major label will pick it up soon!

Gentle? Jazzy?
Home-listening? Nah, that was the DAVE ANGEL of old.
These days it's all about bumping dancefloors for the Heaven-sent one.
Oh, and being shit scared of flying. . . .

IT's a complete con, that's what it is. We get taken to Heathrow airport, all prepared to fly off to somewhere seriously exotic at the expense of Dave Angel's record label, and where do we end up? Right here. Still at Heathrow. Humphhh...

By way of compensation we do get a hotdog each (standard pre-flight issue for Dave, apparently), a go on the arcade games in Terminal One and a chance to talk to Angel about his new album. It's called "Globetrotting" and thus, in one sense at least, this is the perfect place to be.

album. It's called "Globetrotting" and thus, in one sense at least, this is the perfect place to be.

In another sense, however, there couldn't be a less suitable place imaginable, what with Dave admitting that travelling by air scares him shitless these days. As he stands out near the end of the runway having his picture taken, another bastard hunk of metal roars overhead and he groans, "You never know, do you? The more you travel, the more chance there is that something's going happen to you... That you're going to end up as dead meat. I always worry about that."

Brrroocoom! No more than 30 seconds later, yet another winged thing zooms by, taking the veritable piss out of all

"How the fuck can all that weight get up there." Dave wonders incredulously. "Shit! Is it about to stall? I think it is!

DAVE ANGEL

Planes aren't likely to fall out of the sky when they're cruising at height, but taking off and landing... Hmmm."

Fortunately, and thanks mainly to the myriad wonders of alcohol, this techno veteran holds on tight and continues to whizz around the world with his record box. Indeed, if he didn't, his new album (which is largely a tribute to the countries and clubs he's fallen for most on his travels) wouldn't even exist.

"Getting there is horrible, but arriving in new places is great," he laughs. "For starters, DJing has given me the chance to go to Tokyo and you can't beat that for an experience. The first time I went, it didn't hit me until I got back how strange a place it was. But the second time, I decided to get a bit deeper into what it's all about. I experimented more with the food and went to see the old temples. You know, even the beggars are really honourable over there. They don't come up to you outside the train station waving a can of Special Brew around and going, "Got 10p mate?"."

Dave Angel's debut album was called "Tales Of The Unexpected". However that's an appellation which is rather more fitting this time around. See, while almost all of his previous missives have concerned themselves with gentle, jazzy home-listening themes, he's gone well and truly dance on us now. Uh-huh, fuck slouching around on the sofa, says Dave, let's groove, baby.

"It's a new phase I'm going through," he smiles. "Earlier on in my career, my objective was to make music which would still sound good in years to come. It's harder to do that with dance tracks because fashion changes so quickly, but I decided I really wanted to make some tracks I could play out for a change. I wanted to see that amazing reaction a crowd can get off music."

As was recently proven when Dave spun a number of cuts from "Globetrotting" at London's Complex club, instilling a dose of fervour into an otherwise fairly moribund crowd. But then moribund is a word that seems to be increasingly associated with techno right now. Many punters and pundits claim it's not far off a dead duck, and Dave can only find it in himself to half disagree, referring to what he describes as "Techno Halred Syndrome".

"A lot of people in techno have been making bullshit music and flooding the market with stupid tracks." he explains. "Understandably, people get pissed off with that and the syndrome builds up. Record buyers can't find any tunes they want because there are so many bad ones covering up the good stuff. Club-goers get sick of it because DJs are giving 'em shit music to dance to. The system's all messed up."

Then there was his much-hyped but ultimately ill-fated Twisted Funk club venture with Darren Emerson, which opened at the Venom venue in London a couple of months ago and closed soon after.

"We tried to do our bit," he sighs, "but the venue was attempting to wrench more cash from us all the time. Money, money, money. . . That's all they cared about. We didn't earn a penny from it, but we were willing to keep going, to give it chance to build up.

"I had the time because I'd finished the album and was only out DJing at the weekends. It felt as though I had this free time on my hands during the week when I could try and put something back into the system. It doesn't really make you too enthusiastic about trying to do something like that again, though."

Less negatively, however, he sees the current state of affairs as an ace way to ascertainwho's in it for the right reasons and who's not.

"People who've got talent and something to offer will stay in the business. Others will just fall by the wayside when they learn they're not going to get famous and earn a lot of money overnight," he reckons. "It's not just a leisure thing, it's gone beyond that. My main objective is defending my name. That's what it's about every time I DJ. I don't want to play out and have people dissing me. and I really don't think they can. They might not like the music I'm playing, but they certainly couldn't fault me technically because I practise hard."

Besides, Dave's not really in need of a scene to cling on to these days. Like Daft Punk, he much prefers to be a law unto himself, to simply be a top record producer and DJ, rather than a stalwart of the underground.

For instance, you can describe his new album as "accessible" as much as you care to and he certainly won't hate you for it.

"I wanted it to be accessible," he stresses. "We need more people in the business like Daft Punk. I mean, my son sings along to 'All Around The World' which shows how accessible they are. It's got to be better than, 'Here's a 909, here's a 303, let's go'. It doesn't work like that any more. That's history.

"And what's underground? When the days of the illegal parties finished, that was the end of the underground for me. When a party started at three o'clock in the morning and you didn't even know the location of it, that was underground. But most DJs pay their taxes now. Do they really believe they re still underground? We've got to change things in this country and work out what can happen after the underground. In other countries, though, it's only just beginning."

Which takes us back to "Globetrotting" and Dave is certain that, however under the weather the technoscene may appear to e in the UK, there are other realms where the enthusiasm is only just reaching full pelt.

"The world's big," he muses. "I travel all over and see these people getting into it for the first time. The look in their eyes says it all. You go to somewhere like New Zealand and you're not expecting much... Well, you're not expecting anything, really. Then you go to a club there and it's like being in London in 1988. How does that make me feel? Happy! And sad. It's hard to get that vibe going back home.

"But like I said earlier, we shouldn't really be depressed about it because you can't go back, not ever. We've got to find out about the next amazing thing which is waiting for us round the corner and get ready for that."

And it sure as hell won't be trad-techno, as Dave Angel has proved only too happy to admit. Of course, when it's so clearly a choice between entertaining a handful of people who are loafing in bedrooms (and a lot nearer 30 in age than 20, for that matter) or coming up with an album capable of enthralling the shockingly young, festival-going massive, it's pretty bloody obvious where the party is these days.

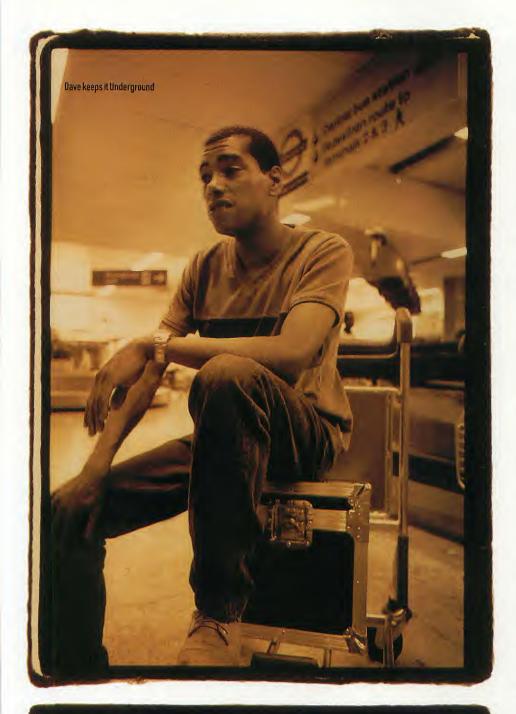

Jack to the sound of... yep, and indeed crikey... the overground.

'Globetrotting' is out now on Island

PACK YOUR BAGS AS DAVE ANGEL TAKES US 'GLOBETROTTING'... "COMING ON"

Drug paranoia a-go-go, courtesy of samples from the audio version of Hunter S Thompson's "Fear And Loathing In Vegas". Instant confirmation that this is no "Tales Of The Unexpected" Part Two.

"I though it'd be a crack to have something like this at the start. Then some strings come in and I can imagine people thinking. 'Oh yeah, another album of strings from Dave'. Not this time, though."

"PHILLY BLUNTZ"

Thumping affair that's slicker than a Lamborghini in top gear. Oh yes, and rather smoochy, too.

"Ha! It's speed house, I guess, or something like that. I was expecting Philadelphia to be a bit lame but it's actually really funky, full of total hardcore party people who do loads of drugs."

"FUNK MUSIC"

Mental wig-out music with razor-sharp incisors that snap at yer burn. Ouch. "This is me having a go at making the music which is really ripping now. I suppose I was influenced by the Daft Punk boys a lot. I really like the style that they've developed. I wanted this to sound... Very catchy, actually. "CLUB HELL"

If the last track wasn't feverish enough, this one sweats its brains out. Psycho vocals and jack track ethics throwing a major tantrum.

"Every city's got a club hell and some have got more than one. Any particular clubs? Erm... nah, I'm not saying. It's really is much better to exchange words at the time with these people, rather than fuck 'em up in the press."

"SENSOR ZURICH"

More floor-slaying grooves of the pulsating kind, with a slurred "You're the best" sample paying tribute to the Swiss club in question.

"It just keeps driving on and that's what they're like at Sensor. It's by far my favourite club in the world. There was a time when I was there and agreed to finish at about nine in the morning and have still been DJing at three the next afternoon."

'K ROAD NZ"

A jazz-tech-jungle hybrid and the chirpiest track on the album.

"It's dedicated to the Maoris who live on K Road in New Zealand. They're into all sorts of arts and music, particularly jazzy drum & bass. I'd never done drum & bass before but I rubbed up the tune in the studio and was really happy with it. The speed felt weird at first, but the beats are straightforward. It's the kind of drum & bass I like to hear... nice bass, complex melodies and not too many drums in front of music. Drums have got to know their place. They're there to keep time, not take over."

THIS IS DISCO'

Released as a single earlier this year, it's brisk, racy stuff which, as it happens, isn't all that disco-y.
"The name came about at the last minute. My record label said they wanted it as a single and I had to think of a title quickly. I made it when I was in a really good frame of mind. It was a lovely sunny day and I'd just bought this synth which generates sound by your breath. You blow into it and it plays the keys!"

"TOKYO STEALTH FIGHTER"

Phasers set to screech on this computer game-inspired homage to all things hi-tech.

"It reminds me of being 16 floors up in a hotel in Tokyo. I looked through the window and this crazy fucking city was staring back at me. I can picture this mad, high-speed hovercar flying across town. There are quite a few samples from computer games involved but I won't say which ones!"

"LIQUID ROOMS"

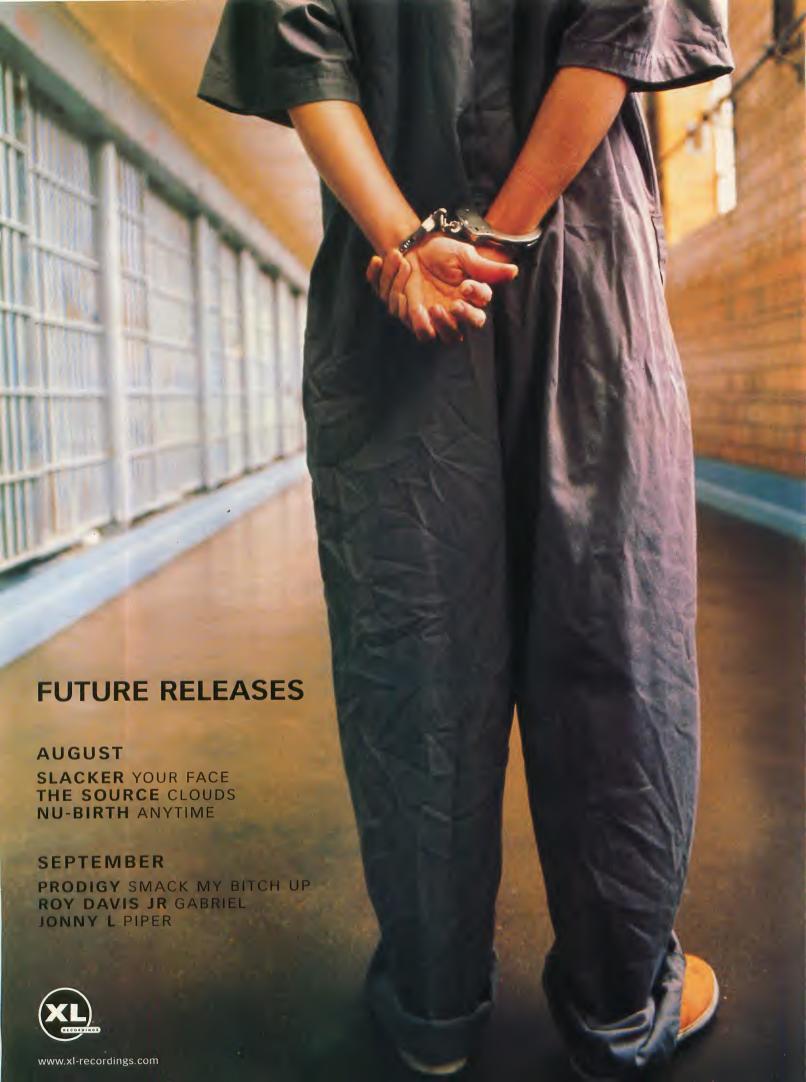

Perhaps the most Angel-of-old-sounding track on the album. Deepness abounds, in other words.

"The Liquid Rooms in Tokyo has got this great Ministry Of Sound-style sound system, so I made a track with the kind of living bassline which makes your stomach rumble. I can't wait to go back and try it out."

"CHICAGO EMERALD CITY"

Feisty, action-packed techno belter for party animals. Grrrrrrrr.

"I'd heard bad things about Chicago and wasn't sure if I wanted to go. Luke Slater was out there a few weeks before me. He went back to the airport in one car and his two record boxes went off in two other cars. That's the last he saw of them! When I got there and played at this Emerald City party in a basketball gym though, I felt really safe and the crowd was unbelievable. It didn't feel like the home of house, particularly. It wasn't like there were all these old house veterans wandering about. The crowd was very young and mixed. It had the vibe and electricity of an old UK warehouse party."

Ex-Ministry resident Harvey is back with monthly seven-hour sets at London's Blue Note club all-night sets are Harvey's speciality. Deeply engrossed in Deep Purple videos at his north London house/studio. Muzik probed the deep beat's mastermind about his past mammoth sets (including a three-day extravaganza in a London squat) and in particular his new monthly slot at The Blue Note. Not only does he play from 10 till 4am but also spends hours setting up his trademark quarter-inch reel-toreel player and customised mixing boards. With ultimate control over sound system. records played and lighting. he creates his own custom-built vibe. Here, then, is his guide to a typical Harvey set.

"I'll start with a song that has a message. Something like DC LaRue's slow disco monster, 'Do You Want The Real Thing'. More often than not it's the lyrical line I want to communicate at that time. I am asking the crowd if they want it and telling them that if they do. I can give it to them. 'It's Just Begun' by Jimmy Castor or 'First Time Around' by Sky are also good tunes to start with. They're basically warm-up records to get people in the mood. I'm into quite a slow development over the first few hours, which is why I have the same music in the bar upstairs. I make sure it's fairly quiet so the punters can still chat. Sometimes you need an assistant... Just in case you break your leg in the mix! Also, remember the first rule of D Jing. Don't drink and play records. It's like driving, you'll just fucking crash."

19-2 AM

"Once you feel the temperature rising, you know it's time. I might up the tempo very slightly with a modern house or disco record, maybe a cut from 'Moonrock' by Future Homosapiens or my re-edit of 'Joyous' by Pleasure. I'll throw in some fun elements too. like a bit of Eighties pop and rock. The Rolling Stones' 'Undercover Of The Night' and Kiss' 'I Was Made For You' are both faves. I'll also bung in some old skool hip hop, like Grandmaster Flash's 'Superrappin" or Grand Wizard Theodore's 'What's Your Sign', plus I'll play my own exclusive dub plates, re-edits, unreleased Black Cock cuts and maybe some Idjut Boys stuff. I like to play around with my reel-to-reel as well. Effects can get too much, so I'm careful not to force the point and just add little flavours instead. I only have one copy of each record, but I can create another on the spot with my reel-to-reel and play it back over itself and remix it right there."

2-4AM

"The last two hours are the best. Those who aren't enjoying it have gone home and we're left with the hardcore. They're high, loving the music and having a great time. I like to call this part of the night 'the disco connection'. Basically, I play a house record with a disco sample in it, then I play the original. It links people dancing to house into something they may not have heard before. I'll play some classics right at the end, such as Loleatta Holloway's 'Catch Me On the Rebound' and 'The More I Get The More I Want'. Both these tunes are telling people to come back. It's real good-time music. If I see people snogging in a club that's always a good sign!"

METHADONE DEATHS

"Something strange was going on," declared the presenter of the recent "Panorama" documentary which identified a spate of methadone-related drug deaths in Blyth.

Alhough the programme was unable to uncover details on all 19 deaths, since some parents of the deceased were unwilling to co-operate, listed below is information on some of those who died. 1993

Ben Nesbitt (19), Susan Calbert (16), Steven Tate (26) and an unnamed 21-yearold girl all died after mixing methadone with other drugs. 1994

Jenny Hindhaugh (17) died after taking a cocktail which included black market methadone and Valium,

An unnamed 18-year-old man died after mixing methadone and alcohol. 1995

An unnamed 19-year-old man died of drug cocktail which included significant quantities of methadone.

Robert Hodgson (22) was found dead with 12 empty bottles of methadone in his lodgings.

An unnamed 16-year-old man died after taking a drugs cocktail including methadone. Chris Mitchell (13) died after mixing methadone taken from his older brother's prescription bottle with Valum and cannabis.

Juliet Strawn (25) died after taking methadone and heroin.
Lee Hayer (16) died after taking 35ml of prescribed methadone as well as injecting Temazepam.

Keiran Tiffin (25) died from a methadone cocktail.

Steven Thorn (26) died from heroin and methadone. Louise Brown (21) died after taking methadone bought on the black market. Steven Heindhoff (23) died after taking black market methadone. Peter Regan (19) died after mixing his prescribed methadone with heroin.

Peter had become addicted to methadone after buying it on the black market, and was later prescribed the same drug to ween him off his subsequent heroin addiction.

On June 30, the BBC's documentary programme "Panorama" visited the small town of Blyth in Northumberland. It focussed the high number of deaths in the town (19 in a year) among those who were mixing methadone with other drugs. We also headed for Blyth, but unlike "Panorama", our brief wasn't to question the logic of the local health authority prescribing methadone as liberally as it does but to try to find out more about the lives of the people at the centre of this media storm

IF Blyth is a town with a scarred heart, it hides its wounds well. About 15 miles to the north of Newcastle, it's a little bleak, with the wind blowing in from the North Sea. smoke billowing from its power station and row upon row of vast ecowindmills running along its outskirts, but it seems prosperous enough on this bright Thursday afternoon in July. The small shopping centre buzzes with life. Gangs of kids play on bizes and seagulls squawk and swoop overhead. Can this be the right place?

We know it is because of the suspicion which greets us in many places. Because of the landlord who guesses we're journalists and states in no uncertain terms that we're not welcome round here. Because of the fact that nobody at Blyth's Community Hospital is available to talk to us. Not now, not tomorrow, not ever.

By the evening things aren't looking too good. We're in another pub now, talking to another landlord, a man who between bouts of extreme racism and oafishness responds to our comments about rising drug use in London by asking. "Did you see that 'Panorama' programme?"

TALES FROM THE PHARM SIDE

M.D. works as projects officer in health care consultancy for a charity. Between 1991 and 1992, he worked as a locum chemist in the Edinburgh region, dispensing methadone on a regular basis

"When I worked in Wester Hailes. I was actually locked in the dispensary. For the methadone, you'd usually try and make it up in the morning before anyone came in. The scripts were written so you could dispense it in instalments, dispensing their daily amount for maybe the next two days. I remember times when people went mad and screamed at me because I wouldn't dispense more than their daily allowance. They'd say, 'Well, I've got a job interview in London, I've got to get it'.

"I've heard all the stories under the sun. 'My granny's died'. That's a classic. Some people had 15 grannies. Their granny died every couple of weeks. They'd come in and say. 'My granny's died. Again!'. Sometimes it would be legitimate and you'd phone up the doctor and then maybe dispense four days supply instead of two. A lot of the time people didn't take it themselves, they'd sell it instead. Either that, or they'd take the drug themselves, then put mouthwash into the bottle and sell it as if it was methadone. £10 for 20ml of mouthwash.

"People don't always look to you for your pharmaceutical knowledge. Working in Wester Hailes was often like working in a war zone. One day, I dispensed a guy a prescription for methadone. He came back two minutes later, bleeding all over the place. He'd been slashed six or seven times. I just went out to try and dress the guy's wounds. People would regularly get cut up outside the shopping centre for their methadone prescription.

"It can get a bit over the top. My colleague had a situation where an eight-year-old girl came in to collect 'mummy's medicine'. He said told the girl her mum would have to come in and collect it herself. And the girl said, 'Mummy's at home shaking and she can't move because she hasn't got her medicine'. Apparently, it was a daily occurrence for her to come in. What effect must that have had on her? An eight-year old girl? There were other times when people would get so out of control that you'd have to walk over to the sink with their bottle of methadone, hold it over the sink and say, 'If you don't calm down, your daily allowance is going down the sink'.

"I think there should be a way to ensure that people taking methadone are actually taking it themselves and not simply using it as an additional currency. But let's be honest, we're working in a very pressurised Health Service where it's easy to go, 'Okay, there's your script. Now get out of my face'."

We didn't, we reply.

'That reporter was good but not good enough to sort out what's going on here. He wouldn't let me on the show because he said I'd get me windows smashed if I said what I wanted to say."

Time for us to leave...

By midday on Friday we're finally getting somewhere. We find the Baron Of Blyth, the chemists where most of the town's registered heroin addicts pick up their prescription methadone or "juice", a Class A drug usually dispensed as a bright green linctus.

Within minutes of us arriving, the first of a number of users (men and women aged between 16 and 30) arrive to pick up their prescriptions. We approach three teenage lads first. All baggy jeans, baseball caps, shaved heads and earrings, they refuse to give us their names or offer more than a few short sentences.

"It's the 'Drug Baron Of Blyth', this place," jests one.

"Some people are doing methadone to help themselves," says another.

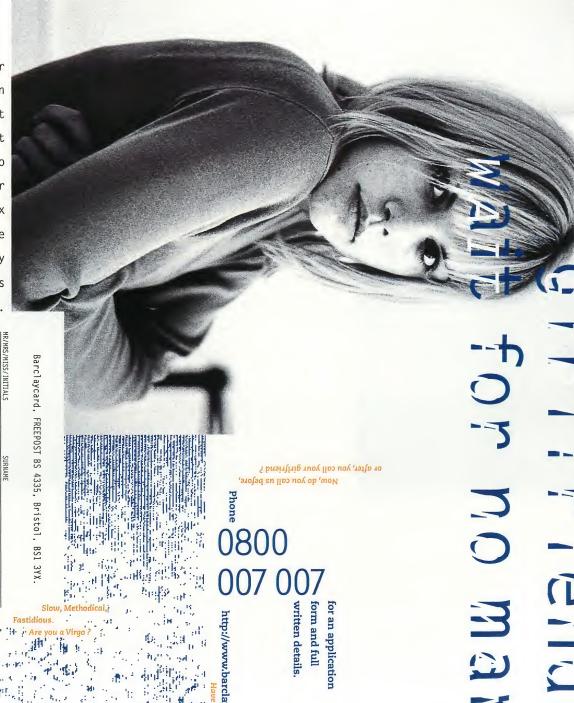

Which is the sum total of what we learn, until we meet a 30-year-old who, though he refuses to give his name or be photographed, tells us that he got into heroin and methadone after

It's her birthday. You promised her something special but you didn't bargain on your car needing that service last week. You should have a Barclaycard. It gives you so much more flexibility to manage your money and, if you pay your bill by the due date, you get fifty-six days interest free credit. But, you're skint, and she's waiting. You've already been hit hard once this month. Looks like she's going to make it twice.

spending his early 20-something years emersed in the club and warehouse party scenes of Leeds and Manchester while he was studying at university. After a while he decided his after-dark activities were more important to him than his studies and eventually opted to return to his native Blyth.

"I got into the rave scene around 1990," he says. "Then we started having house parties and I met up with a different group of people. Through them I started flirting with heroin. I loved the 'red and yellows' and the 'black and reds' [types of E] because they had barbiturates in them. The comedowns weren't that severe, but then snowballs appeared and you needed something more than spliff to ease you down. My perfect weekend round that time was to score Es. get my gear [heroin] and if I was really lucky, get some Temazepams [a prescription barbiturate otherwise known as 'jellies'] as well.

"It was just a weekend affair, though. I'd go and see these people who lived on an estate outside Manchester and I was infatuated with the drugs they had."

Did taking heroin seem like a big step on from taking drugs like E and speed?

"I'm just part of that culture," he replies bluntly. "It's simply the way we grew up. . . Glue-sniffing at 14, cannabis at 15, LSD at 17, and it went on from there."

He says he got his methadone prescription three years ago after his dalliance with heroin developed into a fully-fledged habit.

"I was shooting up all kinds of downers before I got me script. I was crushing up pills and injecting them. The only reason I didn't get in too much trouble was because I've got quite large veins from doing a physical job."

His interest in clubbing declined as his penchant for these drugs increased.

"I'm too old for it now." he reckons, mentioning that "bleep techno" was his favourite sound. "When the heroin and methadone come along, you lose your bite."

When asked whether anyone in Blyth currently uses methadone alongside club drugs, he says he hasn't a clue, then hints that maybe there are.

"If you find 'em, tell 'em they're fucking idiots. If people can avoid the payback time of coming down off dodgy Es, I guess they will. It's okay for me because I'm a registered heroin addict. But these kids, they're asking for trouble. Lesson number one: don't take fast drugs and slow drugs because your heart can't take it, 20mls of the stuff can kill you."

It's getting dark now and the only prescribed methadone user who was willing to talk to us has gone and we're on our own again.

Two hours later, we get chatting about the 'Panorama' programme to a group of lads in a pub. Offering no names as usual, they say they ve tried methadone but don't do it much now. However, they know some people who still mix it with club drugs and say that maybe they'll talk to us.

At the other end of the same pub sits an ordinary-looking group, both male and female, who mainly live on the more affluent estates in nearby Cramlington. One of the group, a short lad in his early 20s with slicked back hair and smart clothes, says he's called James. He won't give his surname for fear of losing his job. He confirms that his crowd use methadone to come off of Ecstasy.

He also says they do Temazepam and heroin as well, although the latter is hard to get hold of, and, he stresses vehemently, they never inject it. He tells us they get their methadone from Newcastle, claiming that the people in Blyth who sell their prescriptions are "a right pain if you let them know you use the stuff".

"You don't get a hit if you use it on its own." he says. "You just get the fuzziness and itches, which is why we take Temazepam as well and drink loads. If you do all of it together you get a hit.

"The first time I did it I was straight. I had one joint, then did some juice and went to the pictures. All it did was completely knock me out. Apparently I did quite a lot for a the first time, 40 or 50mls, which is fuckin' loads. It lasted ages, well into the next day. I started vomiting in the end.

METHADONE - THE FACTS

- Methadone (or methadone hydrochloride to give it its full title) was first produced in Germany during the Second World War as a painkiller similar to natural opium which was hard to find at the time.
- It is a Class A drug which is mainly used as a prescribed treatment for heroin addicts (in liquid form, called methadone linctus).
- It's usually coloured bright green (although it sometimes comes in brown or yellow form) to distinguish it from other drugs.
- It's a slow-release drug, taking an average of 25 hours for the level in your system to decrease to approximately half that which was present 45 minutes after consumption.
- How addictive it is depends on the individual, though for many it's more addictive than heroin.
- As with many "downers", mixing methadone with other drugs can be lethal.

like something out of. . . I dunno, the fuckin' 'Exorcist'. I thought, 'Bollocks, I'm not doing that again'. Then, about six months later, when I was well into the E, we came back from a club and I took some again, but I had Valium as well, and smoked myself stupid. It took the edge right off the pills. The meth slowed my heart rate down and killed off the bad E comedown brilliantly."

So James and his mates take a veritable cocktail of substances most Fridays and Saturdays, but methadone is the constant.

"It's poor man's heroin in a way, but we can get it dead easy and we know how to use it," he explains. "It's dangerous if you're not careful. It's easy to decide to take some more and eventually do too much of it."

James and his mates, about 12 of them in all, are off to nearby Whitley Bay tonight and, growing cautious of our presence with some his group telling him to stop talking to us, they decline to let us tag along.

Whitley Bay is five miles from Blyth. Once it was a famous holiday resort, but during the day now it's just a row of shabby arcade game "entertainment centres".

By night, however, a host of disco bars open up and packs of youngsters swarm in from the numerous nearby towns. To all intents and purposes, they make like they're holidaying in Spain or the Balearics, the girls in scanty tops and short skirts, irrespective of the fierce wind, and the blokes in their shiniest shoes and silkiest shirts.

It doesn't take us long to spot James and some of his mates heading from one neonlit venue to another. It's just after 11pm and they're all on varying quantities of E and speed. As such, they're less guarded and more willing to let us follow them around.

A couple of hours of negotiating burly bouncers and dancing to brash handbag tunes duly whirl by. Aside from one brief period when it looks like there's going to be a ruck involving two of James' mates and a bunch of other lads, it's pleasant enough. Finally, we're allowed to follow them back to James' place.

We arrive at a small flat in a modern block on the outskirts of Blyth. James invites us to sit in his lounge with five of his mates (two girls, three guys) who tell us they reckon they're far more sussed than those users who are "addicts and on scripts". As a tape of house tracks recorded off the radio plays softly in the background, they claim that nobody's stupid here: that they could've pointed out numerous other clubbers in Whitley Bay who use methadone; that they've all got decent jobs and none of them has any intention of dying.

What follows is a lot of waiting round with James not permitting us to see him or his mates taking the methadone linctus, temazepam or DF 118 heroin substitute pills they have in the kitchen. It starts to get light and another friend calls round briefly, then goes. Soon after, they've all fallen asleep.

James eventually wakes up, bright red in the face and saying that doing "juice" often gives him constipation. At last he lets us take pictures of the drugs in his kitchen.

"Yeah, I've been sleeping but it's not like you're just sleeping when you're on meth," he mumbles, pouring out a cup of the linctus from a brown bottle for Muzik to photograph. "You get some good feelings off it if you boost it up with these [he points to a selection of barbiturate pills on the table]. Then you get the dreams, the feeling that you're floating off and can fly wherever you want... these mad hallucinations that you're in total control of."

"It looks nice, yeah?" he grins, passing us the cup of bright green liquid. "Like some syrupy stuff that your mum gives you. There's a lot of sugar in it, though. It rots your fucking teeth, so we always do it through straws."

Not long after, James abruptly decides he wants us to go and doesn't want to answer questions about quite why they've taken the art of coming down to such an extreme. Right now, he couldn't give a fuck about whether more young people will soon be extinguishing the jagged descent from Ecstasy with this florid green juice.

"I don't want you round here any more, alright?" he says testily. "I reckon you've done enough spying so go home." And we do.

METHADONE ABUSE – WHAT THE DRUG ADVICE AGENCIES SAY

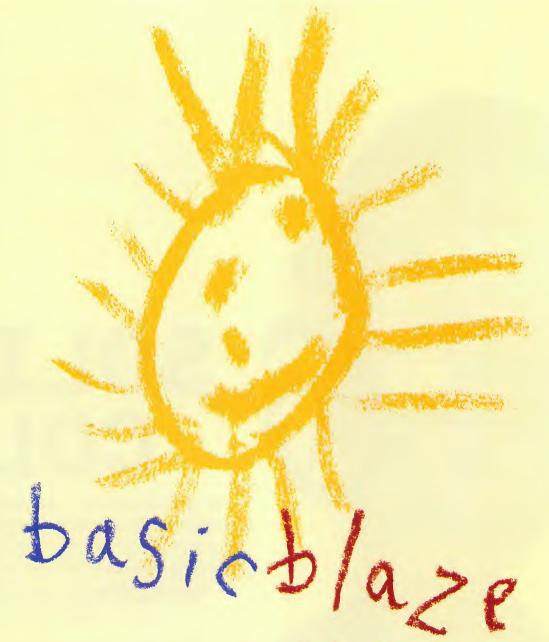

CLARE ROBINS FROM RELEASE

"We're getting a lot of calls at the moment from people who buy methadone illicitly. It's common knowledge that some users stockpile their supply and then sell it to buy other drugs or whatever. We tend to think that stuffwe swallow is less harmful to us. Some people might see it as cleaner and safer than heroin, but it's actually very dangerous."

A SPOKESPERSON FOR DRUG CONCERN

"Many clinics are trying to stop the black market trade in methadone by making people consume their prescription on the spot. There's also a trade in what's called 'spit-outs', when people hold the liquid in their mouths and then spit it into a bottle as soon as they get outside. If you get the person to actually say something in the clinic, it's quite hard for them to avoid swallowing the methadone.

"Youths are so used to using drugs likes Es and speed that some treat heroin and methadone as just different drugs to try. They missed out on the whole period in the Seventies and Eighties when heroin was really demonised in the press. The way they see it, only idiots can't handle drugs and they're being told that if they smoke heroin or drink methadone, it'll take the edge off the comedown from Es. It will, of course, but they're likely to get a habit as well."

"Are we the Gaudis of dance music? I guess you could say that," Matt Black nods.

"Yeah," agrees partner Jonathan More, pointing out over the city to the contorted genius of Sagrada Familia in the distance. "And 'Say Kids...' was our Sagrada!"

Like Antoni Gaudi, Coldcut construct incredible playpens of sound and vision from their big, old scrapbook of source material. The base materials may have changed but the working method certainly hasn't. They spend hours, days even, poring over the modern equivalent of ancient tomes (obscure records) looking for snippets of drums, toff-nosed speeches and ragtime melodies. They plunder the vaults of funk, hip hop and soul, carry out night-time raids on American TV hosts and British politicians, accumulating the flotsam and jetsam of the 20th Century to reassemble it into punk funk, spraytime dope beats and polemic party music. For 10 years, they've been cutting and pasting their way onto dancefloors, into charts, across airwaves. Ripping it up by tearing it up.

You should be well aware of their methods by now. If you don't possess their awesome "Journeys By DJ" compilation, your record collection is probably cursing you right now. If you live in proximity of a Kiss FM transmitter, you'll probably have caught their "Solid Steel" two-hour mash-up every Saturday night. It's like tuning in to the craziest, freakiest, funkiest radio show from the far end of the galaxy you've ever heard. A show where Herbie Hancock gives way to scratchy foxtrot 78s, where the cutting edge of Nineties mutant beats slides with a nonchalant grin into 10 minutes of comedy from Bill Hicks or Derek & Clive. "Something heavy, something fun" is one of their many maxims and for two hours, that's what you get to the max.

Coldcut

"Basically, the last 10 years of using computers has served to reinforce the cut and paste mentality to an even stronger level, one where it's not likely to disappear," believes Matt.

Ten years ago, they put together "Beats & Pieces", a funky, amorphous jam constructed entirely out of other people's records. This month sees the release of "More Beats & Pieces". essentially a freshening up of the original with alternative sample sources that rocks even harder than its predecessor.

The thing is, sitting in a Barcelona tapas bar the night before their debut live performance at the city's prestigious Sonar festival of electronica, they're not up for talking about the past. As Matt states reasonably enough, "our history is a matter of record. It's stuff we're doing now that we want to talk about". So we gloss over Lisa and Yazz, pausing only to guffaw at the time the pair found themselves performing on German television. Inside a giant barrel. Which was rotating. We try not to get bogged down in the murky details of their battles with major record labels, firstly Big Life (home of their eradefining singles "The Only Way Is Up", "People Hold On", "Doctorin' The House" and "Stop This Crazy Thing") and latterly, Arista (who sneaked out Coldcut's last album, the soul-oriented "Philosophy"). We shake our heads at stories of pluggers and liggers and corporate vultures and agree that, thank fuck, Coldcut have put all that behind them.

"It was a learning experience" says Jonathan with barely a trace of resentment. Though he is far closer to a Zen state of tranguillity than the frantic Matt will probably ever get. "We learnt something and that's what's made us stronger now."

Matt Black once famously said, "It's not that we're so brilliant, it's that everyone else is crap". What on earth was he thinking?

'What I meant was how frustrated we are with the general pace of progress and what we see as the way forward.

You're impatient, aren't you? He looks, as he frequently does when discussing the music industry at large, perturbed to the point of edgy apoplexy.

"Of course I'm impatient. I'm impatient with the whole scene. As far as I can see, it's not saying squat. It's just moving at a snail's pace and it's very infuriating. It's a frustration with people being so narrow that they're never going to get out of their box."

Hang on a sec. Coldcut have always maintained they're "ahead of their time". But isn't that easy to claim when you've got enough hi-tech hardware in your Ninja Tunes HQ to make Bill Gates envious? When you've got 10 years experience, 10 years of production, engineering, sonic pioneering. Haven't you got a head start on most others?

"I know what your saying." Matt accedes. "But you can take any old shit and make something completely brilliant out of it. Like Squarepusher, he doesn't even use a keyboard. He's just got a drum machine and an $950. When we started, we only had turntables and a cassette machine. Even now, you could take those elements and make a mind-blowing record out of just the noise you taped in a supermarket. But people don't do it. They'd rather produce crap rip-offs of establishment and conspiracy-produced Macdonald's house music.

And he's right, of course. Indignation at the feebleness of those around them is what drives Matt and the Coldcut ethos. Sometimes it drives him mad. This, after all, is the duo who opted out of the mainstream industry machine just when they had it all going for them. They went to Japan in the early Nineties and discovered the secret life of the Ninja. A life of guile, reinvention, disappearing through a trap door and reappearing somewhere entirely unexpected. They started up their independent Ninja Tune label, practically invented the trip hop genre with the early DJ Food albums, thrust the greatness of nu cool beat-merchants like Funki Porcini, DJ Vadim and Herbaliser upon an eager world and still refused to accept that they were any more than mere catalysts.

"I've never liked the idea of being a statue," observes Matt caustically, "they tend to get knocked over. I just think we're part of the process of planting seeds and tending our patch, growing some stuff that can flower and spread its own seeds and grow.

WHO'S IN THE HOUSE

THOSE COLDCUT ALBUM COLLABORATORS IN FULL

JELLO BIAFRA—Infamous ex-lead singer of notorious US punk band, The Dead Kennedys, who sang songs like "Holiday In Cambodia" and "Too Drunk To Fuck". Once prosecuted by the US authorities for giving away a free "Penis" poster with his "Frankenchrist" album. Now a vociferous campaigner for freedom of speech and a researcher for the "Incredibly Strange Music" books.

STEINSKI — New York DJ whose bootleg records in the Eighties with Double D revolutionised people's attitude to sampling and hip hop's possibilities. Only ever released two legit records, including "It's Up To You" on Ninja Tune in 1992. Now working in advertising and is rarely seen or heard of. Until now. SELINA SALIVA — London poetess discovered by Shane Ninja. Probably nother real name. Gets really pissed and does poetry readings to music from DJ Del Ruby. Has played The End. the Ministry and 333 recently.

JIMPSTER — Manchester producer, Jamie Odell, much favoured by Mixmaster Morris and Coldcut, responsible for the fantastic "Martian Arts EP" on his own Freestyle label and tagged as a future Squarepusher/Aphex Twin. With less weirdness. TALVIN SINGH — The Anokha man, spearheading the Asian assimilation into the new wave of beatnology with his tabla playing, remixes and work with Bjork. BERNARD PURDIE - Funk drummer. Played on a lot of Motown stuff. "Soul Drums", his most famous record, has been sampled a million times, and contains Jon's favourite drums ever.

The following night, at the Sonar Festival, Matt and Jonathan, together with Rob Pepperell and Al Tod, their partners in the Hex multimedia venture, stage their first live gig for many moons. It's a fascinating spectacle. State-of-the-art video mixing rubs images of politicians, road protesters, game show hosts, rainforest destruction and cartoons of Coldcut, up against each other, interspersed with bite-size witticisms of which the pair are so fond. Example? "Computers are userfriendly. They're just choosy about who they make friends with."

But it's an event marking more than just their emergence from a self-enforced hibernation. This is the first time they're attempting to run the whole concert with a new software package they've been developing at Hex. It's the coming of the Powerbook generation. A whittling down of the entire live process into just one portable laptop, thanks to a programme called "Playtime." Like Brian Eno's experiments with KOAN, "Playtime" uses algorithms to randomise the live event. All the sound components are in the computer somewhere. The order in which they come out is entirely down to the buttons that Matt and Jonathan are pressing.

"We're DJs so we need these tools," Matt explains. "I'm in no doubt that this is the next big step forward. It's something people want! Put it this way, if I heard this on the decks, I'd want to buy it. It's unbelievably new, unbelievably shocking. Our next album could just be a CD-ROM with tracks which just automatically remix themselves forever. And they're either programmed or you're in control. It would be truly interactive."

The advantage? Check the new album for the remix of "More Beats & Pieces" with American punk poet Jello Biafra. Vocals recorded in the States. Music jammed for two weeks in the Ninja studio. Except that not a single new note was generated. The funked-up backing track was simply a random rearrangement of already existing basslines, drum patterns and sound effects. This is cut 'n' paste for the 21st Century and we could well be talking minor revolution here.

"We fed a DAT of his vocals into the computer and just jammed with our machines." reveals Jonathan. "It's a DNA ROM... Do No Art. You can just turn on your machine and it does it all for you. It's going to be a big fuck-off to people who think art is something sacred that only a few people have got the ability to produce. We've got this machine that's as good as you are... In the hands of anyone. And if they enjoy making music on that, isn't that as good as someone practising scales on the bass for 15 years?"

At times though, the blind leap of faith in the power of the machines isn't paid back. There are occasions during the Sonar set when it sounds like LSD-confused mice are at the controls, an arhythmic squelch of interlocked sounds generating confusion rather than power. Jonathan will later admit to his frustration "when we couldn't get back to the funk again" but, as he's keen to point out, it's this very risk-taking, the challenge to get back in the groove, that makes a Coldcut performance radically different to any other technology-based act out there.

I tell Coldcut that their approach to technology is like that of Future Sound Of London. Except Coldcut have lost the latter's po-faced sense of self-indulgence. Rather than blinding us with science, Matt and Jonathan make something for us all to share. It's not about elevation, it's about democratisation. When you buy the new Coldcut album, it comes with a free CD-ROM which deserves to have them canonised. There are videos of some of the tunes, the hilarious Coldcut dictionary, a beatnology general knowledge quiz. And there's a working version of Playtime. Just load up and anyone can be making killer loops and devious tracks thanks to the enormous banks of sounds available. It's like buying an entire mini-studio for under £15.

As Matt puts it in another of his passionate rants, "We want to tilt the balance back towards individual creativity as opposed bureaucratic, pyramidal, alpha-maledominated organisations. We're revolutionaries. Mixing desk revolutionaries.

'More Beats And Pieces' is out now on Ninja Tune. 'Let Us Play' is released in September

SOME THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT COLDCUT

- —Jonathan is an ex–art teacher, Matt a former biochemist
- —Their 1987 debut single, "Say Kids" was sampled by M/A/R/R/S —'The Only Way Is Up", with Yazz, was Number One for six weeks
- —They got paid a mere £750 for their classic mix of Eric B & Rakim's "Paid In Full"
- —They've been DJing on Kiss FM for nearly 10 years
- —They won BPI Producers Of The Year in 1990
- —The first volumes of the "DJ Food Jazz Brakes" series are the roots of trip hop
- Ninja Tune's offices are opposite The Clink, London's first prison situated above an ancient Roman road
 Their 1993 album for Arista, "Atmosphere", never received a full release
- —They once made a video game called "Top Banana"
- —On vinyl, DJ Food is Coldcut with Strictly Kev and Patrick Carpenter
- -On the decks, DJ Food is Strictly Key and Patrick Carpenter
- -Hex is their multi-media offshoot
- —They worked with Grandmaster Flash on a track for the new album, but it didn't make the grade
- -George Michael sampled DJ Food for his last album. It cost him a large sum of money and two pairs of silk socks!

cooler shakers

The sonic boom of another hard funking bassline slices through the dancefloor. In the kaleidoscopic fog, a Versace-clad uber-babe and dreadlocked zippy in Stussy share podium space to throw wild, lucid shapes. Around them the crowd roar their approval under the glare of the UVs as the DJ takes it deeper with the next slab of disco madness. Upstairs, a barrage of 303s hurtle from the speakers, inducing a non-chemical rush fuelled by chunky, rolling beats. The atmosphere is electric and it sounds like the Battle of the Somme. Welcome to the frontline. Welcome to Wobble.

HELL TUNES

So ingrained is Wobble into the British clubbing consciousness, it's hard to imagine life without it. Not only is Wobble one of the few clubs to have lasted the pace, it's done so by pushing forward a progressive musical agenda shaped under the watchful eye of promoters and resident DJs, Phil Gifford and Si Long.

Prior to Wobble, the duo had DJed at various parties and one-offs in and around the urban blight known as Birmingham. They'd even run a short-lived night, Naughty But...?, at a strip joint in the centre of town, playing Balearic sets to punters ogling various young ladies', erm, assets. But with the clientele (somewhat understandably) taking little notice of the sounds on offer, they were soon looking around for more suitable and appreciative audiences for their widescreen DJ soundtracks.

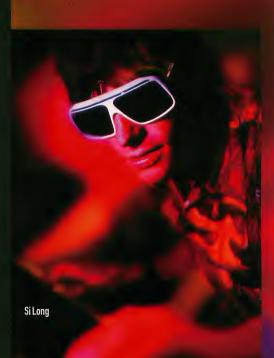

Beginning in early 1992, Wobble was the sort of club for which words like "seminal" were invented. Originally just an attic room affair (the night expanded into both rooms in 1994). Phil and Si played hard-edged underground dance music to a club "full of kids just completely off their knackers". Although very open-minded about their music. each developed their own specialities: Phil spinning uplifting house and party-oriented tunes while Si dropped banging acid and abrasive Detroit cuts.

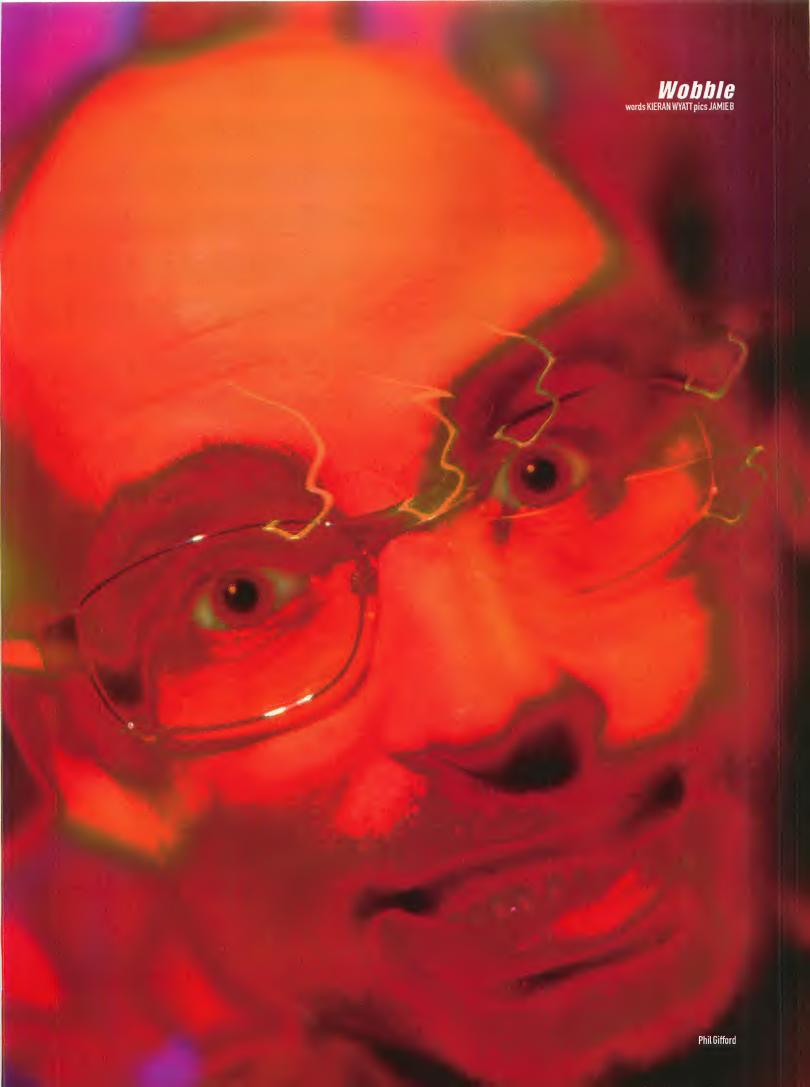

"When the club first started, I was really the crowd-pleaser," says Phil, over a pint in the local boozer. "I was into giving the crowd what they wanted and making them go mad. Si had this 'no sell-out, get lost, fuck you, I'm not playing any of that crap' attitude."

Si slowly looks up from his doorstop-sized chicken tikka sarnie. "Hell tunes." he deadpans, with the sort of evil leer that Hannibal Lecter made his speciality. The early days were, according to the duo. "fucking mental" with the kids more often than not taking their inspiration from the two geezers behind the decks.

"In the first year of the club, we got such a bad name as DJs because we were so mashed we couldn't put two records together," laughs Phil. "It was like Amateur Hour. But trying to spin with a bottle of poppers jammed up your hooter wasn't easy."

In a swirt of smoke, strobes and highly potent narcotics, kids were banging on the doors at 10pm and banging on the floors at 7am, desperate for one last tune.

"I definitely lost half my brain back then," states Si. Did he ever find it again? "Oh no," he replies. Quite.

Phil, meanwhile, was trying to hold down a day job as a hairdresser, a somewhat bizarre choice of occupation for one so, how can we put this, folically-challenged.

"It was a real struggle to give a straight haircut when you'd been caning it all over the weekend. In the end I was so frazzled that if anyone complained about their haircut I would quite simply tell them to 'fuck off'. Which wasn't great business sense.

JUST SAY CHEESE

What was great business sense was the expansion of the club onto two floors in 1994 which helped develop the music policy which has made Wobble so popular: commercial and pure house sounds downstairs and more underground vibes (twisted techno, breakbeats. drum & bass) upstairs. Also around this time the guest DJ circuit was fully up and running.

"We purposely didn't book the big names at the start." maintains Phil. "But when the whole guest thing reached its peak between 1994 and 1996, we had no choice really. But it's coming full circle now. People like Jeremy Healy and Judge Jules are no longer guaranteed crowdpullers. Anyhow, the cheesy house merchants don't really go down well at our club anymore.

Like the best clubs built around a strong core of residents, Phil reckons Wobble has been able to dictate the music policy easier than most rather than rely on the whims of an increasingly fickle clubland audience.

"I remember Daft Punk's 'Da Funk' when it came out on Soma years ago. I didn't hear it anywhere else because it was a slow tune. But it was massive at Wobble. We just dropped it in whenever we felt like it."

Other residents were added over the years. There was Matt Skinner in 1994 ("He could play all night as far as we're concerned."), The Lovely Helen (who is now massive on the guest circuit) in 1995 and the bizarrely-named occasional jock, Harrison Daniels in 1996. It's as much due to the popularity and proficiency of the residents as the changing nature of the guest DJ phenomenon that Wobble are moving into a fresh direction from August of this year.

"Over the past couple of years we've slowly gone about turning the music policy around," Phil says. "From August, it'll be Dimitri From Paris, Weatherall, Stacey Pullen, people like that. And we're also looking at getting a new monthly Friday thing going with hip hop, jazz, deep house, electro, techno, you name it. Basically we're sacking off the whole cheesy guest thing.

It's official... Wobble is now Stilton-free.

IF YOUR NAME'S NOT DOWN...

It hasn't always been a smooth ride for the Wobble boys though. Their door policy has attracted more than it's fair share of attention, not least in the letters pages of Muzik.

You need some sort of policy in Birmingham," states Phil, matter-of-factly. "We don't want people in there with their tops off, sweating to death and gurning their faces off. Just because you have a door policy, people instantly think 'Ooh, smart and glam' which is the furthest thing from our mind. We want anyone who's thought about what they're wearing, not someone who's rolled up in a fucking checked shirt and loafers. There's nothing worse than having a club full of geezers in straight jeans, tucked-in Ralph Lauren shirts and Rockports. We like to think we're the dividing factor between Fun, Miss Moneypennies, Atomic Jam and the House Of God. We're that bit in the middle. A door policy for that sort of club is inevitably going to be hard."

Phew. That's told us. Just remember lads, no moustaches.

The punters at the club are, they reckon, a pretty bizarre lot.

They seem to rotate about every six months," says Si, with a bemused look on his face. "I mean, you get a group there week in, week out coming up to you saying 'Wobble is my life' and then they just completely disappear. You never see them again. Ever. Which is really mad."

Wobble have resisted the temptation to go for the whole marketing/CD/tours/Ibiza superclub angle. And maybe it's just as well really, seeing as there's a bit of a gulf between what people think the club is all about and the reality of the Wobble Experience (TM).

"Everyone has Wobble down as some sort of handbag club which plainly isn't the case." says an exasperated Phil. As anyone who went to one of their Good Old Fashioned Night Out (GOFNO) hoe-downs at the Angle Gallery in Brum back in 1995 (where a collage of deep house, trip hop, drum & bass and techno soundtracked a free buffet and board game sessions) will testify. Phil and Si are hardly Johnnycome-lately big choon merchants.

WHAT'S WOBBLE ALL ABOUT?

Sarah, 22, student: "The good vibe." Karen, hairdresser: "It reminds me where the last four years of my life have gone."

Geoff from Renaissance: "How can you explain it? Temazepam probably." Niki, 19, student: "It's just bizarre." Danny, 18, student: "Fun and sex, man!" Barney, promoter of Fun: "It fucks with the system."

Carly, dancer: "Wibble wobble." Sally, legal secretary: "Bibble bobble." Lee, 21, model: "Phil Gifford breakdancing in the nude. Sarah, 20, sales rep: "The only place to go when Cream's not on. In from Renaissance: " Jelly " Desmond, artist: "The people are really up for it."

upstairs.' Phil Gifford, professional dodgy geezer: "Losing touch with any social life I had

Paul, 18, student: "The really deep and funkyhouse."

Kate, 18, student: "For the music, what else is there?"

"We've done these Wobble nights at other clubs and the promoter hasn't always been fully aware of what we're all about. It's like if we're playing some deep groovy stuff instead of the big cheesy European noises you suddenly get some teenage promoter behind you going [adopts comical kid's voice] 'Ooh go on mate, lift it up a bit mate. It's not fast enough'. The kids are still dancing though. They might not have their hands in the air and be jumping around but they're still well into it."

Still, there's hope yet. Maybe if they wanted corporate sponsorship they could approach Y-front king, Calvin Klein. Pants, you see, are a bit of a thing with Phil.

"I've done it loads of times," he grins, in reference to his legendary propensity for dropping his undies at every available opportunity and giving everyone an eyeful of the crown jewels. "Not particularly at my club, mind. Usually at other people's clubs. Anyway, since the music's got a touch more serious over the past couple of years, there's been a lot less pant-dropping at the club." Glad we cleared that one up.

DIRTY DANCING

Having been involved in clubs and music for so long, it was inevitable that the boys would make the move into production. Si had been tinkering with sampling and keyboards from an early age, but it wasn't until the duo hooked up with Steve Gurney, a friend of Si's from Coventry, that they were able to more fully realise their music-making aspirations.

As a threesome, they launched the House Of Naughty label with the intention of releasing their own music under a bewildering array of monikers. Five hundred copies here, a thousand copies there, the cuts ranged from upfront house through Josh Wink-style wiggly breakbeats to more underground French-flavoured disco grooves. So how did they feel when they first dropped one of their own cuts at Wobble?

"Pissed off actually because they didn't really like it," smiles Phil. "We've all got such eclectic tastes. I really like a lot of hip hop and indie. Si's a bit of an old jazz merchant and Steve releases five-inch hardcore thrash metal singles in Japan. Steve's eclectic tastes and experiences contribute vividly to the threesome's sound.

He's toured the world as an engineer and mixer with electronic and guitar bands and released a mind-boggling variety of material on labels far and wide.

"I put out this jazz seven-inch in the US on Alley Sweeper," he recalls. "Originally the music was for a porn film being made in New York. About 20 bubble-wrapped copies made it into England and somehow Justin Robertson picked up on it and started charting it all over the shop."

Within a few weeks, Dave Hill at Nuphonic had licensed it for his label and "Who Are You" was released under the Larceny moniker. Gurney is also the man whose remix of a cut by Napalm Death, the UK thrash metal outfit, was rejected by the band as being "too brutal" for release. Then there was the split seven-inch with New York hardcore skate crew Brutal Truth which featured a fucked-up guitar riff over messy 909s

"A lot of the stuff we're doing is very raw," he explains. "It's got that technical edge but also has a real punk feel...

The trio signed to deConstruction in May 1997 under the Phooey Freaks handle. Their potential five-album deal, will allow them to extrapolate the sound and ideas they had first explored with the 10 House of Naughty 12-inch releases. The first album is a mix of new tracks and reworked House Of Naughty faves, linked by offbeat samples and intricate production techniques. Phil namechecks Justin Robertson, DJ Sneak, Daft Punk, Armand Van Helden and "anything from Chicago" as influences although Steve reveals there isn't much to their musical masterplan.

"Well, to be guite honest none of us can play a note," he remarks. "Phil comes in with these mad ideas. Si's a bit of a sample fiend and I do a lot of programming. It's very off the wall but then that's exactly the kind of effect we're looking for."

Try to pin down exactly what Phil, Si, Steve and Wobble are all about and chances are you'll end up even more confused than when you started. After all, Phil happily admits that "at the end of the day we're a mess of contradictions". Take the end of this interview for example. We've downed the beers, scoffed the sarnies and are ready to head on out. I glance over at Si whose face is screwed up in a contemplative manner, obviously deep in thought. "To be honest, I'd be quite happy playing all night to a room full of people sitting down," he says. Half a second later and Phil is guffawing in that hur hur hur manner which Brummies do so well. "Well I bloody well wouldn't!" he beams. "They've got to be dancing."

words ANDY CRYSELL pics RAISE-A-HEAD

Bet you thought you'd never see the day, huh? Then again, it's not every day you hear a single as good as SLACKER's 'Your Face'

FOR a minute back there, it was almost certain that Shem McCauley from hypno-housers Slacker had finally gone very mad. We're in London's super-swishy Soho House bar which he and recording partner Simon Rogers have recently become so enamoured with. So much so, they now seem willing to trade a sizeable number of their relations for permanent membership too.

See, he was walking back from the toilets when he passed. "What's her name?" I can't remember her name;" he rants frantically. "That actress who shared a flat with Hugh Grant in 'Three Weddings And A Funeral'. I went up to her and I thought I knew her personally. I forgot said, 'Alright. . that I'd only ever seen her in that film. I'm totally in my own

And when he's not, he's invariably in one where majestic, thumping prog house rules. Having previously recorded together as Ramp (Loaded label signings who packed dancefloors with "Rock The Discotek" and "Stomp"), this is very much Slacker's specialist subject. The large dose of throbbing tuneage which is their new "Your Face" release (which comes complete with a vocal line from Joanna Law) on XL looks set to blast into the Top 40 with consummate ease. It's also worth betting that it'll clamber higher than the Number 34 attained by their much-lauded "Scared" debut. And there were we thinking that progressive house was a

"Nah, progressive house has had a lasting impact on UK dance music. It's the trippy, edgy, metal side it gives to it." offers Shem, before disappearing off down memory lane at a high velocity. "Back then [he's talking about the early Nineties, kids], you could go somewhere in London like Naked Lunch at SW1 or the Drum Club and hear people like Justin Robertson playing British house before it all got so specialist and split up. It was such a great time. Spooky, Lionrock and Leftfield, the music had something special about it. These days, most tracks sound like they're off the

"I remember a lot of blokes with long, King Charles-style hair wandering round clubs in those days;" laughs Simon. having joined his pal back in the age of leather trews, brainbattering snowball Es and chugging rhythms. "All they needed was 18th Century costumes and they could've been

Shem used to be known as DJ Streets Ahead in his teenage years and was, without question, one of the leading hip hop DJs of the time. Simon, meanwhile, was the bassist in The Fall between 1984 and 1987, he learnt a great deal from hiring out his engineering services to Jeremy Healy at the time when the handbag overlord was producing soundtracks for TV ads using just a heap of samples, and he has since gone on to provide studio wizardry for numerous bands of major repute, including The Lightning Seeds. And what's the main lesson Shem has learnt from his completely weird sounds.

History now covered, let's go mildly bonkers again, shall we? "I remember watching 'BPM' on TV with a few mates once and this great tune came on," groans Simon. "I said, 'This is a really good one, I've got this." Well, sometime later, I managed to work out that not only had I got it but I'd actually made it. It was a Ramp track. Ha ha ha ha ha ha!

It transpires that Shem is also somewhat challenged in the recall department, as Simon is only too keen to share

"It was at the time when we were taking quite a lot of drugs and Shem could never remember any of the tunes he'd heard the night before. Anyway, he bought this book on how to improve your memory and was giving everyone loads of to improve your memory and was giving everyone loads of shit about how they should read it too. Later that day, we drove to a Full Circle all-dayer and guess what? He'd forgotten the tickets! He'd left them at home!"

By the time you read this (subject to them actually remembering to turn up), Slacker will have made their live debut at Cream. Yes, in front of several thousand people, rather than having a practice session in a pub first. But then they're a bit like that, bearing much faith in their ability to out-perform the "processed cheese brigade" and put the have into transe dayer.

Moreover, a night at Cream isn't that daunting for them, what with Simon having played at Glastopbury with The Fall and Shem having guested on the decks on Beats

We did this gig in the national stadium in Nairobi and 12,000 people were there," reminisces Shem fondly. "It was absolute madness. In the same way that people do the Mexican wave over here, they sort of get into the Mexican fight over there. Rucks were breaking out all over the place. It felt quite good, actually. They were all having their own good time and we doing our own thing, quite separately from them, on stage,"

Quite. And finally, why Slacker?

"We like the idea of all the contradictions there are about slacker generation," gushes Shem at a zillion miles an hour, defying hopes for a simple answer like "because we are" or "because we liked the movie". "The contradictions between how people have a go at themselves for not relaxing enough, and when you force yourself to relax you're not doing it the right way, and when you relax in the right way, you often get more done. Basically, the psychoactive edges of slacking interest us anxious-tooking National Trust worker as the entire As It Is crew, beers in hand, gatecrash the barriers of Carrisbrook Castle. "Bollocks!" comes the fairly predictable reply, as the entourage barge their way in. The pub has been their home for the last four hours and things are getting messy. The man from the National Trust is calling for back up and by the time an important-looking woman in a black suit arrives to sort out the ensuing chaos, the South Coast's techno fraternity are clambering all over the walls of this austere and ancient British monument.

Meanwhile, photographer Jamie B is tearing his hair out because the light is fading. But the National Trust aren't having any of it. We are asked to leave promptly or they'll call the police.

Reluctantly we retire to just outside the castle walls and Jamie starts snapping as double entendres begin to flow. The man from the National Trust reappears and informs us that if any of these pictures are published, we'll be sued. "Which magazine did you say you were from?" he demands. "Mixmag," I reply as Jamie finishes the pictures and we retire, inevitably, to the pub.

Welcome to the world of As It Is. the Isle of Wight-based company set up by Mark Little and partner Josh Brent. It's a company which despite, and perhaps because of, its unruly attitude is rapidly changing the perceptions of what record distribution in the UK is supposed to be about. Fusing a punk rock DIY attitude with a huge musical knowledge and an instinctive knack for recognising new talent, they've established As It Is as the British distribution company for quality underground techno and house in little over two years.

Starting from humble beginnings, Mark and Josh saw a gap in the market when they found themselves unable to order more than a handful of the titles they wanted to sell. Taking the bull by the horns, they began to order directly from the USA and Europe and within a few months they were unloading stock to other more established specialist shops all over the country.

It was As It Is who introduced us to labels like Air Liquid, Grow! and Studio One and also made sure that there were enough twelves by the likes of Red Planet and Underground Resistance to go round. Not satisfied with that though, they started to promote some of the upand-coming UK talent they'd met in their capacity as DJs, offering new artists the facility to press up tracks and distribute them through As It Is' ever-increasing network of specialist shops.

Enter Mosquito, Blue Print, Solid Groove, Blue Spirit and a whole host of other imprints who have breathed new life into the UK techno scene and gained respect the world over.

"I like to think that we're more than just another company selling records." says Mark. "To me, the buzz is finding a good track and thinking. Fuck me this is good, let's put it out'. That's infinitely more enjoyable than getting a five grand check through the door. We do this because it's what we know and love. It's not about units, it's about getting fucking good records into the shops.

"People said we wouldn't last two months but we're still here. Our attitude is if we like it then so will other people and out of acorns, mighty oak trees grow. You start at the bottom and just work it through. Every UK imprint we have worked with, bar one, has started at catalogue number 001."

This uncompromising vision has made Mark and Josh's company what it is. And now that they've hooked up with Vinyl, the leading suppliers of drum & bass, their future's looking rosy. What's next?

"We've got this 'Readers Wives' album coming out. It's a British, tongue-incheek, Benny Hill-type thing. We've sampled loads of double entendre soundbites and crazy music from Seventies porn films and our artists are making tracks around them. The front cover is going to have actual readers' wives on it and instead of naming the artists, everyone's going to have a PO Box number. We're going to advertise it via calling cards in the phone boxes around London's West End. When people ring the up they'll just get a message saying 'buy this record'. We're even going to do a party in an old porno theatre with this amazing purple interior and the sickest wall paper ever.

"Our motto's always been, 'We're not a cog in your machine, we're a spanner in your works'. There's no reason why you can't do what ever you want."

In the words of one of the great British anti-establishment figures, John Lydon, "You don't need permission for anything".

SOLID GROOVES

Portsmouth-based label run by Aubrey, who also owns the housey Textures imprint.

ROSTER

Aubrey, Mark Ambrose and Wavescape.

CLASSIC CUTS

Aubrey – "Ginger Biscuit" Aubrey – "Long And Hard" Mark Ambrose – "Dream Mode"

CHOICE QUOTE

"I've grown up listening to everything from hip hop and rare groove to all the Detroit and Chicago stuff and what I try to do is fuse those influences in a groovy hard-edged way. But I like to think that what I'm doing is different. One release can be quite light and melodic and the next really hard and dark. I get bored just doing one style."

MUZIK SAYS

Rough 'n' ready dancefloor-based technotica which has already won praise from the likes of Eddie Richards, Laurent Garnier and Derrick May. His awesome "Marathon" single is currently tearing the roof off clubs the world over.

SCHATRAX

Isle of Wight-based label run by Josh Brent, who also runs Cheap Knob Gags alongside Aubrey.

ROSTER

Josh Brent. CLASSIC CUTS

Schatrax 005 — "Absolutely Not" Schatrax 006 — "Sweaty Groove" Schatrax 007 —"I Hold You Precious"

CHOICE QUOTE

"I haven't got any big manifestos or anything. I just want to thank the people who've supported the label. I do it because it's what l like. It's just like being into football."

Schatrax

MILTIN SAVS

Schatrax has established a towering reputation among those in the know for top drawer deep-as-you-like house and techno. After 10 EPs, Josh feels that the label has run its course and is considering his next move. To sample some Schatrax magic get your order in quickly as stocks of the limited edition twelves are rapidly drying up.

PRIMITIVE URGES

ROSTER

Chris Duckenfield and Richard Brown.

CLASSIC CUTS

Primitive Urges — Volume 1 Primitive Urges — Volume 2 Primitive Urges — Volume 3

CHOICE OUOTE

"The name is about the fact that rhythm was and still is the most important element in music. It's about stripping things back to just the raw essentials. The reason we don't give our tracks long-winded titles about space or physics is because we make dance music and on the whole it's a fairly disposable medium."

MUZIK SAYS

Primitive's loud digital beats, dynamic arrangements and nifty hooks make them masters of the incidental club groove.

CRAYON

Portsmouth-based label run by Mark Ambrose.

ROSTER

Mark Ambrose.

CLASSIC CUTS

Cravon - 001

Cravon - 002

CHOICE OVOTE

"I think the underground's getting stronger, but a lot of people still aren't aware of it. If you go to a big techno do, you just hear the same records all night and all the bigger DJs seem to play really safe. They're in a position where they could educate people but they just don't."

MUZIK SAYS

One of techno's brightest new hopes, Ambrose burst onto the scene from nowhere with his monumentally groovesome "Dream Mode EP". As adept at making lush soulful deep house as he is at producing wild technoid slammers, he's most definitely an artist to watch out for.

ALIEN FUNK MOVEMENT

South London-based label run by Gareth Oxby.

ROSTER

Everything so far by Gareth, except for "Allegiance To The Sound" which was co-produced with Wiggle's Nathan Cole.

CLASSIC CUTS

The M Set – "It Doesn't Matter" Civil Attack - "Upstate Feeling" The Sound Of Impermanence -"Impermanence"

CHOICE QUOTE

"Alien Funk is about mixing the known with the unknown. Complex rhythms delivered in an accessible manner. Harmony through opposition. For me, intellect is useless unless you can spread it to the world."

MUZIK SAYS

Untamed extra terrestrial beat gyrations with a hauntingly familiar but strangely distant quality about it, which never fails to ensure maximum dancefloor impact.

MOSAIC

Steve O'Sullivan, John Beer, Lee Grange, Wis, Mark Ambrose, Aubrey, Obelix, Downlink, Paul Mac and Steve Bug.

CLASSIC CUTS

The Wise Caucasian - "Sac Magique" Downlink - "Arrival" Echo Motive - "Mo' Green"

CHOICE QUOTE

"Nobody seems to pay that much attention to Mosaic over here, but in Europe they're really behind us. 'Front Page' [leading German techno rag] frequently charted our records above Jeff Mills, 430 West and Robert Hood, which was very flattering."

MUZIK SAYS

With a roster like that and Steve's own fantastically dark minimal beatfests as The Wise Caucasian, more recognition in the UK can't be that far away.

REVERBERATIONS

South West London label run by Asad Rizvi.

ROSTER

Asad Rizvi, Ravi McArthur and Charlie Inman.

CLASSIC CUTS

Memory Tree - "Dual"

Appleheadz - "If You Were A Cat You'd Follow Me"

Player 1 - "Kids Wanna Rock"

CHOICE QUOTE

"Our influences range from Led Zeppelin and The Beatles to Carl Craig and Photek. What we like about this scene is the freedom to experiment, you can get away with so much. As DJs we've even been known to scratch a bit of 'Maggie May' over Underground Resistance when things have been looking a bit sombre. We don't give a fuck. Purist can't stand us, but their girlfriends love it."

MUZIK SAYS

With the cool, calm collected Asad Rizvi and the truly anarchic maverick talent of Ravi McArthur jostling for space, Reverberations is a wonderful clash of personalities and styles.

STIMULUS

Colchester-based label run by Paul Mac. who records for Fracture, Not Guilty, Mosaic and Fragmented.

ROSTER

Paul Mac and Neli

CLASSIC CUTS

Herman Funker III - "Collab #2" Herman Funker and Neli - "Joint Elephant"

Eddle Fiola - "Vanderroll"

CHOICE QUOTE

"The Stimulus stuff is just off the cuff dancefloor material, you know, quick mix DJ cuts. They're not really supposed to be world-beating intelligent masterpieces."

Paul is way too modest. Off-the-cuff they may be but his skeletal sonic grids are infused with an irresistibly brain-melting funkiness. For the more musical side of Mr Mac check out his work on Fragmented and Not Guilty.

FORMAT

South London label run by Lee Renacre who also records for Re-Hab and Pacific.

ROSTER

Lee Renacre.

CLASSIC CUTS

Modugroove – "Fat Girl EP" Primary Colours – "Primary Colours EP"

CHOICE OUOTE

"Most of my stuff is made with really odd beat patterns, I try to stay away from 4/4s as much as possible. Most producers are frightened to experiment because they want to sell records, but from what I can see, there's not much money to be earned anyway, so why not try and be as outrageous and individual as possible?"

VIRTUAL EARTH

Portsmouth-based label run by Liam Carter and Paul Weston.

ROSTER

Liam Carter and Paul Weston

CLASSIC CUTS

Wavescape - "Spin Out"

CHOICE QUOTE

"A lot of our stuff is a fusion of live and sequenced sounds, all put together. We play a lot of the parts live into the mix, programme our own breaks and hack away at the mixing desk manually. It makes things less predictable and gives the tunes so much more of a vibe."

Wavescape's ocean deep, musical excursions for Steve Paton's 4th Wave imprint have established them as a major force. Now that they're up and running with their own Virtual Earth label we can expect a stream of adventurous silicon jazz.

NINE YARDS

Isle Of Wight-based label run by Fretless AZM and Maxwell House man Max Brennan, ably assisted by his musical nartner, Paul Butler,

ROSTER

Max Brennan and Paul Butler.

CLASSIC CUTS

Fergie - "I'll Be Your Dog" Nine Yards - "Pooper Scooper"

CHOICE QUOTE

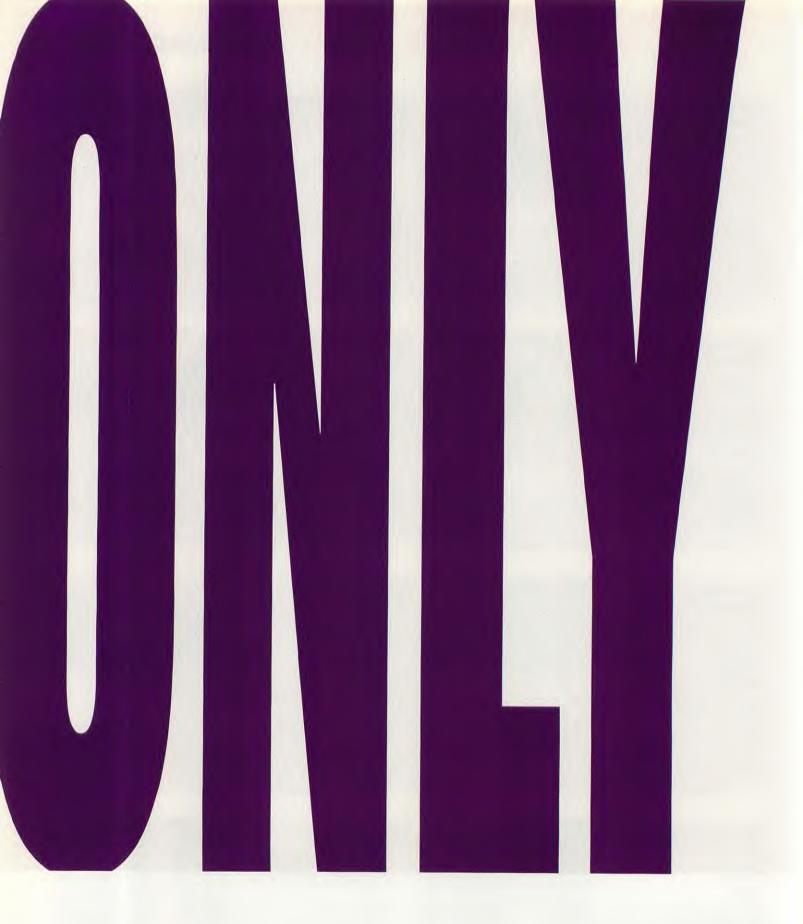

"There are absolutely no rules to what we do. It's a freestyle, jazz-funk influenced, rare groovy, real organic sound jam which goes the full nine yards. It's completely live, mistakes and all."

MIITIK SAYS

Totally off-the-planet, free-flowing intergalactic space jazz. The music Weather Report might have made had they grown up on acid house, gangsta rap and super-strength skunk. In other words, it's really very good indeed.

TRIBE ON A QUEST

Thought the infamous Castlemorton rave was their last stand did you? Think again... Since 1992, their sound system has been storming Europe and now, well, fasten down your bass receptors as the SPIRAL TRIBE do America

EAST Bay Regional Park, California. July 19, 1997. 12.50pm. The full moon free festival has been going just 10 minutes when the first police car slides into view. A double burger-sized cop, who will be referred to as a "baconoid", propels himself belly first towards the source of his irritation. The 25K Spiral Tribe rig. He projects his flashlight first at the DJs and then at the hundred or so early arrivals. The post-rave cyberian beats hum to a halt and the baconoid issue his first address.

"You are violating the public park curfew and you are engaging in the illegal use of a generator. I am asking you all to leave. If you do not go now, you will be arrested for breach of the law. Am I making myself clear?'

Crystal. "The police turn up to our parties all the time," grins the Tribe's Steve with resignation. But this is not like catching the number 42 into town only to find that the club of your choice has just closed down. There is a system to be dodged. Getting to a full moon festival requires lateral thinking, stamina and undinted determination somewhere between attempting "The Crystal Maze" and "Challenge Anneka"

It goes like this. Here the festival will be in the desert between San Francisco and LA. Phone info line on day of party. It's in Santa Cruz. Drive two hours to location where further details will be revealed. No directions are on info line. Instructions are finally posted but they are wrong. Arrive at location but final destination remains unknown. Phone info line for details. Party is no longer in Santa Cruz due to trouble with authorities. Drive back to San Francisco. Await further directions etc. etc. Got the picture?

Several hours later, the relief at finally arriving crumbles as two more police cars brake to a crunching halt. Earlier, the arrival of the Tribe vehicles, the hasty erection of the rig and the cranking up of the generator had created a special Spiral state, a renegade techno bubble. Until it was burst by this culture clash with the baconoids. You win some, you lose some...

Hangon... Spiral Tribe??? Are they still going?? Didn't they disband and turn into a bunch of rock heads in Berlin? Haven't they made a quantum leap into a hypereal fourth dimension? Well, yes, no and not as far as anyone knows Long since severed from the pension-planning, bank-balancing, mortgage-managing mainstream. Spiral Tribe have spent the last five years techno trekkin' their way across the planet to promote and unite the global underground... and throw a few parties along the way.

But first, a quick reminder. Spiral Tribe were at the forefront of the UK free party scene which emerged in the aftermath of the Energy and Biology raves of the early Nineties. Notorious for their boisterous "make some fuckin' noise!" motto, the Spirals were the original 24-hour party people. Loud and proud, they were hounded by police and papers which reached ignition point at the week-long Castlemorton free party of 1992.

There is no doubt that this incident acted as a major catalyst in rushing the Criminal Justice Act through parliament. In many ways, Castlemorton was a beginning not an end. Disillusioned with the fracturing rave scene and corporate hijacking of club culture, the Spirals made an exodus to Paris in the Autumn of 1992. By now they had evolved from travelling ravers to "tekno" travellers. Shaving their heads, dressing in black, severing ties with the media, the Tribe disappeared into a fugitive underground. Spiral Tribe parties became Teknivals. No longer simply the head-drilling thud, thud of 4/4 beats but a synergy of jugglers, fire-eaters and performers which could go on for days and days. A cyber circus no less.

Today, such parties take place throughout the summer in France, Italy, Spain, Portugal and the Czech Republic. The whole of Europe is crawling with guerrilla sound systems who followed in the Tribe's footsteps. The Tribe's Czech Teknival in Austermiche has become something of a techno Mecca for thousands of travellers, hippies, punks, drop-outs and opt-outs who head there every summer.

We've accomplished loads in Europe," considers Doug, the one who "likes talking to the press". "There were no sound systems when we arrived and now there's a whole Teknival scene thanks to us. That's why we started doing interviews again. I was reading all these articles saying that we were dead. It was very depressing. We won't just talk to anyone. We refused the 'New York Times' and we don't return calls straight away. We let it brew to see how interested people are."

In April this year, a ship from Belgium docked in a New York harbour carrying a very strange cargo. Sealed in an enormous container was a batch of generators and computers, animation and lighting equipment, a mobile studio and the Spiral Tribe rig. It took over three weeks to arrive and cost of transportation was "loads". Cue, Spiral Tribe Do America.

Not all of Spiral Tribe are in the States, some chose to stay in Europe with plans to head East later on in the year. However, 16 members made the trip to the US, 14 English and two Americans (including six DJs), one school bus and a rental van. ("We originally had two buses but one died a slow death. . . Actually it kind of blew up," explains Paul, who helps out with the lighting equipment. "We still threw the party, though," chips in Doug.

rocked the party ("small towns often have the best vibe"). In Eugene, they had skins playing ska in a nature reserve with the approval of the local green group on the grounds that the noise levels might cajole an endangered species of owl to show its face for the first time in 29 years. In Calgary, they found themselves sharing a bingo hall with a gaggle of toothless grannies. In New York, their party was cased by some armed bad bwoys who complemented them on their ability to "pull a good hustle".

"Our aim is to have a wide audience while staying underground," offers Doug. And all the while, pulsing at the centre like a beating heart, are the transmissions from deep within the Spiral Tribe bass bins.

The vibe of the system is about the whole thing but the bass is the key element. That's our secret weapon."

HAIGHT ASHBURY, SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 18, 1997

Doug, Alex, Steve and Paul are hanging out at a friend's house. Mellow and laidback, the conversation becomes more and more stoned as the afternoon passes. In a brief respite from the Spartan cuisine of life on the road, coke is gulped and nachos munched with relish.

"I can't tell you how good this is," Paul enthuses. "We were hoping too be better off but it goes up and down. Sometimes when we live on sandwiches for weeks. People have nightmares about white bread!"

The unique social, political and chemical symbiosis behind the acid house explosion of the Eighties which fired the Tribe's early days has long since diffused. A million miles from Britain's club culture, nowadays, Spiral Tribe are travellers, who owe as much to the American beat culture of the open road as they do to the rave scene. One family under a trailer roof.

Sure, people like the Full Moon Tribe have been throwing parties in the deserts for years. But Spiral Tribe claim that they are the only moving community to do this.

"Before we are techno, before we do parties, we are travellers," explains Doug CLUB TRANSMISSION, SAN FRANCISCO. JULY 15, 1997

Tonight, Spiral Tribe have been billed as the "legendary UK soundsystem" and plenty of Frisco clubbers have paid their $10 to see what it's all about. Inside, a few hundred clubbers shuffle and shake under the Tribe's Aztec-style banners. A 10-foot techno android keeps an eye on things from his corner, which is next to some animated widescreen abstractions.

Encouraged by Spiral Tribe's universal music policy, people are here to dance. Hip hop, house, reggae, punk, ska and hardcore are all part of their system but it is the continually breeding structures of techno and drum & bass which form their two major organs. Since their arrival in the States, the Spirals have been linking up with local promoters to organise pay parties in order to fund the free Teknivals. The emphasis is on charging those who can afford to pay in order to support those who can't.

"I don't give a fuck what people think," says Doug, defending the idea of paying parties. "The reason we're doing this is that people take the piss at Teknivals and don't make donations. I'm not into doing free parties for rich kids. I'd rather charge them so we can go off and do parties for people in Eastern Europe.

It seems nothing will stop the Tribe's progress as their mini-convoy snakes its way across the world. Coursing across whole continents, just last week, Spiral Tribe consumed 1,200 miles with a three-day party in between. Outlawed techno evangelists spreading the word, they are freak anomalies in this star-spangled land of rednecks and religious radicals. Yet somehow, they are natural citizens of the hobo underworld which lurks just beneath America's air-brushed surface.

"It's taken us six months to achieve in the US what took four years in Europe," asserts Doug. "Britain seems such a small place now, we find it really difficult to relate to it anymore.

In a five-month programme which began in May, Spiral Tribe's strategy is to hit on a town, turn up the bass and... Boom! "spiral" a whole community. Then onto the next target...Wisconsin, Oregon, Los Angeles, Houston... Bam, bam, bam! In Winniepeg, they

A PARKING LOT, MARTINEZ. JULY 20, 1997. 1,45AM

A handful of cars and vans are parked haphazardly in the otherwise empty bays. Ejected from the East Bay party, the occupants loiter, light up and contemplate the night's events.

Babylon has nerdy national health-style specs taped up with band aids and a dozen or so strings of beads around his neck. He looks like a cyber Morrissey.

"I come from all over. I'm a homeless motherfucker. We came to see if there was some kind of party happening. When things like this happen, it irritates the shit out of me. We have the right of free assembly but the police really take the piss.

Last week, Babylon had been at the Spiral Tribe Teknival in Oregon. The police turned up there, too, he says, but they didn't stop the party.

Rumour has it that the East Bay party was stopped because the authorities were concerned about the ominous-looking government "installation" overlooking the park.

'Who knows what it is," considers Babylon's mate, Ian (Pongoid to his chums) who helps run Spaz. "It could be something for testing water or it could be a chemical warfare plant. The thing is, in America, doing what you want is a matter of being sneaky about it."

distributed through their associate, Parisian-based label, Network 23.

Four Spiral members were charged with public nuisance after Castlemorton in 1992. Their case was thrown out of court after a two-year fiasco due to lack of evidence.

Their only contact with the outside world is an international pager "with a dodgy battery". They heard about the General Election but they had no idea about Swampy and the Manchester Airport protest.

Everyone has work permits for the States, making this "the most legal Spiral Tribe" so far.

The oldest member is Father Frank, who is 55 and the youngest is Max, who is four. Although that may have changed already as the Tribe is going through something of a baby boom right now.

ATTEMPTED RETURN TO EAST BAY PARK. 2.30AM.

A blinding white light floods inside the car. Another baconoid steps out from behind the glare and swivels his head towards us.

"Where do you think you're going? Nothing's happening up here. The party organisers have been arrested. | suggest you turn around."

Spiral Tribe are under arrest. The party's over. Or is it? Maybe they haven't been quite sneaky enough this time. but no doubt this is just a temporary glitch. And if their words are borne out, nothing, not the law, not physical distance, not a change in trends will stop the Spiral Tribe's irrepressible tech-nomadic continuum.

"Even when the rave scene is dead we'll still be travelling in our tracks," they say. "We're just rolling and not stopping until the last person is standing there.

words BENTURNER pics JAMIE B

HOLLY as spotted at Cafe Del Mar, Ibiza

PERSONAL DETAILS: 18 year old professional dancer from Milton Keynes who has just left school. This summer she is working in Ibiza as a flyerer for both A Clockwork Orange and Miss Moneypennies.

WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST REAL CLUBBING EXPERIENCE?
"Back To Basics four years ago. It was amazing. There were no fights and no lager louts which made it completely different to the

WHAT ARE YOUR FAVOURITE CLUBS?

"Satellite Club in London, Cream in Liverpool and anything which Renaissance put on. I love any club which has an up-for-it atmosphere."

HOW DO YOU DECIDE WHERE TO CLUB WEEK IN, WEEK OUT?
"It tends to be a group decision. People come up with ideas of where to go, but I usually get my way! I tend to go out every Saturday, and the decision is often swayed by who's DJing."

HOWFAR ARE YOU PREPARED TO TRAVEL TO VISIT ACLUB? "I'm up for going anywhere, just so long as it isn't me driving. I have friends all over the country, from Manchester to Devon and so I tend to hook up with them. The furthest I'll go on a regular basis though is Leeds."

WHICH DJS DO YOU ALWAYS TRY AND HEAR?

"Danielle Davoli, John Kelly and Farley Jackmaster Funk. Farley is amazing. When he played at Manumission the whole place totally went off."

AND WHICH DO YOU ALWAYS AVOID?

"None. I'm an open minded person who likes to hear most people play. I'm not really into techno, but I do like drum & bass though."

WHERE DO YOU NORMALLY END UP AFTER CLOSING TIME?
"If I'm in London. I like to end up at Sunny Side Up. If not, I'll collapse at home and go to bed."

WHAT'S BEEN YOUR BEST NIGHT OUT IN THE PAST SIX MONTHS?
"The Renaissance party at Ultra Vegas in April was an amazing night. Danny Rampling played and I didn't move from my spot on the dancefloor for about three hours."

WHATWOULD YOU DO IF YOU WEREN'T CLUBBING ONE WEEKEND? "I'd go to Pizza Hut, go to a friend's house and catch up on everything that's been going on or just mong out and watch television. I also like going to London to see my friends and I also go to the theatre because it's my profession."

HOW MANY RECORDS DO YOU BUY EACH MONTH?
"I only tend to buy a few CDs. Reviews often sway me, but Pete Tong doesn't."

WHERE DO YOU BUY RECORDS FROM?

"HMV and Virgin or any other major chain."

WHAT WERE THE LAST FEW RECORDS YOU BOUGHT?

"'Ten Years Of Ibiza' mixed by Brandon Block, Nicky Holloway and Alex P, the new Garbage album and the soundtrack to 'Romeo & Juliet'."

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE DANCE RECORD OF ALL-TIME?
"Duke's 'So In Love With You'. I think I heard it first at Ministry Of Sound, and I've definitely heard it again in Ibiza this year."

WHAT'S THE BEST THING IN YOUR LIFE?

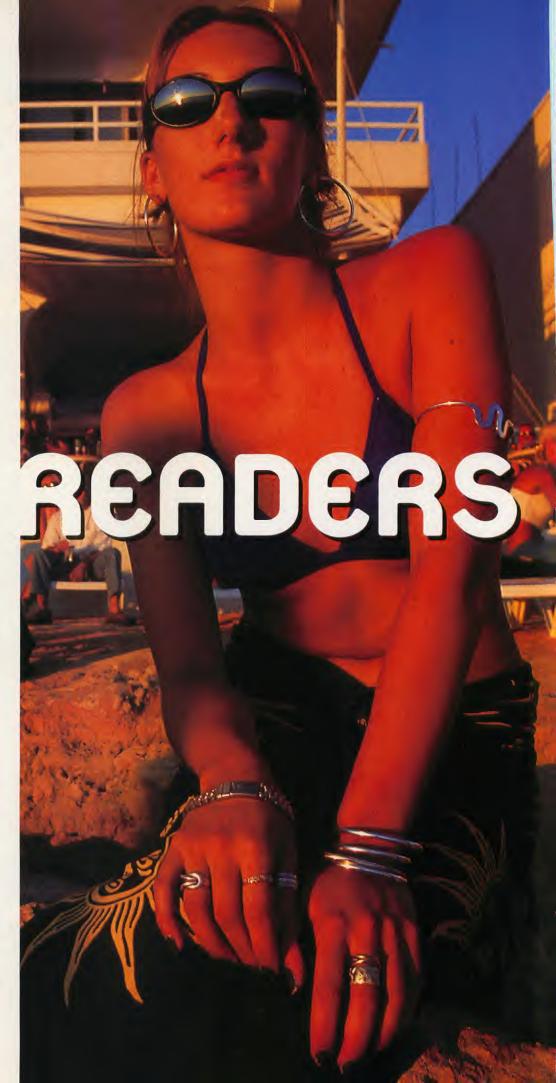

"Clubbing is part of my life but the most important thing to me is my profession.

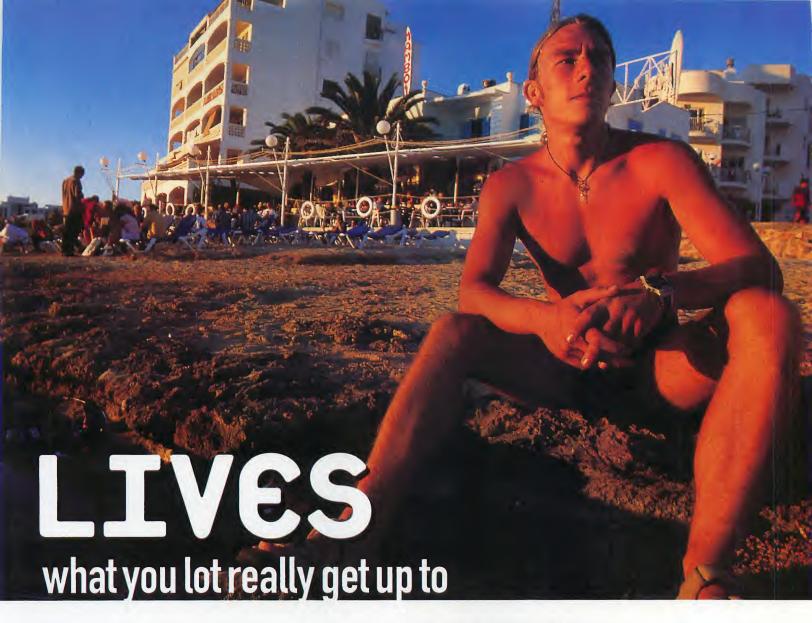

IF THERE WERE NO CLUBS, WHAT WOULD YOU DO WITH YOUR TIME?

"I'd just go back to what I used to do which was going to the cinema, working and listening to music. I would definitely miss clubbing, though."

WHAT WILL MAKE YOU STOP CLUBBING?

"I've never really thought about not clubbing. I suppose commitments and work would make me think about packing it in."

MARK as spotted at Bar M, Ibiza

PERSONAL DETAILS: 23 year old from Sunderland who has just served an apprenticeship as an engineer. He is flyering for Manumission for the second year running.

WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST REAL CLUBBING EXPERIENCE?

"Sugar Shack at The Empire in Middlesborough was the tip of the iceberg for me. It was about three years ago and a whole load of my friends made me go there. I was astonished at the amount of people in one place going mad to the music."

WHAT ARE YOUR FAVOURITE CLUBS?

"To The Manor Born's Sunday afternoon parties in Sedgfield have been very influential to me. It was there that I met my girlfriend!""

HOW DO YOU DECIDE WHERE TO CLUB WEEK IN, WEEK OUT?

"We pick a few clubs each weekend and toss a coin or take a vote. Once a month we travel quite far to Leeds or to Cream in Liverpool. A lot of my friends don't work, so we can only really afford to go out once a week."

HOW FAR ARE YOU PREPARED TO TRAVEL TO VISIT A CLUB?

"Ibiza! I've driven here for the last two years which is quite a way to visit a club. I've been to Camden Palace and Sunny Side Up in London. I tend to get a coach there because I go on my own and meet up with people I've met in Ibiza."

WHICH DJS DO YOU ALWAYS TRY AND HEAR?

"John Digweed and Brothers In Rhythm. I also like going to Garage City in Ibiza, even though I don't really like Es Paradis as a venue. Ibiza is house music 24 hours a day, so it's nice to hear something a little different."

AND WHICH DO YOU ALWAYS AVOID?

"Jeremy Healy seems to have lost the plot in the past year. I'm not really into the American sound and DJs like Eric Morillo. Roger Sanchez is a completely different kettle of fish, though, because he takes things to the next level."

WHERE DO YOU NORMALLY END UP AFTER CLOSING TIME?

"Usually at a friend's house but once I put on an after-hours party in a warehouse. I organised the whole thing in three days. We put the word around Sunderland and 250 people turned up! I suppose going to bed is cool if you've got a girl!"

WHAT'S BEEN YOUR BEST NIGHT OUT IN THE PAST SIX MONTHS?

"Tuesday night in Amnesia a few weeks ago when Buff from Bar M was playing his first date in a big club. All the Manumission workers went along to support him and it was a wicked night. We met a lot of new people. Back home in England, Roger Sanchez playing for three hours at the Empire was special."

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF YOU WEREN'T CLUBBING ONE WEEKEND?

"I'd go to the pictures, spend a night in front of the television with my girlfriend or Ten Pin bowling is usually a big one for me and my friends."

HOW MANY RECORDS DO YOU BUY EACH MONTH?

"I spend about £30 a week on tunes, as I've done a bit of DJing here and there. I let somebody drive my car home last year with £1000 worth of records in the back, and the car got stolen! Still, I'm enjoying life on the other side."

WHERE DO YOU BUY RECORDS FROM?

"Michael Devlin from Ken Doh is a friend of mine and he owns the Bass Generator record shop in Newcastle so he is a huge influence on what I buy."

WHAT WERE THE LAST FEW RECORDS YOU BOUGHT?

"Ultra Nate's Free' because it will be a great reminder of Ibiza. These records become a little cheesy but it's important to reminisce and remember the good times."

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE DANCE RECORD OF ALL-TIME?

"'Unfinished Sympathy' by Massive Attack."

WHAT'S THE BEST THING IN YOUR LIFE?

"Being back in Ibiza and firming up friendships with people I met last year is wonderful. But it can be quite upsetting building strong friendships with people who are here for just two weeks, because we're all sad to see each other leave."

IF THERE WERE NO CLUBS, WHAT WOULD YOU DO WITH YOUR TIME?

"Sleep! I'd have to find a hobby but clubbing is in a class of its own. Clubbing is already evolving into entertainment. You only have to look at Manumission to see how. Exclusive memberships are also a great way of bringing back atmospheres to how they used to be. We should go back to the old Working Men's clubs where you sign a book to go in and pay 20p. It's always nice to have doormen who know your name."

WHAT WILL MAKE YOU STOP CLUBBING?

"Nothing could make me stop clubbing. I'll always go out once a week."

Final Drexciya Interview words Tim Barr pic Telegraph Colour Library

Since their arrival on the scene, DREXCIYA have charted a unique course through Detroit techno. But in a shock announcement, they recently declared their intention to cease all recording activities after the release of their new album, "The Quest". This rare and exlusive interview is their final transmission

"People find it hard to take a fighter seriously. They don't know that I'm using boxing for the sake of getting over certain points you couldn't get over without it. Being a fighter enables me to attain certain ends. I'm not doing this for the glory of fighting, but to change a lot of things" Muhammad Ali

The Motor City is in the middle of a heatwave. Out on Grand River Avenue, the sun is cracking open the sidewalk, blistering the paintwork on an otherwise unremarkable building which announces itself simply as the Detroit Engineering Institute. Inside, on the ground floor, the temperature is inching its way off the scale, but nobody seems to mind, even though every breath sucks in a lungful of fiery, cauldron-hot air. The people in this building just continue working because, as ever, there is work to be done.

It reminds me that, just a few blocks away, at the bottom of Woodward Avenue, there's a symbol of this city's determination to keep going, even when the odds say otherwise. This symbol is the Joe Louis Monument, a huge bronze fist punching the sky in defiance. In boxing terms, it declares a simple truth. Down, but not out.

Crowding out the searing heat in the Detroit Engineering Institute (a cover for an organisation of a different kind) is another source of excitement. Drexciya have chosen this afternoon to resurface after a long period of self-imposed isolation.

"Sometimes we just like to get away from people for a while," they tell me. "Just to gather our thoughts and find the best way forward.

It's a kind of purification rite which has occurred throughout their career, a way of excluding the outside world and focusing on new ideas

"We don't want to pick up anybody else's vibe. so we cut off all communications."

THE first time I interviewed Drexciya was in the winter of 1994. No names, no pack drill. That's the way they've always preferred it.

"It's unnecessary," they said. "Drexciya is a statement."

And, of course, they're right. Since their 1991 debut, the hardcore electronic futurism of "Deep Sea Dweller", they've blazed a unique trail through modern music, fusing speaker-shredding grooves and deep spiritual energy with essential releases like the "Molecular Enhancement" EP (recently reissued on Submerge) and the "Unknown Aquazone" double-pack. Drexciya records are about originality, about doing things your own way, about taking off into the wild blue spaces of the imagination.

"We've always been wide open to extreme levels of ideas and concepts," they declare. "It's important to have no limitations.

Drexciya's approach is based on a single, fundamental principle: experiment at all costs. It's this precept which has taken them to the frontline of underground techno.

There are people out there who change what they're doing in order to chase trends." they say. "Those people don't follow their own path. But we don't like stepping in other people's footsteps. We wanted to follow our own instincts. We believe in searching for our own truth. We hate following what's supposed to be conventional or fashionable. There's so much unexplored territory out there.

"Experimentation is important. You have to constantly put ideas together, you have to constantly reinforce what's different from the norm. And love doing it. That's where the real excitement comes from.

And that's partly why Drexciya have never subscribed to the spaced-out Afronaut metaphors employed by other Detroit techno artists. Instead, their shorthand for the realm of the imagination is an underwater world peopled by different races. Throughout their brief catalogue, you'll find references to Drexciyans, Lardossens and. of course, Darthouven Fish Men reinforcing the concept.

"If you think about it, water is the most powerful element," they told me back in 1994.

"The sea is full of uncharted territories."

It's here that Drexciya locate their counter-culture images of a wide-open dreamterrain, free from the prejudice, preconceptions and pre-programming of modern life. "It's a mental thing," they confirmed. "But when the polar cap melts, everybody's

"IN music, it's very important to walk your own line," maintains Derrick May. That's exactly what Drexciya have done since their inception. Inspired by the fluid mix of proto-rap, electro, European electronica and funk which soundtracked Detroit's 'progressive" scene, the duo have been together since the early Eighties, though they didn't release a record until 1991. Instead, they spent their time experimenting and perfecting their sound.

"Just because you can push a few buttons and make a few noises doesn't make you Stevie Wonder or something," they assert. "You've got to think, be patient, take your time. You have to have a reason to exist. You've got to find your identity and be true to yourself. There was a long thought process behind this group, a lot of different ideas and principles. It's a very complex machine.

"We're not making music just to be making music, we want to bring some kind of freshness into it. Before we even started putting stuff together, we used to spend night after night talking about all kinds of outrageous situations and deep concepts. We've still got a lot of material from that time which we haven't even used. But that kind of dialogue is where the energy comes from.

Growing up on Detroit's east side, Drexciya were exposed to a lot of different music. George Clinton's P-funk adventures were one notable influence, Jimi Hendrix another.

"Hendrix was very experimental." they consider. "He was doing tracks back in the day which sound like the music being made now, only he was using an electric guitar. And George Clinton was just a master at making music. He put things in a different perspective. He took life and reality and made them a little more colourful, a little more enjoyable. He didn't follow trends, he cut his own pathways.

There was another tradition at work in Detroit back then, too, the metal-machine industrial rage of bands like The Stooges and MC5, who drew the inspiration for their bruising rhythms from the constant pulse of the steel presses and heavy plants in the city's auto factories. It's no accident that Kraftwerk eventually hit hard in Detroit as Dusseldorf, their hometown, is one of the Ruhr's major industrial centres, and the rhythms from the surrounding steel and iron foundries have had a similar impact on their music.

In some ways, Drexciya's records are a collision between each of these diverse strands. fused with the raw electro stylings of Afrikaa Bambaataa, Planet Patrol and Cybotron. But like The Stooges' "Funhouse" and MC5's "Kick Out The Jams", there's a sense in which Drexciya's music draws on nothing except the intensity of the Motor City itself.

"Detroit is very important to our music." they confirm. "It's full of the emotions which come out of this city. There's a certain kind of lifestyle you have to live here and certain experiences which go to make the music what it is. Not all of them are sad. This is not a dark, gloomy place, it never has been. There's a lot of sunshine and a lot of happiness. The people have this thing about making something out of nothing, especially when times are hard, and they know how to have fun. Right now, there's nowhere else in the world we can experience what we experience here.

It's significant that, despite huge success in Europe, Drexciya have remained faithful to the sound of inner city Detroit. Their records combine the hard rush of 4am techno with heavyweight bass and tough, speed-thrill funk. But tracks like "Aquabahn" (from "Unknown Aquazone") and "The Countdown Has Begun" (from the "Aquatic Invasion" EP) also flirt with the quirky. crowd-pleasing shifts of classic electro.

Like Underground Resistance and Aux 88. their allegiance lies with the wild fusion of these elements which has soundtracked Detroit since the days when DJs like Electrifying Mojo and The Wizard ruled the airwaves.

"People try to put our music in categories, but it's always different," they maintain. "Every track is way off into its own place. We go over hundreds and hundreds of different angles to put together one piece. That's what the world needs. You've got to work very, very hard, throw a whole lot of ideas together and throw a whole lot away. You don't settle for less. You have to open up the floodgates of the imagination.

"A lot of electronic music is straightforward, it doesn't take you on an adventure. Too many records just go from point A to point A. Our material zig-zags. We want to take you from point A to infinity. The music is there to implant in your imagination and let your psyche take over and run wild."

This is just part of what makes Drexciya's records so special. They talk about how the music industry is "polluted and diseased with garbage", how the dance scene has been devalued by "track-makers" who spend little time and less effort on their music.

"There are too many of those fools," they spit. "What's needed is a little bit of weedkiller. If you love this music and love the people who listen to it, you have to take your time and make sure what you're doing is good. We're not taking prisoners or coming out short, we're gonna go all out and do the best we can. People have to put some pressure on and stop giving in to the garbage."

Which is why Drexciya have become a crucial part of the modern dance landscape. At a time when it's cheap and easy to be cynical, they've chosen to take the tough route, to play the game according to their own rules. For them, dance music isn't about drugs ("Drexciya is a very pure world. No drugs, no alcohol, no casualties") or easy money. It's about making life a whole lot more enjoyable and making some kind of sense of it all. For Drexciya, dance music is about the people who listen to it.

"A lot of artists have overlooked that. It's not about how we're feeling. It's about how you're feeling. The thing is about you, the way you feel. What do you get out of it? A lot of times in the studio, we've been out there on the vibe of the music, almost in a trance while we're making it. It's okay if you pick up on that vibe, but it's not essential. Where does the music take you? How does it stimulate you? That's what's important."

It's for this reason that Drexciya command more respect than all the "track-makers" in the world put together. They don't make music for the sake of it, or to expand their own sense of self-importance. They do it to change things.

"We're trying to get some soul back in the music," they admit, but it's clear that this is only part of their mission.

So where to now? A few weeks ago, a fax arrived from Drexciya's HQ. It announced the forthcoming release of their first album, "The Quest". It was be their last, too. The final Drexciya record.

"It's time to prepare for the year 2000," they said. "It's time to move up to the next level."

"The Quest" is a 28-track double album which includes previously unreleased cuts such as "Dehydration" and "Dead Man's Reef" alongside some of Drexciva's most classic moments. It's an essential reminder of why the rushing sequences and jitterbug rhythms of their music have stretched out around the world. This is music built for dancing. And dreaming. A fast rollercoaster ride through wild ideas, wild concepts and deep, speaker-punching basslines.

"We couldn't find a better way to give Drexciya's last statement," they declare. "This album gives the best description possible of what it was all about."

If, as the album title suggests, Drexciya's career has been some kind of quest, then it's been one which has connected with music which is honest and wild and experimental all at the same time. "An action-packed vibe" is how they describe it.

"If we gave just one person in the whole world a new outlook or a new perspective, then we did our job. The music we made came from the heart. Every record was a moment in time. None of them can be reproduced. There are no programs left, none of the sounds are left. After we used them, we dumped them. That was our belief.

"You have to go out on a limb and make the extra effort. Drexciya was an experience. An experiment, You've just got to keep changing things in order to progress."

If that's the case, "The Quest" is the perfect epitaph. In the six years since their debut, Drexciya have consistently explored the outer reaches of techno, fusing fierce conceptuals with hard, street-level grooves. Alongside Underground Resistance, they have provided us with grit and excitement.

Those qualities alone make "The Quest" an essential addition to any record collection.
But it may not be quite the final chapter in this story.

"One way or another. Drexciya will always be around," they maintain. "The end is always the beginning..."

Drexciya out.

DREXCIYA The Quest

DEEP sonar bass, tidal beats and jackhammer dynamics collide on Drexciya's first and final full-length outing. It's a killer combination. Bringing together classic tracks from their Shockwave and UR releases ("Hi Tide" from the ultra-rare "Somewhere In Detroit" is also on board) with unreleased cuts like "Dehydration" and "Vampire Island", "The Quest" is as essential as it gets.

Check the sci-fi lullaby of "Neon Falls" with its fat arpeggios and thick beats or the industrialstrength bump 'n' grind of "You Don't Know" and you'll hear the sound of an outfit touching base with the outside edges of electro-techno. Like the city of Detroit itself, Drexciya's sound is raw and beautiful, hard and dreamy, all at the same time. Tracks such as "The Red Hills Of Lardossa" and "Wave Jumper" sound as fresh as they did when they first dropped on our dancefloors like radio signals from the future.

To put it simply, "The Quest" rocks. 100 Nick Davis

Why are you being featured in Muzik?

"The underground scene does more for me than anything else in the world. It's one of the few things which brings together all creeds and colours, and I love that unity. The underground is about the music so I believe that the most important factors of a good night out are the sound system and the way that a DJ mixes. It's also important to have a venue that is hidden away in a place where you can do whatever the hell you want. But the music is king. Hearing new tunes and watching how a DJ makes them drop is what the vibe of the underground is all about."

How do you know so much about club culture?

"Five years ago, I went to a party in the middle of Wales and it completely opened my eyes. I come from a soul background and the house music I'd heard up to that point was too commercial. Then I saw Jay Jeff and Phil from Pure Science and they played the most amazing sets I've ever heard. I started going to lots of parties such as Growth and clubs where people like Eddie Richards were playing."

What do you dislike about club culture?

"I hate the idea that DJs who get paid £2,000 can't even mix when there are some outstanding DJs out there who've been plugging away for years and are still being paid £50 a time. In terms of money, superclubs have taken the underground scene and milked it for everything its worth. They don't care."

Tell us more about your views on superclubs?

"I think they've taken the recognition away from where it all started. So long as the musical content of a club is pure, I don't see why the superclubs can't still be successful. But the DJs who play at those places are no good and the focus is away from the sound systems. They care more about the toilets."

Why are you targeting your new Ericsson phone at the club market?

"When Ericsson wanted to make a phone for younger people, I wanted to research it with a range of clubbers from underground-heads to Ritzy types. And they all went mad for it. We knew then that this was the right way of doing it. Why clubbers? It's simple. The youth of today want to communicate quickly, they have such a short time span in terms of how long they'll wait to talk to each other, and the phone is the easiest method."

Ericsson are planning four underground parties in central London featuring some of your favourite DJs. Tell us more...

"We want to keep this real underground. All people need to know is that something is happening soon, so look closely in the pages of Muzik. We've placed a few teaser adverts and done some flyering in record stores around Soho. We don't want to make a big song and dance about it, we just want to put some money back into the underground to say thank you to the DJs."

Was it difficult convincing your bosses they should host club nights to sell mobile phones?

"I had to put it to them in such a way that they couldn't possibly say no. It did take me a year though! We really believe the word will trickle down that Ericsson have put on these fucking wicked parties. But we don't want to shove the phone down people's throats. There will be a very subtle Ericsson presence."

As dance music becomes watered down by corporate conglomerates, is your method of marketing the way forward for the club scene?

"Young people are incredibly intelligent and they're cynical of the motives behind advertising, which is why we market with respect. If you push things down people's throats, you won't get anywhere. When you look at club marketing, you can tell that the people behind it don't love music.

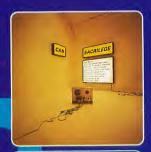

With our nights we're asking for a few pounds per ticket and then we're letting the customer decide about the product. And at the end of the day, the product stands up for itself. We're not conning anybody."

TOMMY BO

OUT NOW

The highly anticipated debut album from rap duo Capone - N- Noreaga. Includes hits produced by Mobb Deep, Marley Marl and Clark Kent. "The War Report is one of the most promising debuts in recent times." THE SOURCE.

3LP/2CD

Half Van Half Biscuit

The bomb! Or the bucket? The business? Or the bin! Van Helden's debut album caused a bit of a ruckus in the office this month and we just couldn't make up our minds. So here's both sides of the story. Take yer pick!

Album of the Month

ARMAND VAN HELDEN Sampleslayer. . . Enter The Meat Market ffrr/London

YOU probably never thought you'd have a hole in your collection marked "New York block-rockin' hip hop anthems. Please fill." Except that, true to his word, the godfather of speed garage and punk house has turned his back on the scene that's been so rewarding for him to return to his hip hop roots.

"Sampleslayer" reeks of b-boy attitude like El Diablo whiffs of sulphur. Disrespecting to the max, it is, quite simply, the sound of some Brooklyn cellar jam, the DJ tearing up the decks with beats the size of Mount Vesuvius pounding down, call-and-response chants forcing your hands in the air, the cheekiest of samples making you laugh like mad and hip-grind all the harder. 18 tracks in of tough beats, classic samples, terrace chants b-boy style. Sophisticated? Forget it. It's no coincidence that this is the sound that the Chemical Brothers and Jon Carter have been caning Grages. It's what most "big beat" stuff would sound like if it dropped the rock-star wannabe pose and spent all day smoking God's own doobies. It's stunts, blunts and beats at the Devil's best party yet. And it rocks.

For sheer audacity, for brazen disregard for what the public (and no doubt, his record company) wanted, Van Helden couldn't have done it better.

ARMAND VAN HELDEN Sampleslayer... Enter The Meat Market ffr/London

SO "Sampleslayer" is Van Helden's tribute to his So Sampleslayer is van Heiden's tribute to his background as a hip hop DJ, to a youth spent at block parties. Bollocks. "Sampleslayer" is a marketing exercise designed to hit that proportion of British dance music consumers who've got bored of house and want to be led to fresh pastures by a familiar presence. There's nothing particularly wrong with the music, a selection of conscipulation.

selection of occasionally funky assemblages of familiar samples and chants that fall into the New York Latino, hip hop party-record aesthetic, although they hardly represent the pinnacle of the genre. But if Van Helden really wanted to make a tribute to his roots, he'd have put these tracks out as white label 12-inches so that the DJs of the scene could use them properly: cutting them up, mixing them in and out of the tracks that their recognisable samples are pilfered from, scratching a storm over the top of them. At least "Shoot Tha Pump" (the Crooklyn Clan compilation that's the nearest we've had to this record) was turned into a mix album. If you put this on at your party your comatose friends will be discovered weeks later dribbling down their newlypurchased Adidas tops, muttering the inane and irritating chants Armand can't resist slapping all over every track. Dull, posturing nonsense.

BLAZE Basic Blaze Slip 'N' Slide

THE number of truly great, single-artist house albums is still, after ten long creative years, is lamentably small. The best albums of any genre live with you over a period of years. Unsurprisingly then, albums that feature ten variations on a kick drum doing its 4/4 thang struggle to provide the emotional range needed to really hook the listener in deep enough for hundreds of plays. One such album was Blaze's 1990 release on Motown, "25 Years Later". At a time when many of us were just getting to grips with "Pacific State", Blaze's dynamic duo of Josh Milan and Kevin Hodge were pioneering deep, jazzual, sexual house music of a type built to last. And last it did.

Seven years later and their follow-up, "Basic Blaze" expounds upon those same principles for an album which, while it may not knock "Blue Lines" out of that special place in your heart, should quite happily last another seven years firmly ensconced in any broadminded record collection.

It takes the universal deep house blueprint and injects it with an Afro-American spirituality which looks back to the injustices done to Blaze's ancestors, and forwards to a society that sees further than skin-deep. "Sacred Sex" begins with a denouncement of casual sex before slipping into the smoothest of late night grooves. "The Garden" conjures up looped, arcadian images of a better, more innocent place, while "My Beat" runs down the joys of polyrhythmic African roots in a Last Poets style. Similarly, "Cult Of Soul" mines the deep-sea waters of the finest instrumental dancefloor boogie, "Wishing You Were Here" is a softly-sung lament to an absent love and "Klubtrance" pretty much speaks for itself.

Basic Blaze is an album of sublime house music that wears its heart on its sleeve as it reveals a myriad of sensual charms. Check back with us in five years or so to see if it's matured into a classic. 9

Jose Padilla's "Cafe Del Mar" series can at least lay claim to the island's legacy of eclecticism. Fourth time round, as well as the inevitable Jose exclusive and loads of excessively gushing stuff from John Martyn, Indo-Aminata, Karen Ramirez and Voices Of Kwahn, there's also a concession to last summer's craze for dreamy jungle.

SOUL II SOUL Time For Change Island

I'LL swear there was an album on here somewhere. I've tried hard to listen to it. But it can't be done. Every time I put it on, within five minutes I've completely forgotten it's there. At one point I even switched on the telly. Only then did I notice that Panorama had this curiously inappropriate background music. Funny that.

The slow decline of Soul II Soul, kicked off by the long-ago departure of Nellee Hooper to fashion coffee-table artefacts, has now reached its nadir. I mean, surely it can't get any worse than this? It's not even offensively bad, just thin and wan and barely there. Really, you might as well buy those ambient whale-noise tapes they sell in mystic rip-off shops. Their sixth album is the ghost of the fourth, which itself was a spectral echo of the first. A vague memory of a beat, with flavourless vocals dripping off it like water from a faulty tap.

Soul II Soul songs were once lush, fresh, imaginative and built around plump, succulent tunes. Even Jazzie B's amiable gassing seemed like the wisdom of ancients in the context. "Time For A Change" sounds as if it was recorded without anybody actually being in the room at the time. Which, as it happens, is by far the best way to play it. 3

Track titles are rather meaningless as the Italian quartet set controls right for the heart of trance. That's not to say that "IFO" is simplistic or easy on the ear, because it makes frequent demands of the listener. But, by avoiding bogging down their sound with unnecessary abstractions, they've produced a trance album made for the one place this music makes any real sense the dancefloor.

MC SOLAAR Paradisiaque

AMONG the recent slew of rave reviews heralding all things Gallic, a solitary figure has lurked silently in the shadows. Ironically, perhaps, because it is to this same figure that many of these acclaimed acts owe so much of their inspiration.

Biding his time, honing his skills and quizzically looking on as the "French New Wave" continued its dizzy trajectory, the godfather of French hip hop and mac daddy who started the whole thing off has been silent throughout. But then again, you know what they say about the quiet ones always being the headz to watch. And so it is that lyrical terrorist and rapper extraordinaire, MC Solaar returns with an album whose echoes will haunt you long after its final beat has resounded.

Three years after "Prose Combat" and six since Solaar's stunning debut, "Qui Seme Le Vent Recolte Le Tempo", "Paradisiaque" is an evocative and profound response to the contradictions and confusions thrown up by modern Parisian life. Solaar's velveteen vocals flow bitter-sweetly through a delicate diffusion of G-funk, hip hop, disco, soul and swing. But don't be fooled by his gently seductive intonations on tracks like "Zoom" and "Les Temps Changent", because Solaar's tangential visions are underscored by radical polemics rooted in social realism.

Think of the molten abstractions of DJ Krush spiked with the political agenda of The Wu and you'll be close. Or perhaps to the candid cameo of street life which loosely shuffles through scuffed beats, scorched female vocals and skeletal African folk music on "Le Sens De La Vie".

All of which goes to show that MC Solaar is a unique voice. And, in shrugging off Americanisation, he's created a fresh new agendafor French rap. Paradise found. 8 Rachel Newsome DEPENDING on which way you look at it, being a Bristol beatnik is either a blessing or a burden.

Needless to say, you've got the rich musical heritage of the Wild Bunch, Smith & Mighty, Portishead, Full Cycle and many others - undoubtedly a blessing. Beyond this, however, lies a vast swamp of wannabe Massive Attacks. Earnest, jobbing musos who somehow lack that oh-so-desirable secret ingredient.

For all their credentials as first signings to Massive Attacks's Melankolic label, Alpha, you will now have sussed, fall into the latter category. The very noble project of Corin Dingley and Andy Jenks, they fuse shuffling hip hop breaks into classic song frameworks with the help of an assortment of vocalists. Awash in late night abstraction, in the cold light of day tracks like "Delaney" and "Back" simply sound twee. But vindication is around the corner with the retro chic of "Slim" and "Nyquil" whose sepia sentiment evokes memories of Scott Walker and Jane Siberry. A mixed blessing, indeed. 6 Rachel Newsome

MAXWELL Unplugged US

WHEN Nirvana appeared on one of the first MTV "Unplugged" sessions, many doubted their ability to alter their material beyond the grunge it was commonly reckoned to be. Instead, by stripping it down, they showed that the angst which imbued their work was powered by an unexpected vulnerability. Since soul is vulnerability incarnate, it is fascinating to hear how much more honest soul becomes in a similar context. Maxwell succeeds in the unplugged arena because he's been reworking, replaying and re-interpreting his work since 1995. Because this mini-album encapsulates the feel of that divergence, you can almost see the band and Maxwell's lounge-lizard performance. He surpasses himself on his cover of Kate Bush's "This Woman's Work", capturing a female perspective with a falsetto so startling, it's a jolt to the senses.

Apart from its brevity, Maxwell's

SYSTEM 7 Golden Section Butterfly

WHEN Stravinsky composed "Rite Of Spring" in 1913, its rhythmic radicalism changed the face of music forever. Unfortunately, the same can't be said about System 7's fifth album. Its own "Rite Of Spring" chuggs along more like a turn-of-the-decade Fluke than Wink's "Higher State" to which its techno grooves aspire. Similarly missing the mark is the album's centre-piece, the two part "Y2K". Attempts here to serve a big beat treat rotate clumsily like a Headrillaz 45 spinning at 33.

Pulses do raise, however, with "Ring Of Fire", a clean cut of clanging metallic techno. "Don Corleone"'s free-jazz sprawl and looping ethno experiments (in cahoots with Talvin Singh) are equally compelling. And "Merkaba"'s sub-aquatic sounds, cleverly embossed onto tribal/junglist rhythms, make for a truly standout track.

Sure, "Golden Section" contains some golden moments, but still, it won't be causing Stravinsky-sized shake ups. 5 Tobias Peggs

At last, Krush seems thoroughly comfortable with his place in the hip hop spectrum, which allows him to stretch out a little and enjoy himself.

"Milight" is, as the title suggests, as light and spacious as Krush is ever likely to get. There are still some fine instrumental moments, but these are now integrated with vocal tracks from the excellent Mos Def as well as Japanese-speaking Rino from the Far East's finest, Lampeye and Deborah Anderson, Mo Wax's new diva and the voice behind Alex Reece's "Feel The Sunshine".

VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Nobody is re-issuing classic hip hop tunes better than this series. A compilation that's pure butter from start to finish. (WA) 9

THE TOUCHLINE: As in the film, the conscious, the trivial, the beautiful and the banal fight it out for your attention. On vinyl, it's the conscious and beautiful that win. A good result, then. (JS) 8

SESSIONS 8 - TODD TERRY Ministry Of Sound

CONCEPT: You know the name. You know the formula. Big American DJ type whips the latest house and garage tunes into a benchmark of modern marketing techniques and capabilities no doubt bound chart-wards.
LINE-UP: Er, Todd Terry of course, over the course of a double-CD set.

KEY PLAYERS: For some strange and asyet unexplained reason, we only got sent one CD's worth of material, but hev. waddyaknow? It's not a real Todd set. Because it's not just full of Todd toons. Still, it has got plenty of underground NY style from the likes of Kerri Chandler and Brian Bristol alongside barnstormers from Nu Yorican Soul, Kim English, Ultra Nate and Michael Watford. USEFUL SUBS: Urban Spirits' "The Pressure" and the wonderfully named Pepper Mashay (geddit?).

VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Is there a chance that Todd has accidentally picked up someone else's record box? Probably worthwhile, if only as a complement to his solo album out just now. (CB)

DUBLIN ONE RECORDINGS VOL.1 D1 Recordings CONCEPT: Dublin's leading electronic imprint demonstrates that sometimes the grass really is greener on the other side of the water.

KEY PLAYERS: Eight of the 12 tracks are exclusives, including Phase's deep space outing, "Defect" and the twisted squelches of Visitor's "Round And Round". USEFUL SUBS: Nu-school Detroit-style greatness with Donnacha Costello's

"Goshdarnit", Rob Rowland's Sahko-like weirdness on "No Hand Signals" and, best of all, the string-soaked melancholia of Bomb Jack's near classic "Top Pixel Action". VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Dublin may not yet be the new Glasgow, but this cool selection of highly contemporary technoid beats suggests it's definitely on the right track. (DM) 7

THE SINGLES

CONCEPT: Psychedelic stalwarts return with a batch of useful pointers to the future sound of trance.

KEY PLAYERS: The funkiest eight minutes in psychedelic techno happen on "Cor" by Green Nuns Of The Revolution, while The Infinity Project's "Mindboggler" should get the UV massive smiling.

USEFUL SUBS: Psychopod and Sandman both pass with flying colours. VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Open up your skull. Remove your brain. Soak it in DMT. Rinse it under a cold shower. Replace it upside down in your head. You've just had the TIP treatment. (KW) 8

THE SILVER PLANET COLLECTION Silver Planet

CONCEPT: Unleash the Silver Planet back catalogue (plus a couple of exclusives) on the cloth-eared punters who missed it first time around.

LINEUP: Jody, one half of Way Out West, is the man with the masterplan. KEY PLAYERS: Is there a more atmospheric acid breakbeat workout than Sadie Glutz's "Crazy Sadie"? Or a more 303-drenched chest-thumper than the Arpeggiators' remix of Velocity's "Future"? ISEFUL SUBS: Energy 52's "Cafe Del

PULP FUSION Kickin'

CONCEPT: An expedition to unearth those original jazz grooves and lost funk breaks to which today's beat cognoscentiowe so much of their thanks.

KEY-PLAYERS: Where to begin? There's the fat-assed organ grooves of Reuben Wilson's "Inner City Blues" as used by A Tribe Called Quest on "Youthful Expression" and the sampled-to-death Herbie Hancock's "Hang Up Your Hang Ups". USEFUL SUBS: Then there's the deep Afro-erotica of Lonnie Liston (not Lonnie Liston Smith) on "Afrodesia" and a demonstration from The Pointer Sisters on how to really rock the party with "Don't It Drive You Crazy".
VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: More sonic heists have been visited on these tracks than we've had hot dinners. They don't come any more authentic than this. (RN)8

Mar" is a useful sweeping E-moment and the Breakbeat On Mars mix of Narco Dogs' "Absorption" funks it up big stylee.

PORN BEATS

Dust II Dust

CONCEPT: Sounds dodgy. Twelve "sexclusive tracks" from sundry sleaze-bags on the new electronic funk scene. KEY PLAYERS: Shrink 2 Fit take a leaf out of Way Out West's book with the delightfully Balearic shuffle of "Beef Nets" (what're they then?), Mr Dan and Moog spray lots of messy funk everywhere and Snappy Sid charm the pants off the laydeez with their chiming deep house. USEFUL SUBS: Danmass dare to cover Gainsbourg's "Je T'Aime Moi Non Plus", 12 From A Dozen open the whole tawdry affair with the porn-sampling, "Suck my dick, bitch" and Mike Flowers reads perv poetry all over The Mellotrons! VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Boys will be boys, eh? Actually, forget the dubious concept and OTT lines from the artists' bootleg video collection for a moment and you'll find some choice

RIVIERA HOUSE TRAXX

Irma, Italy
CONCEPT: A retrospective look at the output of Italy's Irma from 1990-1992. LINE-UP: Top Rimini DJ Ricky Montinari picks the tunes but leaves them unmixed. KEY PLAYERS: Strange as it might seem, there's much here that rivalled the pioneering deep house of New York at the time. Don Carlos' classic "Alone", Nikita Warren's "I Need You" and Kipper's "Livin' The Nitelife" all do wonders to dispel the memories of screaming Italo piano house. USEFUL SUBS: Loads more dreamy synthesised house on Omniverse's "Antares", Riviera Traxx's "Love" and the Murk mix of Tito Valdez' "Tumble' VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Time to revise the common perception of early Nineties Italian house and put Irma up there on the deep house pioneering scale. (CB) 8

JAZZINTHE HOUSE 4

Slip N' Slide

CONCEPT: House music, With jazz, Part 4. KEY PLAYERS: You won't hear a finer piece of spiritual house than Jephte Guillaume's "The Prayer". And Ruffneck's "All That Jazz" is what you'd get if Erykah Badu scatted over the deepest hypnogrooves this side of "French Kiss" USEFUL SUBS: African Jazz's "Stubborn Problems", A Man Called Adam's much-heard "Que Tal America" and Kupper-Campbell Project's "Never" all add touches of live instrumentation.
VIEW FROM THE TOUCHLINE: Not as powerful as when the series first started, but letting the Slip N' Slide boys choose your tunes is like trusting Fort Knox to look after your piggy bank. (CB) 7

TALKIN' JAZZ 3

Talkin' Loud

CONCEPT: Talkin' Loud goes back to its roots on a jazz journey. KEY-PLAYERS: Ella Fitzgerald's pussycat purrs on "Sunshine Of Your Love" and the percussive orgy of Clarke Boland's "Sakara". USEFULSUBS: Mark Murphy's original waltzing swing beat on "Just Give Me Tine" and the lithe grooves of Gustav Brown with his lovely "Waldmachen".

VIEW FROMTHE TOUCHLINE: Like the man Juan Atkins said, "jazz is the teacher" so let "Talkin' Jazz 3" be a freestyle introduction to your education. (RN) 9

guest reviewer: Nick Warren

ZUM Funk

P-FUNK (as in Party-Funk) alert! Already greasing the slower dancefloors around town, 'Funk" is a weird hybrid of Kid Creole, George Clinton and a New York block party. With mixes from Manchester's Waiwan and Only Child plus a bongotastic ride from Sure Is Pure. Pharma have surely picked themselves another winner following the success of Blueboy's "Remember Me". 8 (RDB) Nick: "I've been playing out the Sure Is Pure mix on this. The main mix is a jazz-funk retro idea, which is all well and good but not my cup of tea. But I do like the Sure Is Pure mix. It's good disco house. The Waiwan mix is good jazzy mid-tempo stuff. It's a typically Kelvin Andrews record. He loves this stuff and more power to him. It's just difficult to program as a DJ." 7 with this comet-obsessed tetchy drum & bass workout. As ever, they're off on their own little jungle adventure, admittedly slightly more conventional than their last offerings. Doc Scott's on remix duty and puts in his usual high standard. Watch the skies! 7 (RDB) Nick: "Doc Scott's remix seems like a day's work to me. I don't like remixes that sound like someone's got that drum program already and all they've done is put in a bassline and a string loop. For the jungle boys it might be great as a DJ tool, though. And the original... I wonder if this is a statement from Spring Heel Jack because it's moved away from their dreamy sound. I liked that original dreamy sound! This leaves me a bit cold." 5

SPRING HEEL JACK Hale Bopp

THE SHJ duo of Ashley and John do it again

MAMA MYSTIQUE

Tremendous Multiply

RAPPING since the age of 10, the Mama in question hails from New York, freestyles like nobody else and has been remixed here by DJ Krust and Rae & Christian among others. "Like edible drawers in x-rated stores" is a typical lyric and with Krust's mix being caned by the likes of Bryan G, this should be tremendously large indeed. 8 (RDB)

Nick: "That lisp... it's like Toyah making a hip hop record! Sorry, I'd cack myself laughing if I heard the original in a club. Krust's mixes are him doing his normal, easy listening style. No, seriously, I like his style. He's really at the forefront of that scene now." 6

E-Z DRUM & BASS ORCHESTRA Beat Girl

Slice

E-Z drum & bass? About time too and justified, considering Frederick Pasquan, the conductor of said orchestra, grew up in Uruguay and then moved to the East End at the age of eight. This colourful background results in a fusion of South American rhythms and jungle beats. Not just a smattering of samba, but full-on drum workouts. As the run-off groove rightly proclaims, "We don't do cheese, we just do E's" 8 (RDB)

Nick: "That's fabulous. Fucking great. I'm sopleased. It's got that samba, almost Dimitri From Paris feel to it and I was half expecting some mad drum jungle beats to come firing in half way through. But they

ONE half of the fantastic Way Out West (along with recording partner Jody), he's often referred to as Bristol's Mr Nice Guy. At least, he is by us anyway. He used to be a gamekeeper and once walked Garry Glitter's labrador. In his time, he's been official DJ to the Massive Attack crew after he started spinning in the Bristol area at the start of the Nineties. These days he's DJing all over the world from Singapore and Australia to South Africa and Russia, storming the global dancefloor with his unique home-brew of tranced-out house, spacey techno, pumping rumpiness and more. Oh, and he's just been appointed resident DJ at some club in Liverpool called Cream. You might have heard of it.

But he doesn't just spin great tunes. He makes them as well. Way Out West's "The Gift" was one of the tunes of 1996 and even cropped up in the Halifax advert. This month sees the release of new single "Blue" while next month the world will fall at his knees with a strangely gooey, misty-eyed affection in its eyes when their eponymous debut album is released. He is NICK WARREN and he's come all the way from Bristol to score this month's singles.

don't, It's very John Barry, Brilliant, The sort of stuff I would have played when I DJed at Massive Attack gigs, but don't get the chance to now." 9

CALIFORNIA SUNSHINE Summer '89

Perfecto Fluoro

APPARENTLY the first of a wave of Israeli trance toons on the way from Oakenfold's label, "Summer '89" is just confusing. In parts the production sounds like it's from 1989, in others there's several top trance tunes fighting each other to the death to be heard. The "Spangle Factory Remix" at least introduces something of a heavy sub-breakbeat, but it's still more likely to leave you scratching your head than feeding it. 5 (CB)

Nick: "There are bits in this that seem out of place. Almost out of tune. Paul's a good mate and he'll hate me for this, but this leaves me cold. It doesn't say anything to me at all. I want to like it but nothing goes on and nothing stands out as a real hook in it. Some of the Perfecto Fluoro stuff just isn't up my street. Especially the more Goan rave stuff." 5

HAVANA Discorder (Remixes)

HAVANA (now sadly disbanded) were a keystone in the Scottish prog house revival that's being spearheaded by Aberdeen's Bellboy and Hook. No surprise, then, that "Discorder" still sounds fresh enough to carry itself on 1997 dancefloors, while Blue Amazon's mix adds in tough acid rolls and symphonic stabs for that typically BA feel. Top bods X-Cabs pitch in a remix too. 6 (CB) Nick: "I like a load of records on Hook and Bellboy. It's selfish as a DJ but from the start they've always made great, great records. And now they're getting the attention that they've deserved all the time, I'm starting to feel they're sounding a bit samey. The Blue Amazon mix doesn't do a lot for me. It's good but there's so many records of this type around that they're beginning to wash over me. The original has a great bassline and it's still the best of the three mixes." 7

More Beats And Pieces

"MORE Beats And Pieces" cunningly represents the very marvellous 'Oldcut's new battle plan: get an old (but excellent) tune, draft mates Kid Koala, Q-Bert, Jello Biafra and Tortoise to arse around with it a bit, make it slightly more excellent than it was before and give birth to a new baby to show the rest where they've been going wrong for the last few years. Can we have some "More..." please? 9 (KB) Nick: "I'm disappointed really. So maybe it's my age and the fact that I heard the first installment of 'Beats & Pieces'. I mean. if I was down Thekla on a Thursday or Friday night, or down the Social, it'd be great, I'd be dancing away to my heart's content. And it is sort of a party record, so it's a good DJ tool. But it's not as exciting as I expected." 7

HUMAN ARTS Big Sur Highway

DISCO-BRAZILO is it. Or so large parts of the nation thinks, having finally succumbed to the kind of stylings the Ballistics' Ashley and Diesel and their ilk spend their time layering over the standard deep house formula, "Big Sur Highway" represents a tasty example of this, tailor-made for moments when sweat pours from the ceiling and you're no longer bothered whether you are going to cop off tonight. Consistently spiffing. 8 (KB) Nick: "I do like the Ballistics' stuff. It's not the sort of stuff I'd play out, obviously. But the last album was brilliant and I caned it to death. We're obviously paying homage to Ashley's record collection with this. I'd love to have it at home, but I wouldn't play it out." 7

DJ CRYSTL

NorthWestSide

THAT old drum& bass/hip hop quandary of how to project your "realness". Crystl needn't bother, having been one of the first with hip & bass (?) odysseys to demonstrate the inexorable link which, "from the UK to the USA", will forever bond drum & bass and hip hop. Undaunted, he drafts a rapper to do his gruff stuff and cuts two versions - one pounding drum& bass, the other sassy hip hop - which are equal in their charm but hugely different in manner. Instructive, seductive and very dope indeed. 7 (KB)

Nick: "On the hip hop mixes, I'm not that keen on the vocals. But the instrumental is great. It's a typical British-sounding record, a bit darker and dubbier and I really like it. The rap stuff I tend to like has more of an indie sound than an American sound. And the same goes for the jungle mixes. The instrumental is balanced nicely, the beats aren't too tough and the chords are interesting," 6

THREE tracks of deep beats from

MAX 404 Before And After Universal Language

Van Moll, as he's known to his mates, blends smooth female vocals over sub-aquatic sounds, sustaining the excellence of the Global Communication label. "Remembering Dawn" is a particularly sublime offering, but any of these tracks will do the business in the office, in the club or by the pool. 9 (RDB) Nick: "Absolutely fucking brilliant. It's strange because it's almost like a deep housetrance record. I've been playing 'Niceta' out already at plus-8. It's got the beats that everyone's using for speed garage now, but all the textures are very trancey. Wicked noises, mad little stabs and analogue sounds that just jump out of the speakers and sound immense in a club. I love records like this because they don't get noticed. It's got a beautiful drop, all the sounds are great. I could play this for months on end and it will work every time. In two year's time even. The downtempo track is just as good - everything about downtempo music l like. Love this label." 10

JOHN B Sight Beyond/Jazz Sessions (Remixes) New Identity

WHILE the drum & bass bandwagon veers off down a number of sideroads chasing the apparition known as originality, John B sticks to the tried and tested and pummels his way across two sides of wildly thrashing jungle of the noisy variety. "Sight Beyond" tempers the tear-out histrionics with a dusting of harumphing jazz noodles, while the flipside "Jazz Session" attempts the same and fails. Solid stuff, but suffering from mild schizophrenia. 6 (KB)

Nick: "The 'Jazz Sessions' is very similar to the Reprazent style and it's good. Of all the jungle I'm hearing, I like the jazzy stuff. The other side brings back memories of standing outside tents at the early Universes and Dreamscapes and listening to stuff that like that, hearing MCs rattling over the top and it's all dark with sci-fi style vocals over the top. Just not my bag at all. I'm one of those typical, soft house-heads who likes the Bukem-style, dreamy drum & bass," 6

PORTISHEAD

Cowboys Go!Beat

THE Barrow boy returns with little variation on the dirge-u-like theme that was "Dummy". To wit: the sound of film noir intrigue sandwiched between Schooly D singles at 33 over which Barrow scratches like a cat dumped in a bag of itching powder, while Beth wails, breakbeat blues-like. Guaranteed sales in millions, of course. But, as Beth herself intones, "No return, the time has come". Time to look at that formula again, perhaps? 6 (KB) Nick: "She's not been taking the Prozac has she? It's your typical Portishead, like the first album but a bit harder. And I love the guitar work on it. It's good but not outstanding or a new direction for them. It is a bit too bedsit for me. I went through that whole thing years ago with Joy Division. If young lads today wore long raincoats and had floppy fringes, they'd all be listening to Portishead." 7

DEBORAH ANDERSON Lonely Without You

THE voice behind Alex Reece's "Feel The Sunshine" and daughter of Yes singer Jon Anderson delivers a pair of melodic, if somewhat constipated, songs. "Lonely Without You" is a laudable stab at vocal drum & bass while The Stereo MC's "Sub Zero" mix fits the lass in more appropriate clothes with an achingly ponderous downbeat groove, and far more pleasant it is too. 7 (KB) Nick: "I had a few Yes albums. Only because my brother liked them so he used to buy me their albums for Christmasl The record sleeves really put me off. [Listens]

I just don't like her voice. The Stereo MCs' instrumental is the pick of the bunch really, which leaves me a bit bemused seeing as it's a Deborah Anderson single. The jungle mixes seem a bit messy, a real kitchen sink vibe. I can't imagine a jungle DJ actually playing them." 5

SWV Album Sampler

RCA

HAVING always seen SWV as some sort of triple-headed Maria Carey, an r&b Medusa if you will, this album sampler comes as some surprise. Maybe it's the inclusion of the likes of Redman, Snoop Dog, Lil' Kim and Miss Y (on the dopey glory of "Can We") that's making the difference. Or maybe it's Puff Daddy's dry-asa-rattlesnake's-arse production on "Someone". I might just be getting me that 4x4 Vittara and Hilfiger shell-suit after all. 7 (CB) Nick: "For me, if I listen to things at home, it tends to be Cafe Del Mar-type stuff, on the mellow, Massive Attack vibe. I'm not into r&b because it means nothing to me at all. I hate music that's formulated but then I find American r&b the same formula every time. Still, I do like 'Can We' because the beats are bit more understated. It's got a guitar and it's just a bit more interesting." 6 (for "Can We") 3 (the rest)

STORM BRYANT Love Lifted Me Guidance, USA

ONE of a slew of superb new Guidance releases, the comic book pseudonym disguises top London house boys Roberto Mello and Luke Solomon. The lengthy instrumental is the one driving us to distraction, a mind-warping groove that's reminiscent of Maurizio's "Round 3" with a bass-drum axis that sounds like it was recorded in the remains of Fifties steel foundry. Don't miss the cool vocal version either. 8 (CB)

Nick: "The 'Original Edit' is superb, really good. I'm not into the vocal mix because I tend not to be into American male house vocals. Those 'woo-oohs' have been done a million times. And 'love lift me up'? For God's sakel But the dub's also great, really classy. Good deep house." 8

DAVE CLARKE

Shake Your Booty deConstruction

MIGHT not go down too well with the techno stronghold waiting for another "Red", but hey, this man can do no wrong Clarke goes for an acidic mirrorball disco loop breaking down into a more upfront 138 bpm""" techno stomp. Definitely one for the dancefloor, not the bedroom. On the flip, "Break Cover" crashes through the speakers sounding like a futuristic spy soundtrack. Bootyful. 8 (RDB) Nick: "I like Dave. He doesn't take any bullshit and he won't chat for chat's sake.

'Shake Your Booty' is obviously made by a DJ. It's got all the production that works in a club, filtering and everything. If I play that at the main room at Cream, they would go absolutely fucking apeshit because it's so simple. It does exactly what it says on the tune. Perfect." 9

SALT TANK

Wave Intruder London

THE new BBE? With its ultra-4D soundscapes and bell-chiming melodies, "Wave Intruder" comes on like the new-born son of "Seven Days" and Infiniti's "Game One" from a few years ago. And, frankly, it's tops. The kind of tune that swerves cunningly between friendly techno and power-trance while leaping out the speakers and casting a spell like Merlin on magic mushrooms. 8 (CB) Nick: "I've had this on acetate for a while. It's good. It reminds me of the early Guerilla stuff. 'Wave Intruder' is great - nice bassline, great production and it's really powerful, It's been working a treat in the main room at Cream. 'Pi' reminds me a bit of the Goa stuff coming out of Israel which for me doesn't hit the spot at all. It hasn't got the thump or big bassline of 'Wave Intruder" 9

QWILO & FELIX DA HOUSECAT Dirty Motha

Manifesto

FELIX returns to the vinyl with this rude vocal, rude beats wildpitch cut. To the refrain of "you're just a low-down dirty motherfucker" Felix does what only he knows best! Unfortunately, he's the only one and the repeated vocal loop starts to irritate after 40-odd repetitions. Even DJ Purre's spanking "Wildbitch Mix" fails to save it.
Purretypoor! 5 (RDB)
Nick: "The "White & Wood' mix is what's given house music a dirty name really. The Colour System Inc's mix is a good one. I like their production. Pierre's mix is a bit tedious really. Just goes on and on and on for 10 minutes. Felix's mix is alright. My one problem with the whole thing is the vocal. 'You dirty motherfucker'? I don't see the point. It's not saying a lot really" 8 (for the Colour Systems Inc mixes) 6 (for the rest)

MIDFIELD GENERAL Devil In Sports Casual

Skint

ROLLICKING breakbeat brouhaba, the kind the world loves now, but will soon tire of once the residents of Skint towers do. But proper rollicking breakbeat brouhaha nonetheless, equipped here with a tantalising line in horror film samples, mega-bass tweaks and Skint large fromage Damian Harris' own natty 'Speed Beat" excursion, "Bergkamp". Inevitably, there's a fab Fatboy Slim remix of the main cut entitled "Does My Beat Look Big In This?" Er, yes it does, thanking you. 7 (KB)

Nick: "I am a fan of Skint. 'The Devil' is again, for me, sort of an average big beat record. It's good but it doesn't stand out. Same sounds and beats I've heard before. 'Bergkamp' is the one for me. For starters, it's more housey/techno than the other side. I could play it in my set" 7

TJR FEATURING XAVIER Just Gets Better

IF it's speed garage you're after, the two names on the scene you ought to be checking are, of course, the Tuff Jam crew and the Banana Republic boys. As witnessed on this team-up, theirs isn't the ragga, rude bwoy variety, but something far closer to the sound of Todd Edwards - a beefy, skipping NY sound with a subtle, sub-bass feel and songs that don't go for broke on the wailometer. 6 (CB) Nick: "Comparing the production on the two sides, the vocal side sounds much heavier, and yet it's the dub that should be tougher. Maybe it's the cut. It's really weak. I do think that speed garage is fucking great, I really like it. I've been digging all the stuff on Nu Jack, though it tends to be more the instrumentals and bootlegs, like the Judy Cheeks one. I like the vocal mix but it's too housey. Not dirty and hard enough. Normally with Tuff Jam stuff, it's the dubs I go for straight away, but I wouldn't play any of these mixes." 6

WITH its shimmering breakbeats and golden melodies, "Angel" is surely a tip of the hat to Way Out West's "The Gift", although the bizarre sub-rave old school breakdown is curious in the extreme. "Gamesmaster" on the other hand is the Hooj camp doing what they do best – pressing the pump action button furiously with their familiar bounce-heavy production. Still prefer Nalin and Kane's "Beach Ball" though. 6 (CB)

Nick: "'Angel' is a like speed epic house! The production is good, it's really bright and the jungle bassline works well. But it's more something I'd rather listen to at home or in the car than play out in a club. On the other hand 'Gamesmaster' is a lot more fronty and clubby. But it's got something in there that both Jody and I detest - that single-note 'boom-boom-boom' bassline. Basslines are meant to move you, that's too static. Thinking of Cream, it's more what Oakle would play in the annexe." 7

LI'L LOUIS Clap Your Hands Go!Beat

Ll'L Louis shows off the latest release on his own label prior to general release on Go!Beat in late September. Classy female good-time vocals courtesy of one of Louis' harem of female singers rides a throbby bass and a clever scratch-back breaks the track in two or three places . The "R & B Mix" is slow, bassy and filthy. Look forward to the main release with mixes from Etienne de Crecy, DJ Ω and PFM. 7 (RDB)

Nick: "The r&b mix is really lazy. The song's alright and the vocal's good, but... it just leaves me cold. I prefer the house mix from the second half on, when it gets a bit heavy on the drums and the bass gets a bit more dubby, but it doesn't really stand out. I know it's hard for him after doing a record like 'French Kiss' because everybody's going to say it's not as good as 'French Kiss'. Average American house music."

CRYSTAL METHOD Busy Child

Sony

A VINYL dream for all breakbeat afficionados from LA's Crystal people. West Coast Wales currently rocks to this sound as much as West Coast America and it's quickly becoming the international sound. This is typical fayre, with the slightly dodgy exception being Taylor's "Hope For Evolution" mix which verges in a trancier direction while keeping its acid breakbeats. 7 (RDB)

Nick: "The main mix is typical big beat stuff really. The beats I've heard before, all the analogue twiddling is as you'd expect to hear on this type of record. The Uberzone mix is a bit more groundbreaking in its beats, although they're not tough enough to work the dancefloor. They're still not coming up with a record to earn them the title 'The American Chemical Brothers. In this genre you've got to do something either really fucking adventurous or really fucking good. It can't just be a normal big beat record any more." 7

KIM ENGLISH Learn II Love

Hi-Life

AN extremely excessive nine-mix quadruple pack for the return of the English diva, "Learn II Love" is barely fit to lick the tonsils of "Nite Life". It takes all of Mood II Swing's superb, hyperspace production to render it merely okav. while Musto's dub wins in the funky bassline stakes. And none of the UK speed garage mixes venture into the land of the radical. Plus the FK dub from the American original has bizarrely, been left off. Disappointing. 5 (CB) Nick: "On the speed garage pack, all the mixes are okay. It's the Nush dub that I'd play, but it's still not very special. There's nine mixes to choose from, but none of them are good enough to push this into the Top 40. Who the hell A&R'd this? I don't understand why there are so many mixes. Most of the DJs that are going to open their envelopes in the morning will be completely confused. Still, it's the

DAVID HOLMES Gritty Shaker GolReat

THE reinvention (from gritty techmeister to cooler soul shaker) continues as the Belfast boy follows up that astonishing "Essential Mix" with his finest moment since "No Man's Land". "Gritty Shaker" comes on like some lost gem from a funk breaks bootleg, but still manages to sound utterly now, with its psychedelic bassline, analogue doodlings and a break that's as instant as hot chocolate but twice as sweet. No wonder everyone from the jazz bods to the big beats boys to Mr Warren himself adore it. If you only buy one non-4/4 record this year, make sure it is this one. 10 (CB) Nick: "This doesn't really surprise me, especially after STREWTH!! A time-stretched vocal right in the middle of the Farley & Heller dub! Is a gradual conversion to ragga-garage on the cards? Whatever, their full remix of this Greg Stickman production is a stormer, one of their best for ages. Freaky tweaking, fierce camp vocals, a dark metallic synth line, batucada drums and a rolling bassline build up into a neat accumulation of influences from across the house spectrum. Don't neglect the John Acquaviva remix either. 8 (CB)

Nick: "It's alright. I really like Acquaviva's mix. It quite surprised me that it was so disco for him. I really like and Farley & Heller's dub. It's quite funky and it's got a time-stretched vocal. On the Kim English record, all the speed garage mixes are so cliched already with the same old basslines and same old ideas, that this is more speed garage than they are. It's got that energy. Don't like the vocals though?" 7

MILLSART/JEFF MILLS Inner Life/Medusa

React

A BIT of a scoop for React as they follow that Mills techno throwdown mix album with two of the unreleased exclusives that were in the set. The Millsart track owes more to Chicago, with its deep reverb melodies and sidewinding bassline, while "Medusa" is your standard Mills wall of industrial noise that closes in on you until your ears ache and your innards burst out all over the place. 8 (CB)

Nick: "I didn't know he was now recording for React. [Listens]Perfect DJ tools. The Millsart track in particular is the one I'd play. Even though it's not obviously my style of music, as a DJ you can mix these things in for three or four minutes in a set and it gets the crowd on a different sort of vibe for a while. Great." 8

DJKRUST Soul In Motion Full Cycle

Having already coined this slot a few months back for "Genetic Manipulation" DJ Krust goes a stage further with the sheer hypnotic depth of "Soul In Motion", a lesson in sonic manipulation as intense rhythmic layers and contorted acidic bliss emerge from cavernous surreal sweeps, leaving you transfixed to the very last second. Heading for this year's Number One slot. 10

singles CODENAMEJOHN The Warning

The fearsome combination of Grooverider and Metalheadz conspire to ruthlessly assault the senses with the spellbinding mystical touches and militant beats of "The Warning" giving way to tumultuous detonation of soaring noise and a torrent of interchanging rhythms that would have run away with Vital Release any other month. Flip over to "Sculpture In Red" for some pure unadulterated techno fury. 10

MATRIX Double Vision Metric

The brainchild of Matrix himself, the Metric label opens its account superbly with the sublime harmonic loops of "Double Vision" rising above the percussion-filled, crystalline magnetic breaks workout. More joys to be had in Sedation's offbeat swelling electronics and deep, technoid bass sequences. With releases forthcoming from Ed Rush, Fierce and Optical, watch this one fly from record store shelves, 9

DJ ABYSS Keeping It Real Bad Dogz

Rude and Deadly unveil their new imprint, aimed at showcasing new talent alongside diversions from regulars, opening with the immovable stepping rhythms, moody melodic snatches and persistent burbling bass of "Keeping It Real". On the flip "Haunted" takes on a much more aggressive approach with its occasional piercing synth blasts and menacing tones. 7

MASK/SWABE Cash Till

Dope Dragon

Dope Dragon launches an awesome three-pronged assault on the Nation's dancefloors as Swabe teams up with Mask for the distinctive metronomic bleeps and warbling tones of "Cash Till" bursting into a feverish driving workout. Three Way step in for the spiralling synth washed hard of "Sub Zero". 9

SUBSTANCE

Breakbeat Culture

The second outing for Five Times Music's latest imprint utilises the talents of Substance for a slice of minimal stepping on the title track, constructed around a manic. contorted bass hook and a beefy, reverberating beats track. "Nasty Muthas", meanwhile adds a heavier atmospheric slant to the crunching bass mayhem. 7

A-SIDES Calibra Fast Side

Fresh from his Metalheadz debut, A-Sides goes it alone on the glorious pounding future funk of "Calibra" with its tense, stringsoaked intro falling into a scorching technoid bass groove laced with delicate harmonic touches, before heading further into melancholic string heaven. Flip to "Wake Up" for some sparse, jazz tinged jumping. 9

STAKKA & K-TEE Liftin' Spirits

Latest from Ram Records sister label sees the trusty Brightonbased duo hit angry mode with the dynamic grinding synths of "Andromide" riding a solid, programmed groove. Head to

"Mainline" for a hefty helping of distorted textures, bass explosions and crashing breaks. 7

JAMES HARDAWAY The Illustrated Man

DJDIE Reincarnated

Full Cycle

Full Cycle find the mark once more with this blistering revamp of one of their finest moments as DJ Die embarks on an electrifying excursion through a rich vein of nervous stabs and mesmerising sterling washes, accompanied by a flawless and ever-expanding neurotic groove. 9

Pac 3 N-Tone

Overide makes the move from Octopus to the diverse Ninja Tune offshoot, highlighted by the delicious soulful key loops of "Pac 3", expanding into a sumptuous of complex technoid harmonies. "Hungry" exhibits a more ominous agitated disposition, while 'Tubular Barriers" dives into abstract downtempo waters. 8

FUTURE FORCES INC Saga

Renegade Hardware

The ever-productive outfit keep the Hardware momentum flowing as "Saga"'s robust automated drums are enveloped in cryptic sonic surges, letting loose a deadly entrancing synth growl. Check "Triton" for a subtle slap of acidic tweaking, speckled with the odd celestial splash. 8

SKINETT Altered States Audio Blueprint

Second release from this South Coast imprint should put them firmly on the map. "Altered States" heads firmly into futuristic dimensions with its morphing synth bass, melancholic chords and machine beats, but it's "MK Ultra" which sets this one alight, a wave of sci-fi atmospherics erupting into a wondrous reverberating industrial rush. 8

VARIOUS ARTISTS Here Comes Trouble Volume 6

Trouble On Vinyl

Latest in this hugely popular series doesn't disappoint as the IQ Collective take up where Mode One left off with a further dose of fat, funky crunching synth modulation on "Transmission". DJ Red's "Up Rise" follows similar lines, utilising a typically infectious pulsating bass hook and some crisp, clanging fills. 8

DJZINC Reach Out Remix True Play'z

NOTORIOUS

Action Macca

Third release for Marvellous Cain's Runninz offshoot, joining forces with Notorious for the enraged, distorted burblings of "Action", interspersed with mysterious analogue sound FX roaming above a huge crashing blitz. Meanwhile "Hard Drive" carries on the distorted theme with the addition of some towering soulful vocals. 7

VENOM Itz On

Hardleaders

NASTY HABITS Shadow Boxing Remix 31 Recs

It doesn't really need me to tell you the demand for this cut. Doc Scott transforms "Shadow Boxing" into a full-on pile-driving dancefloor monster complete with unnerving stuck record simulation for some gratuitous head torment. "March" on the flip captures the soul in a sea of screeching synth explosions and heavenly ascending strings. 9

DYLAN Codebreaker Droppin' Science

More 21st century bleak soundscapes from Dylan on this intense double-header.

"Codebreaker" injects elements of off-world jazz to the tormented chopping breaks and distorted bass anarchy. "True Force" opts for dense nitric ramblings laced with some alarming washes. 7 label stable Neil Milliken takes time out from working nine to five in a betting shop to tell us about the birth of his POLYRHYTHMIC label and new directions in drum & bass

What are your aims?

To release consistently good tunes along a drum & bass breakbeat line, without selling out. I also want the label to keep a jazz sensibility making music that is leftfield, of the moment and of lasting quality. Polyrhythmic is definitely not releasing run of the mill material and while I don't want to stay a pauper, I want to retain my musical integrity. I probably won't make much money!

Which artists have you released?

Nek Lok and Bluze so far. Nek Lok is Bob Richardson and Spencer T. Bob has also done stuff for A Touch Of Jazz on Precious Materials and used to engineer for Ron Wells of Mystic Moods and Earl Grey fame. Bluze is Paul McGillirvey, part of Brighton collective The Chill Pilgrims who also used to play with Steppers Convention.

What has been your best-selling release?

Well, with only two releases so far, Nek Lok's "Escobar Blues" is the best-selling with about a thousand copies. That's with me selling it myself and Kudos distributing. It should also be going on Gilles Peterson's upcoming "Journeys By DJ" compilation so I may re-release it then!

What are your plans for the rest of the year? The new Nek Lok single "I Want You" will be released at the end of the summer, not before, as July and August are shit for sales. The new Bluze single "Steptropolis" is also ready for release. It's a bit more listener-friendly than his last one which was very dark! I also need to try and juggle working at the bookies with my commitment to the label. I've got some secret projects in the pipeline too which I can't tell you about!

Which DJs have been digging your tunes?

Gilles Peterson, Patrick Forge and the Allas Records crew mainly.
They've also been played by Sonic Five on Inspiration FM in Leicester and on Ross Clarke's Fat City show on Kiss 102. Apparently, it's being played on national radio in Italy and Holland.

What did you do before you started the label?

I went on a Princes Trust small business' course immediately before setting up Polyrhythmic to get off the dole. Before that I did a lot of sitting around on my arse!

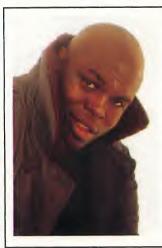

You can contact Neil at Polyrhythmic on 0181-675-3661 or look at the label details on the 'UK Drum & Bass'

BYRON STINGILY Flying High Nervous, USA release Effortlessly sung by Byron over the fresh production of the Masters At Work who out do themselves on a variety of mixes spread over two separate singles. My favourite being the club vocal rework which starts off under the influence of EW&F's "Brazilian Rhyme" and ends up in the land of Candido's "Thousand Fingered Man". Pure class! 10 singles KEY TO LIFE FEATURING MONICA HUGHES Faithful Sub-Urban, USA

Another floor-filling production by Tommy Musto for his own imprint. This time the powerful tonsils of one Miss Monica Hughes light up the ever consistently good Sub-Urban sound. Unfortunately (in my opinion) the dubs get just a little too hard and don't live up to those presented on previous "Key To Life" releases. 8

BRIAN TAPPERT & JOHN "JULIAS" KNIGHT The Re-Vibe-AI EP Soulfuric Trax, USA

The disco filtering antics of "The Ghost" rock in all the right places, familiar JV1080 sounds fire up "Feel The Spirit" meanwhile "The Plaque" revives the loop as used in Jazz 'N' Groove's "Ya-Hey" and Kenlou's "Gimme Groove". Very useful DJ trax. 8

JUDY ALBANESE Love's Here (At Last) Maxi. USA

Eric Kupper takes care of the production for this Latino songstress. His "Sweet Vocal" mix does veer a little too much on the commercial side but his 'Vocalicious Dub" saves the day making the most of the lovely Judy Albanese's dulcet tones over a stripped out groove similar to early Def Mix work. Disciple hands in some bumpier mixes and Picchiotti fires things up on his 'Ministry Dub". 8

CECEPENISTON Finally AM:PM

Maybe not one for the purists but still absolutely vital to the cause as records like this take the music we all know and love to a much wider audience, which can't be bad. Now remixed by Eric Kupper who creates a minimal back drop driven by a hard funky bassline to give this sing-along song a new lease of life. Large again? Let's wait and see! 7

D'INFLUENCE Hypnotise Echo

Originally a mid-tempo r&b tune passed to the competent hands of those MAW who take great care not to cloud the delicate vocal. Warm pads are beefed up by a subby bassline over crisp beats with the chords moving into a moodier vibe halfway through the track. 8

Keep Reaching Ricanstruction, USA

Definite end of the night material which simply inspires, to say the very least. Produced by Frankie Feliciano, for his own label utilising live bass, guitar and trumpet which constructs the perfect backing for Carole Sylvan's vocals which start off with the famous line "It's about time..." as sung on "Voices In My Mind". Soul power! 8

VISUAL FEATURING BARBARA TUCKER Bring You Love

Strictly Rhythm, USA Ricky Morrison and Fran Sidoli go from strength to strength with the rousing Miss Tucker. The "Visual Epic Club Mix" has all the distinctive M&S traits of heavy pounding bassline, swinging keys and soaring strings but it's the dubby "Visual 911 Mix" which really does it for me. Essential!9

COLONEL ABRAMS You're The One For Me Soul Sonic

This new subsidiary of JP's Interstate imprint will concentrate on the more soulful side of Club Muzik. The D Train cover produced by Eddie Perez has been remixed by M&S, Tuff Jam, Soul Sonic and Disciple. My favourite is the M&S mix which sticks close to the D Train sound with a Nineties feel and they even call in Danny Love to add some essential backing vocals. Dead groove y'all!8

MICHAEL WATFORD Heaven Is Calling You

Ulterior

Michael Watford has featured on some poor productions of late but redeems himself by joining Joey Musaphia and Gerald Elms. Joey comes up with a smooth vocal and darker dub while Gerald adds some great chords in his Vox mix and pumps it up on the dub. Ground breaking it is not but a quality outing for Musaphia's label all the same. 7

SOMORE

I Refuse (Filthy Rich Remix) Records

release A lazy vocal laid back on a Todd Edwards drum section gives a whole new slant to this tune that is become something of an anthem. Uplifting chord sequences and an excellent bass movement compliment the track. There are some RIP mixes forthcoming too. 10

MIXAM Future Dreams EP Love & Fantasy

"Future Dreams" blends elements from other tunes such as "RIP Groove" and "Cover-Ups Volume 1" to blend on firing piece of vinyl. Plus there's some very creative sampling. Hope you get them cleared, Max! 8

PISCES Never Forget

This bubbling portion of UK garage sounds like a Ramsey and Fen tune. It must have been done in the same studio or something. It's got a nice smooth feel with a bouncy bassline that ultimately sweetens the track. 4

MICHAEL KING The Boom Banging EP

Banging Michael handed this to me and on the second occasion, I played it out. This four-tracker, using the word "raggage" (!) as one of the track titles, has a ruff fusion of styles. But the track which stands out for me is "I Wanna Show You". It's got a slight Tuff Jam sound which appealed, but original vocals would have been an improvement. 5

DAMAGE

Lovelady (Da Funkstarz Remix) Bia Life

Really like these artists, they've got such a great vocal talent. The mix which stands out here is the "Da Funkstarz Vocal Dub" which has a similar feeling to the MK rework of Jodeci's "Freak". Love that bassline. 6

MRX Dangerous

This was recorded especially for the "Tuff Jams Volume 1" compilation, but it's out now on UVM with a new uplifting vocal mix alongside mixes from DJ Disciple and New Horizons, whose rolling drums and saxy organ riff allows Mr X's vocals to lay back on those sweet beats. 9

TY HOLDEN Do What You Wanna Do 51st Recordings

Over the past year, Ty has been building a nice reputation as a deliverer of slammin' dubs, but this track takes him back to his vocal roots of "Inspiration". The twelve-inch also has an excellent mix from Scott Garcia. 8

TUFF JAM Let Me Tell You

Released in 1996 through Slo Moshun's label, Dansa, this track is now rearing its head again and being played as a more girly tune by the underground DJs. 7

D'INFLUENCE Hypnotize (MAW Remix)

Well, the D'Influence guys are back again with a bangin' remix and one which helps to dispel the idea that you have to be from London to produce this kind of new British lick for the garage market. Their rework gives us that distinctive Masters At Work flavour and warmth, with a rough, unmistakably undergroundsounding bassline.

BRASSTOOTH Now Is The Vybe Well Built

First heard this one while doing a guest DJing spot on London Underground with Ramsey, who was playing it off a dubplate. "Brasstooth" has got wicked drums that build and then the track explodes after 50 million "now's" Love it! 7

singles DATBU

Foolproof Datbu, USA

Straight out of Atlanta, Georgia Divinity And The Breakfast Unit are the new musical project of ex-Arrested Development DJ, Kemit. While they're a positivity group, their beats and sentiments have a much harder core than Arrested Development material, and their female rapper Divinity is particularly impressive. 8

BIGKWAM Regardless Blindside

If Greg Rusedski and half of the English cricket team are British, then so is Big Kwam. You wouldn't know it to listen to his voice, but he lives over here. Not that any of that's going to worry you when you can concentrate on Kwam's vastly improved rhyming, more Creators jazziness and a funkin' good reworking from the Vinvl Reanimators, 8

MRPINK & MRBLONDE Jamaica Crimewaye Reservoir

The sometime Hijacker's latest single comes out with the opening message, "No disrespect, but most of the stuff that's come out in the last five vears ain't worth a wank". Which just about sets the tone for a hardhitting crime story. These boys do not mess about. 7

GRANDMASTER FLASH& THE FURIOUS FIVE The Message

Deep Beat

You can probably pick up a nice second hand 12" of this if you look hard enough, but perhaps Grandmaster Flash and the boys make something out of you buying this instead. The reworkings are, of course, utterly superfluous. It's got to be the Original Original. Every time. 7

LYRIK BORN CLIQUE Relentless

With no connection to the Bay Area boy of similar name, this seven man crew from Birmingham have produced a very strange little record, all tangential flows, abstract, spacious music and weird lyrics such as "Use my penis like a pencil/forming lyrics in my seed". As yer do... 8

WILL SMITH Men In Black Columbia

AAAGH-IT'S ALIVEI All of those of you who thought that the Fresh Prince had turned into a pile of green gloop (ie a movie star) are in for a horrible shock. While the soundtrack album has some fine tracks on it, this piece of r&b pop crap is not one of them. 1

SWOLLEN MEMBERS Shatter Proof Battle Axe, USA

Nice little EP "Shatter Proof" with Rocksteady links and enlivened by the guest artists – Mixmaster Mike tweeting away like a canary on "Paradise Lost" and the godlike Aceyalone dropping his deep greenhouse pearls of wisdom on "Consumption", a mellow ultra-clever cut. 8

JOE MAXIMUS Tangents

Jazz Science

Nice, mellow, jazzy instrumentals currently available in cassetteformat only but worth checking out. Part of the burgeoning West Midlands hip hop scene, Joe Maximus isn't scared to mess with the formula a little and has a sense of humour, too. 7

OFFSIDE Mexican/The Penalty Westpoint

Hollis from Marxman returns with his new project, which is just him and producer DJ Bunjy making dark, poker-faced slabs of hip hop. The tone of this double-side is unrelentingly downbeat, but Offside's take on the home-town Bristol sound is still refreshingly different enough from the rest.

PRIMERIDIAN On The Spot Promihjay 8, USA

Straight out of Chi-Town, Primeridian manipulate wind with tongues. Flipping lines between them, they can kick it over an ominous tidal swell of organ or on a "3 Feet High And Rising" style monkey-tale. An immaculate little EP introducing a group with surefire star quality. 9

J.U.I.C.E/AWOL ONE/JIZZM

Unrational

More West Coast underground parallax-action, the rhymers on "Unrational" each get a side of vinyl to display their musical talents over crunchy drumbox beats, squirts and scratches courtesy of Creativity and Cut Uncommon. Unsound wack rhymer diss of the month has got to be: "Rappers disappear like white bitches on daytime soaps".8

INFINITE MASS Caught Up In Da Game Beat Route

Apparently Infinite Mass are Sweden's biggest hip hop act and if that sounds more like an insult than a compliment then you could be on to something. Old, old samples, muffled sound, crud raps and a crappy chorus made by the Devil and his Head Demon Of Boredom. 2

REZIDUE Dropin' Rezidue Database, USA

A classic piano riff launches you straight into "Dropin' Rezidue making it sound like a huge party tune in the making. When Rezidue himself hits the mic it's a bit of a disappointment, though. He's a good rhymer but just a little too Smoothe for these ears. 6

URBAN SPECIES Religion & Politics

Talkin' Loud's last remaining rap act Urban Species return with straight faces and some serious lyrics. It works well enough, even if you can't shake the feeling that lead-rapper Mintos has been listening to a little too much Michael Franti (and before that, Gil Scott Heron).7

ALPS CRU The Concept Of Alps Blue Concept, USA

A trio of beautiful little tunes that have movement, intelligence, crisp scratches and a whole heap of piano riffing. The rhyming perhaps isn't quite as exciting as the sounds are, but it's still more than adequate. Alps Cru, bigger than Mont Blanc, 8

albums THE PSYCHOREALM

The Psycho Real Ruff House/Columbia

If Muggs can have a solo project then so can B-Real. Columbia, those kings of generosity, willingly oblige. And what do we get? Loads of hard-hitting, nasal Latino rapping about being "MAAAAD".
And while it sounds pretty samey throughout, at least it isn't a total Cypress Hill facsimile. 5

VARIOUS ARTISTS Rebel Alliance Brick, USA

"Rebel Alliance" is a defiantly underground compilation from the boys formerly known as God Complex and fellow travellers. Abstract, a-melodic sounds act as a sort of backdrop to the lyrical attacks of the spaced out, word-weaving MCs. As a whole "Rebel Alliance" can sound a little bit forbidding, but it repays listening. Again and again. 8

BLACK ANGER Maxed Out Singles K. USA

Rolling out of Tacoma, Washington, Black Anger are, well, very angry. Having said that, the music on "Maxed Out Singles" is surprisingly mellow, mournful horn lines looped over cracking beats. If the words aren't quite as compelling, it's still a rugged little underground package, "Feel What I Feel" being the highpoint. 7

DICAM Underground Vibes Inflammable/Columbia

The big boys at Columbia reissue Cam's renowned but little heard first long-player and while it involves many of the same influences (hip hop beats, jazz and eastern flavours) as the second album "Innervisions", "Underground Vibes" seems less self-conscious, happy to let the boom bap speak for itself. 8

Night OWIS Jonzi D gives the lowdown on his monthly APRICOT JAM night at London's

Camden Lock

Dingwalls, Middle Yard, Camden Lock, Camden in London. When?

Once a month, but there's no regularity to it. The next one's on August 14th. Residents:

I'm there as the host and we've got the Apricot Jam band on the organically grown breakbeats featuring Wylee Kyat on drums, Wild E Appaloulay on bass and the Black Jack, James Yarde, on keys. Guests:

We've had MC Ty and Shortee Blitz, the Verbalists and Sibihan. The month after that we had the Baskervillz Rez, Nefateri and MC Daka Silent Eclipse. We've also had people stepping up for the freestyle – Fallacy, Taipanic from Blak Twang, Stir, who really killed it on the first night and Sureshot, who was excellent too. For August we've got Icepick and others lined up.

Door policy? No artificial attitudes.

Music policy?

Basically, it's hip hop but it's too simple to just call it that. Hip hop as a term is much broader than most people think. We play hip hop and everything that encompasses. We also like to go back into the Eighties as well as deal with Nineties hip hop. Don't be surprised if you hear Beatles renditionsl Best moment?

There have been so many highlights. It's difficult because I could say it was when everyone was singing "All You Need Is Skills," or when Mikey Supa battered it, or when MCD darked it, or when Ty totally smashed it.

The dinner party at the Rhythmic. They booked a dinner party on the same night as the Jamand we rushed in. To get the diners out we got a sample of me screaming "Fuck the dinner party" and looped it and the band put a beat behind it. It was wicked. Contentious comment:

Fuck all the magazines, the sponsors and the grant authorities who persist in keeping Still Brok Productions still broke.

Why spend the night at Apricot Jam?

Because you're guaranteed positive, creative energy and a blatant good time.

ANTI SOCIAL

My Way Essential Platinum

The work of Hixxy & Sunset. As with a lot of Hixxy tunes, as soon as a party recognises the track, they go mad and "My Way" is no exception. It's not absolutely brilliant riffs and that typically hard Hixxy sound. The female vocal is excellent without being cheesy and is used to its full capacity with plenty of breakdowns using different string arrangements and piano. The flipside, "24:7" is another massive anthem too. 10 with off-stabs which soon break into an excellent familiar piano line. After that, there are some vocals which, I feel, could be a bit stronger, although the whole track works well. 8

DJTWIST & FRIENDLY Mayhem

Formulated in the same way as a lot of hardcore tunes, this one has a difference in its sounds. There are old school stabs in a "here we go" style, and although they sound a bit dirty, the overall flavour works well. It may not be an anthem, but it will certainly get plenty play. 7

SCOTTBROWN Outside World

Evolution

Scott Brown at his finest with a typically bouncy, breakbeathappy stomper. It's full of energy with a clean Amen break, loads of excellent stab sounds and riffs. synth sounds to compliment it and an arrangement second to none. This won't be massive due to the lack of vocal, but it's still a brilliant production, 9

DOUGAL

All The Way Essential Platinum

This has got a very clean intro with a typical build-up of chopped vocals and beats that head into a breakdown full of originality with strange vocals and excellent synth sounds. After that, it's fullon all the way with brilliant octave changes and an 100 per cent professional production. 8

CHRISC White Wolf Mind Over Matter

An energetic start to this one with high-speed breakbeats and a hard-edged techno feel. It's an intense track with good analogue sounds and hard stabs. Still, it is a bit of a novelty track too, with an old Eighties pop sample I can't remember the name of, 7

WAXMAN You're The Voice

Ravin' Mad

There's nothing new with the arrangement here, although it bangs away with some nice stabs and an overriding melody. The first stab breakdown is not bad, but the vocal break is yet another rip-off of an old pop tune which, for me, is not really the way forward for this genre, 5

DRUID & ENERGY Future Dimensions

Bonkers

Excellent kick-drum and percussion with clean stabs, wicked 303's and a quiet breakbeat help Druid & Energy's "Future Dimensions" bounce along with some pleasant synth and a simple but effective bassline. There's no big hook but it's an excellent production. 8

DNA, SWIFT & FREEFALL Elevation

Essential Platinum

This one has been around for a couple of months on dubplate and now, at last, it's appearing as an Essential Platinum promo. There's a good intro which builds into a brilliant, mellow breakdown with loads of feeling and excellent sounds. It's excellently produced and well arranged with a real touch of class. 9

UNDERGROUND MOVEMENT Kinetik

An interesting number here from Scotland with some good new concepts and different sounds, although it's not too heavy either. The tune bounces along happily between different stab riffs and a plinky piano with some really good percussion and an overall catchy rhythm. 7

D-ZYNE & FURY Hyperhydrosis

This hard stomper pounds along with some fierce analogue sounds pitch-bent in all angles with an added housey string. The mid-breakdown is mellow and floaty, which returns with the analogue to make a brilliant combination. Excellent work from these two hardcore producers.8

DJKAS Oceans Apart Bavin' Mad

The foundations to this track are really solid and the lead stab breakdown is very simple but extremely catchy. But I'm turned off immediately by the vocal sample. I'm surprised that labels still get away with doing this kind of thing, unless of course this sample has been licensed. 6

album BASS X Happy To Be Hardcore

If you're into the Scottish, Scott Brown-style of bouncy techno, then you'll love this album, which kicks off with a 1997 remix of "Hardcore Disco". Out of the eight tracks on "Happy To Be Hardcore", I prefer the first two on the A-side, but there are some harder tunes as well and even some piano tracks in there too. 8

singles CITADEL OF KAOS Spice Of Life

A slightly slower tempo here from Citadel Of Kaos. An excellent stomper with several weird and wonderful sound effects and some great acid sounds. The different sections merge nicely together and although it's not a powerful track, it's definitely got a touch of class. 7

FADE & BANANAMAN white lahel

Although this track has obviously been put together very well, it's yet another pop sample rip-off which does the credibility of our music no good at all. It's a shame, because I know these boys can make excellent original material. 5

DJELL&DREAM Wines Of Love Essential Platinum

A real summer tune with sharp vocals and a catchy intro with rap sample stabs. The first breakdown is full-on rush business, joined by a "Mentasm' stab which is very similar to The Prodigy's "Charlie". Next up is the reagae rhythm and bassline, before it's back into the full-on hardcore sound. 8

GO MENTAL

Go Mental

Very similar in style to most of the Go Mental tunes, this one's got a hard kick drum and simple stab riffs which lead into a laidback vocal. It has good production and lots of sounds, although it's nothing too original. 7

VINYLGROOVER My Guardian Angel The World Of Obsession

A heavy Amen breakbeat kicks this one off with a good building intro which goes into a mellow breakdown. On the other hand, the vocal lyrics (taken from The Beatles "Let It Be") are absolutely not my cup of tea! This is bound to go down well with some of the ravers and it is nicely put together, but it definitely doesn't score any credibility points. 6

SHARKEY & TRIXXY Genesis

Bonkers

The intro to this one sounds like something from a sci-fi movie. The beats kick in on a Sharkev tip

From newspaper boy to ESSENTIAL PLATINUM hardcore star.

DOUGAL gives us the lowdown on his precious imprint

What did you do before starting Essential Platinum? Well I started off being a paper boy for my local newsagent, after that I progressed to working at Spectra Sound and Lighting company in Northampton, where I helped out in the shop and assisted Don with setting up private sound systems at various clubs which included Milwaukees where both ESP and Helter Skelter were promoting nights every Friday. It was at this point where I got friendly with Murray from ESP. After continual hassling and persuasion from me, Murray agreed to book me and from then on I haven't really had the time to look back, with my career as a DJ and an artist luckily going from strength to strength!

Who runs the label? Basically myself and lan [Hixxy].

Which DJs within the hardcore circuit support the label's sound?

Dougal, Hixxy, Breeze, DNA, Force & Styles, Slipmatt, Sy and Seduction. What's the biggest selling record to date from Essential Platinum and how many sales?

"Toytown" [EPUK1] sold 5,500 units. However "Now You've Got My Love" [NEP1] is looking to do well, if not better than that,

In what direction is your label heading musically?

To progressively produce tunes which have that underground vibe the raver respects, after all if we didn't have the ravers support from the very start then we would certainly not be where we are today. Essential Platinum Recordings therefore intend to keep the same music policy along with the same underground style the raver enjoys, rather than going full-on commercial and loosing the real vibe and reputation the label has worked very hard to build.

Best release in terms of musical quality?

"Toytown", "Really Love You", "Together Forever", "Midnight Express", "Innervation", "Get Into Love", "Got To Go", "24:7" and the very soon to be released "My Way". Which artists have you released so far?

Essential Platinum Artists: Mickey Skeedale, Breeze, Sunset Regime, DNA and E-Logic. Other artists: Force & Styles, DJ Ell and DJ Swift. Where do you see your label in five years time?

To be as strong and progressive as it is now.

For those who don't understand hardcore define it? Energetic dance music, kick drum and break beat orientated with live vocals and real instruments all of which should have an uplifting feel!

A stunning release on the quite superior Hooj Choons, produced by German

Nothing like a bit of Belgian quirkiness to remind us what a bunch of musical stiffs the Brits can be. RAINBOW BRIDGE In Deep Shit Rainbow Bridge

Playing on In Deep's "Last Night A DJ Saved My Life" vocal, these schizophrenic bog flushing beats don't seem to now whether they are an Armitage Shanks or an Ideal Standard. At just over 140 bpm we're squatting in No Man's Land, which surprisingly works in its favour. Pitched down it flushes well into a breaks set, and pitched up it will loo roll nicely onto a drum & bass mix up. 8

DARK GLOBE Sprintrain Posture Hard Hands

Tough edged tech beats from the people who brought you "Mondo Scurro". Abstract Mars Rover-like transmissions-signal wigglings orbit a digitec groove that's more likely to work its way into the sets of the techno bods than that of the rock star rift booze beaters. 7

YUM YUM The Vision/Piece Of Mind Sperm

Greenwich's fiercely independent Sperm imprint is a label which goes from strength to strength. Helpless/Mr Jolly Phantasm

A genre busting sound that combines trance and punk... Trunk, anyone? "Helpless," is a hi-NRG psyche-workout with dark slabs of fierce percussion and terrifying vocal sample woven through a mesh of didgeridoo trance, while "Mr Jolly" is another frightener with a bruising sound and a fine line in maniacal laughter. Dark but brilliant. 8

TALLA 2XLC What Time Is Love Urban, Germany

From the space invader motif on the cover, to the last hum of electronica on the final reworking, this is a record that screams quality Euro at the listener. Retouchings come courtesy of "Planet Trax" and "Doug Laurent", with Doug pulling off a narrow victory. Talla is the man behind label Tetsuo, trainspotters. 7

VINCENT DE MOOR Flowtation

HUMAN BLUE Stonehenge

Human Blue's "Stonehenge" is powered by a rock-sold bassline and distorted riff which slowly shunts into a screeching climax to wow fluoro-fanciers on dancefloors across the country "Psychotix", on the flip, is a morning track of indisputable quality. Both tracks hail from Gothenburg, Sweden, funnily enough, where they were presumably picked up for UK distribution by our very own Koyote. Tuff stuff. 7

WARLOCK

Aural Spectrum Buddja, Belgium

"Solid Rez Grid", "Capta Goa" and "Western Timez" are the offerings this time round from the superlative Belgian label who specialise in a healthy blend of both psychedelic and classic Euro product, often on the same release. Here they do just that, with stunning results. A winner. 8

V-TRAX Subway 26 Collision

V-Trax is Jean Michel Vertieden, who first released this contemporary classic on Belgian label Hotside back in 1994. Three years later, it's a gem which still shines bright, with man-of-themoment Vincent De Moor and Tony De Vit on polishing duty this time around. Rumour has it that Vertieden is now retired from music. Oi, Vertieden, no! 8

PABLO GARGANO Eve 17/The Runner

Eve

The last Eve release this side of the summer break sees label topboy Pablo Gargano serve up two mixes of "The Runner" ("NRG" and "Trance") and "Introscope". "NRG" is the anthem for mid-set madness, "Trance" will sit nicely with BBE lovers, and "Introscope" is vintage Pablo to the core. If you've ever bought anything on Eve or Metropolitan, you'll know what I mean. 8

BASS 6 Am Five

Basic

No idea about this one, other than it's bloody good, it's the first release on the Basic imprint, and it was knob-twiddled by Joe Daniel (UK) and Offer Brown (Israel). No, I'm none the wiser either, but if you can get your hands on one of only 500 copies, available from early August, you'll lap this one up just the same. 7

CROP CIRCLES Lunar Civilisation

Auracle

Crop Circles are Messrs Paterno, Lanfranconi, Begotti, Rizzo,

D'amato and Scrimizzi, according to the label copy. I guess that makes this pretty much an Italian release, but the influence remains squarely UK. A fabulous tripped-out trancer from the boys who gave us "Full Mental Jackpot" a while back. A must-check cut. 9

SUBCLOUDS On Red

Globalistic

More summer madness from Sweden, as Frederik Axelson and Richard Berglof (you may possibly recognise their names from tracks on the Phantasm and Psychic Deli imprints) serve up two stunners. "On Red" kicks off with a human beatbox breakbeat before taking a trip into electronic arabesque, while "Under The Sun" is a morning tune for lost-it loveduppers. Cool. 8

RAINFOREST Birds 1997 Remixes Rainforest

This one was massive on R&S back in 1992, you might recall, selling over 60,000 copies and being licensed to over 20 dance compilations. The two original mixes are featured, along with four others that range from house to much trancier interpretations. A great mid-set dropshot for old timers who can still raise a grin. 8

GROWLING MAD SYNCHRO Velociraptor

Ritkam, Bansi and Synchro from Amsterdam deliver two killer cuts straight from the psyche-underground on this, their debut twelve. "Velociraptor" is as tough as anything in Jurassic Park, while flipside "Bandicoot On The Run" is almost twice as nice. Prehistoric samples mingle with neanderthal grooves for today's stoned age. 9

SERGIO C

Texture Vinvlife

The debut release from Italy's newest techno label features one of the most influential artists of Southern Europe, Sergio Crestini. Crestini you may recognise from outings on the now-defunct Frankfurt Beat imprint and collaborations with Massimo Vivona. EJ DOUBELL The Ninth Insight

Enterpress

Emma returns with a hard slice of Euro-tribal aimed at tuffer hardbag dancefloors. "Good Vibrations" (forget the Beach Boys, this one is for the girlz) is a slower paced chugger for those sexy, tongue-led sessions. Tribal beats with a hypnotic electro feel will drive you to ecstasy... If you're not already on one, that is!

HONEY CLUB Daydreaming

Vito Benito (recent re-mixer of Duke and PJ & Duncan) hits the racks with an acid-tinged alternative house track that would groove a graveyard of geriatrics. Dave Randall's fierce Amsterdam Bus" mix will be the most-dropped cut. Benito's Honey Club show they are an act worth keeping a close eye on. 8

Slamm

Mankey is Andy Manston of Clockwork Orange, and here he does what he does best: making records, not pretending he runs a cutting-edge club. Magic Alec, Rated PG, The Chemist and Klubbheads boost a great twelve to even greater heights. Fab. 9

KINKY ROLAND Brazil

More Protein

Everyone's favourite German funkster gets all Latino with four choice cuts of preposterously high quality. Seems Kinky has developed a penchant for Latin American culture. But before you jump to any powdery conclusions about Colombia, Bolivia or Peru, rest assured the flavas in question come strictly from... Brazil! 9

SURWAY You Can Do Anything Greenlinht

Victor Imbres latest outing looks bigger than anything he's done since Alcatraz's "Give Me Luv". "You Can..." A-sides with "Epic Journey Mix", a cut full of superb layered hypnotic build, while over-vinyl there's the sparser, darker, and appropriately named "Original Manchester Mix". Will be huge on the grooviest floors. 8

FUTURE BREEZE Why Don't You Dance With Me AM:PM

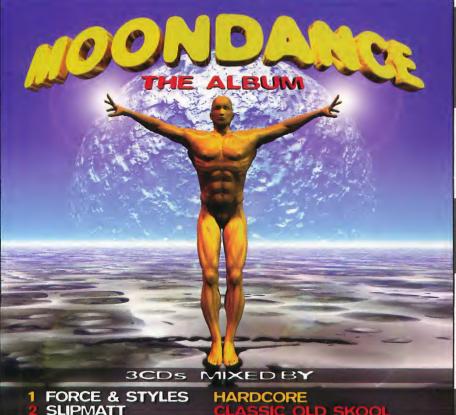

The windy boys are Markus Boehme and Martin Hensing, twentysomething Teutonic knobtwiddlers best known for their Petit Prince imprint. Reworkings come courtesy of Klubbheads, the Tradetastic DONS, Noom imprint supremo Commander Tom and Sharam. This one is massive on cable station Box at the moment. vital release As techno splinters into ever more divided camps, this monumentally groovesome hybrid comes as some welcome relief. The title says it all, it's not techno and it's not house, but it is an absolute and, dare I say, a little bit of soul. Categorisation is limitation. Open your ears and your feet will follow. 10 singles BUCKFUNK 3000

Planetshock Futurerock Language

Insane mishmash of electro beatz, drum & bass dynamics and warped technoid sound FX from Harrow's Si Begg. Imagine a double vexed Ed Rush tearing it up big time at a Zulu Nation block party and your not even half way there. Darkside cyber jungalistic electro juice for tech-stepping, b-boy renegades of funk. 8

DAREBELS House Nation Under A Groove Ualy

A timely re-release that will have Muzik's older readers reminiscing about how good the pills were in the old days and our younger punters fruggin' away to its Funkadelic-meets-Ron Hardy splendour. Future Monument and K-Fingers take care of remix duties but it's the original that'll once again get the good hard spanking it so thoroughly deserves. A true classic. 9

BABY FORD Bford 13

Source, Germany

Lovely silky smooth advanced abstraction from one of the UK's original techno maestros. Hauntingly lush and deeply futuristic, the lucid atmospherics, quick fire bass tones and squelchy acid refrains present here are all cunningly delivered in a highly complex, but effortlessly engaging, manner. 8

MAAS Look At Me Now, Falling Soma

The original mix of one of the highlights from the "Latitude" long-player alongside a couple of new interpretations from those way cool French blokes I-Cube. It's the "Simple Mix" which really does the trick. A splendidly summery fusion of old school analogues, lush melodics and loud crisp drums this is destined to rock dance floors of all shapes and sizes. Trés bon. 8

PURE SCIENCE Brighter Days

Pure Science

Anybody who has witnessed one of this mans live PA's will testify to his astounding ability to wind entire dance floors around his little finger without even batting an eyelid. His understanding of 4/4 dynamics is second to none and these unbeatably driving warehouse grooves suggest that Pure Science is quite simply a legend in the making. 9

BURGER/INK Bring Trance Back To Las Vegas Harvest, Germany

Don't let the dodgy title put you off, this isn't some dreadful UV clad psychedelic burn-up, but in fact a rather splendid sub-aquatic Basic Channelesque groover. Very subtle, fine, moving and about a thousand times more trance inducing than the entire TIP back catalogue. 7

OZ ARTISTS The Zone EP

Oz Interactive, Iceland

If you're a computer/Internet freak you may already be familiar with this lot. However, if like me you don't know one end of an Apple Mac from another you can still enjoy the beats. Swaying between lush panoramic deep house and spacious skeletal spook-outs, all delivered with an experimental but unusually funky sensibility, it's cool stuff. 7

NOTTURNO The After Hours EP Welt

A perfectly titled four-tracker which marries fantastically mournful techno strings to bass heavy deep house grooves in a beautifully subtle manner. Laid back but powerful enough to move any half decent dance floor. The two best tracks here fall somewhere between a skunked up Stefan Robbers and a youthful Virgo Four. 9

JAMIE LIDELL Freekin' The Frame EP Mosquito

Highly original four-tracker of wildly twisted analogue driven hard funk from one of the founder members of London's infamous Subhead collective. Inventively structured, supremely animated and deftly produced with all manner of far-out sounds, the standouts are the positively insane "Freely Freekin" and the dub tinged electro from another planet which is the excellent "Compaction Blues". 8

EPHEBE Visions EP

Mosaic

Steve O'Sullivan teams up with Lee Grange for another trip to the darker side of minimalism. Restrained and at times almost subdued, what these deep bass powered grooves lack in energy is more than compensated for by the strange, edgy undercurrents lurking beneath the surface. 7

AUBREY Solid Grooves

South Coast bad boy Aubrey with another typically cool emission for track-head DJs to get busy in the mix with. Demonstrating the breadth of his style he climbs aboard a multi-coloured funk train for the lead track, comes over all Cajmere-like for "Cycloid" and then dons his flares and platforms for the excellently entitled "Down At The Disco". 8

MARK AMBROSE Smokey Clinic EP

Cravon

After his amazingly funky EP for Solid Grooves, Mark Ambrose continues his unstoppable ascent with four more top-notch techno house mantras. Juxtaposing squiggly technoid sound FX and warped alien atmospherics with his heart renching synths and booming bass lines Ambrose is most definitely a talent to watch. 8

DEEPART Untitled

Myoclonic

Want challenging, rhythmically inventive, uncompromising, hugely twisted avant-funk? Then look no further than Deepart. "Territorial Agreement" is the soundtrack to the nastiest, most scary film you never saw and "Sea Of Clouds" is the sound of robot lovers crying in the rain. "Duat" is cocktail lounge muzak for androids and "Determinoid" conjures images of the machines of the future battling for the supremacy of a banished Earth. 9

CHANCE Mc DERMOTT Blackball EP

Black Nation, USA

More linear experimentation, militant song titles and Millsesque squiggles from deepest Kalamozoo. The stop/start kicks and disjointed claps of "Blackbird" have a satisfyingly disorientating effect, but it's the abrasive cyclical motions of "Fuck The Police" and "U Feel Me" that'll get 'em cheering down at Lost.7

BANDULU New Foundation

Bandulu's far gone, but seldomly displayed, dub sensibility has always been one of their most attractive facets and with "New Foundation" they make a welcome return to their techno tinged reggae roots. With John O'Connell at the helm delivering a full on vocal this is more "Better Nation" than "Minimal Nation". 7

albums VARIOUS ARTISTS

Elements Of Jazz Volume 2 Kickin'

An excellent long-player which celebrates some of the finer moments thrown up by techno's ever evolving love affair with the sounds and structures of jazz. With not one duff tune in sight and a tracklisting which includes the likes of David Caron, lan O'Brien, Jamie Reid, Wavescape and the truly wondrous Scuba, it's a cool package of real musical gems. 21st century be-bop for Nineties soul rebels. 9

VARIOUS ARTISTS Hard Education

Downwards

Birmingham's Downwards crew keep the hardbeat flag flying at full mast with eight exclusive tracks of poundingly funked-up rhythmical intensity entitled "Full Education". Anthony Childs fares best with his percussion fuelled tear-ups while Regis keeps it minimal with some loop based hypnotica, Female slams it down hard with turbo charged drum hydraulics and Portion Reform round the album off with some Jeff Mills-style ambient string plucking. 8

VARIOUS ARTISTS CD 2000 Electrecord

K 7,Germany

The world's premiere electro label with a top drawer compilation album of pure, stream lined 808 powered machine funk. Cutting edge beatz mingle with blunted breaks and high cholesterol pacjams as artists such as Third Electric, Kit Builders, Invisible Man and many others show there's plenty of life left in the big daddy of contemporary electronic dance music.8

VARIOUS ARTISTS Hard Clubbing 3 Distance,France

The title may suggest a hell raising, devil worshipping gabba-fest of extreme noise terror, but thankfully that's not the case here. What you get instead is an okay but pretty unremarkable collection of techno-lite club cuts from the likes of First Movement, Piere J and Rhythm In Progress. Basically well produced but on the whole somehow lacking in spirit and way too derivative to make any real impact. 6

shows us the contents of his record bag

Something that really stands out is the new Jamie Lidell release, it's definitely my number one record at the moment, it's fucking unreal. Hove the way it stops and starts and basically sounds like he's chucked a load of springs into the speaker. My next record is Jay Denham's "Multiply EP", I'm playing the first track on the B-side. It's fairly typical of his style, nice and funky and it's excellent for EQing. Something else that's good for EQing is "Sickness by Plastikman, it takes a long time to build so it goes down better at smaller, more intimate clubs where you don't have to slam it as much but it's top-notch. I'm really into tribally techno and there are a couple of tracks on the B-side of the new Lab Insect record that are unreal, hard and really funky. The new "Downwards" compilation is dropping well for me also, the Surgeon tracks are really original and I'm really into the Registracks as well. They're just constant grooves but they're excellent for cutting up.

One of my biggest tracks records right now is the Dave Angel mix of "Discotamination" by Kamaflarge. It's on Billy Nasty's imprint and it's huge, it doesn't matter where I'm playing it literally tears the roof off. There are these mad scratching sounds on it which everyone loves and I'm sure it's going to do really well. Another floor filler is Atomizer by Spectrum, I mix it from a third of the way in as the starts a bit dodgey. The breakdown's a bit too long for my liking but when it They're both four trackers which go from experimental to funky to really hard and I play out every track on both EPs. In fact after Jamie Liddel I'd say Backward are probably my favourite artists at the moment.

singles DONRICARDO She's Having My Baby

Call this Peter Hunnigale meets Beres Hammond's "Over You" and you wouldn't be far wrong With the success of the track (former reggae chart Number One), repackaging and quality of the six mixes, it will be a shame if "She's Having My Baby" doesn't hit the nationals. Lovely tune.9

ZIGGY MARLEY & THE MELODY MAKERS Everyone Wants 2 B

A Clint Eastwood movie style rhythm with a nice little rap segment and ponderous beat mark a change for Ziggy. Not one of his usual conscious/good vibes tunes. Probably won't break him over here though. However, with the Fugees on the heavy hip hop/dub mix, who knows? Since everything they touch turns to gold. 6

SHAGGY Piece Of My Heart Virgin

Now here's a man who really understands his market. Shaggy's success remains a constant yardstick for dancehall reggae. This cover of the Irma Franklin/Janet Joplin classic "Piece Of My Heart" is more Radio One-style material. G'wan Shaggy, do yer thang. 7

DX1 Dubwise EP Cruise International

Leeds-based dubists bring some good production, consoling melodies and wealth of potential. However, this is not deepcore dub nor sound system material on the roots scene. 7 albums SUGARMINOTT Reggae Max Jet Star

It's a shame that we always refer to the effortless grace of Sugar Minott's vocals in the past tense now. Minott was the original dancehall reggae king of the early Eighties. This twenty track collection includes the hit "Good Thing Going" and the classic "Hard Time Pressure".

VARIOUS ARTISTS Ragga Ragga Ragga 9

Arguably the freshest "Ragga Ragga Ragga" compilation since Volume 5, with ragga's man of the moment Danny Brownie and his Main Street crew (Buccaneer, Red Rat, General Degree, Goofy and Hawkeye) controlling 12 of the 18 tracks. Another number one hit... Again!8

BUSH MAN Nyah Man Chant

Enough with the Bob Marley comparisons already. Being the new roots & dancehall star, Marley comparisons are inevitable. However, Bush Man's mature vocals and conscious lyrics stand on their own, Steely and Clevie provide the natural sounds reminiscent of Seventies Rasta roots. A promising debut.8

SYLVIA TELLA Reggae Max Jet Star

Tella's positive messages in her music mirror her personality and way of living. This collection has everything. A glut of cultural, religious, conscious and lovers' tunes, "Reggae Max" is the ultimate conspectus of Sylvia Tella's music to this point. She remains the UK's finest female reggae singer. 8

HORACE ANDY Good Vibes 1975 - 1979 Blood & Fire

"Good Vibes" draws from a selection of Andy's post Studio One tunes from 1975 to 1979, with accompanying dubs. It includes the classic "Skylarking" and the gently brooding "Youths Of Today". Andy's obsessing voice and evocative lyrics are something everybody should experience. Easily one of the best Blood & Fire releases. 10

VARIOUS ARTISTS Well Charged - Channel One Pressure Sounds

It maybe just a molecule, but it's enough. It was from the Hookim

VARIOUS ARTISTS 1997 Reggae Gold

Barring the omission of Red Rat's "Shelly-Ann", this award winning dancehall/ ragga compilation has all the hits of the year so far. How many compilations can claim that? This is even more precious because none of the tracks have attained a UK release. "If Jah", "Rubbers", "Fudgie", "Love Sponge" et al. Fork out the import money. The selection speaks for itself. 10

Brothers' famous Channel One studios that the Rockers revolution (from 1975 to 1978) began, Born from Sly Dunbar's militant drumming style (as part of Channel One's rhythm band The Revolutionaries), "Well Charged" brings twenty of Channel One's finest hits from that era. A necessity for all reggae fans. 9

BOUNTY KILLER Ghetto Gramma

Greensleeves

"Ghetto Gramma" is a collection of Bounty's tracks [none having appeared on any of his five previous albums] with King Jammy. There are some rare gems such as "Time To Realize" as well as enough massive hits such as "Book, Book, Book" and "Smoke The Herb". While some of the tunes may sound a little out of date, you can't argue with the superb quality. 8

DADDY RINGS Stand Out

Greensleeves

An album full of contradictions. Freddie McGregor's soft "Rumours" rhythm with Rings' formidable DJing vocals? A hard-core hip hop rhythm with wailing rooticall horns? Gussie Clarke is obviously attempting to do something different. Definitely a fresh approach with some pretty good results. 7

BUIUBANTON & ANTHONY B

Freedom Fighters - Live In Concert Power Play, Jamaica

If you have the stomach for bad sound quality, then this is a great chance to hear Jamaica's two most militant DJs ripping it up at Kingston's Cactus Club. "Freedom Fighters" successfully captures the fire, passion and energy of both performers. 7

BURNING SPEAR Appointment With His Majesty Heartbeat

As the creator of a banquet of classic Seventies roots reggae hits, Burning Spear is a reggae music icon. On "Appointment With His Majesty", he continues to sing the words of Jah, spread peace while expressing his own cultural and socio-political ideologies. The rhythms may not be as raw as his earlier material, but the voice is just as sweet and the spirit within the messages remains equally as potent.

release These guys have come a long way since their slick suited days of a few years back. Showing they are more of a band than just a vocal act. Blowing up the Jazz Cafe in London recently and leaving jaws to hit the floor at their musicianship and stage routines. The beats are so tuff and raw around the edges yet the sound is massive and fills the room with a great atmosphere. This album moves along way ahead of any competition - defining good black music for the Nineties and beyond. 10

NO TENSION Chilli In Rio

Chili Funk

Lofty and Ben Mitchell present their final excursion to the rhythms of the Copa Cobanna and hit us right on our feet with an infectious, building, summer dancer. Just makes me wanna hustle and dig out my dodgy summer shorts.

DENOSH Tonight Parlophone

Third single to emerge from Parlophone's Street motif and this time Denosh look across the pond for some inspirational r&b. Full of smooth vocals and a song which actually makes some sense. Coupled with storming remixes from Blacksmith, this is a surefire winner in a sea of bland music. 8

OMAR Say Nothin' RCA

What I love about this homeboy is his ability to turn out street songs that are put down his way. uninfluenced by what's going on out there. Awesome set of mixes here, and it's Ray Hayden and Opaz who do the boy proud. This is the true sound of Black Britain. Young hopefuls take note. 10

CHANGING FACES G.H.E.T.T.O.U.T Atlantic

Smooth, delivered with a haunting feel in a tale of boyfriend double dealing on the personal front. Yes girls, you've been there, worn the T-shirt and seen the film, but it's life and the Faces put it better than we ever could. Cool, so cool. 8

PHATTA What Are You Waiting For? Warner Bros

If you can get past the security net surrounding this rare vinyl release and actually obtain this gem of Nineties soul, then you're in for a rare treat of fresh, yet almost Eighties boogie which is something one can't find in the land of slow 'n' low. One of the best soul dance tunes to emerge for a long time. 8

Normally, this man would instantly get record of the century let alone the issue. But this is just a straight ahead, no cheap thrills, collection of the word we call gospel. singles KENNY DIXON JR

In Loving Memory KDJ, USA

Whoever this is supposed to be a tribute to, they could hardly have asked for a better farewell, as the mysterious Mr Dixon moves from his usual deep house terrain into more way out, space jam electronic groove mode. Like floating on a gently rocking lilo adrift on the Seas Of Jupiter. Jazzually wonderful. 8

KITACHI The Spirit (Remixes) Dope On Plastic

Top remix from those Aloof boys as they take Kitachi's post-modern dub original and blast it towards the smokin' heavens with a heavy dose of moody-as-fuck live drums and analogue darkness. If "Bug In The Bassbin" has an evil twin brother, "The Spirit" is he. There's also a new Kitachi version alongside Roni Size's junglistic take. 7

FRETLESS AZM Lock Sock/Live Textures Jam

No rest for the wicked (jammer) with more surreal post-jazz from the Fretless man. As usual, sounding like they were somehow composed from the detritus of ethnic drumming, space funk and alien electronics, this pair of tunes work on your alpha waves like some lost frequency from the planet Funk. Succumb to the sounds of the nu iazz suburbs. 7

TERRANOVA FEATURING MANUEL GOTTSCHING Tokyo Tower AGV

The Berlin lot seem to have lost their Turntable prefix but picked up veteran German electronic guru Manuel Gottsching instead. On the evidence presented here, definitely a real bargain deal, as 'Tokyo Tower" uses the most supple of summer breaks to venture out into the furthest reaches of low-key electronic doodle-jamming. The kind of thing Teletubbies probably chill out to. And that's a compliment. 7

JEAN MARIE-AERTS IMX 2

Fusebox, Belgium

Straight outta the Ninja Tune jungle, this 36-year old Belgian producer has conjured up the kind of freestyle experimentalism that so frequently lapses into inane doodling. Not on this occasion.
"Tremol" and "Corse" dig so deep into Jean-Marie's bag of tricks (zany samples to slide guitar to timestretched beats), Amon Tobin et al should be on the phone pronto. 7

DANMASS Drugs And Hospitals EP Dust II Dust

Dan and Massimo return to rock the party in every conceivable style with their usual blatant disregard for form or function. Rough-neck hip hop and breakbeat funk with a distinct Fatboy Slim influence are to the fore, along with liberal helpings of bumpy house, big beat rockin and even the "Taxi" theme. Not pretty, but effective all the same. 7

AGENT CAINE Where's Spock?/Different Ears Narcotix

Lazy-as-you-like stoner jam stuff from the Essex imprint, which stands out from the crowd with a strategic use of breakbeats crisper than a sun-dried Kettle chip and deliciously summer-light melodies, bluesy vocals and deep basslines. Don't be surprised if you bump into this on its way to Epic Heights. 7

ADD N TO X Murmer Satellite

Zoweee!! Just imagine if The Chemical Brothers travelled back in time to make some psychedelic jazz record on a Seventies German experimentalism label and you might understand where the mania of "Murmer" has its roots. Crazee shit. The flipside, though, is utter tosh. 6

95 NORTH PRESENTS BASEMENT CULTURE Odyssey

Groove On, USA

Top-notch garage 'n 'house producers they might well be, but if 95 North keep jazzing and jamming their breakbeats like this shuffle-tastic 11-minute epic, the place in the downtempo Hall Of Fame is theirs for the taking. Expect to see this tear up the dancefloor like rough lino shredding a breakdancer's skin. 8

BUSHY Spike Back EP Catskills

The label dedicated to improving the London-Brighton trunk line lays it deep for their third release as Bush put the electro-funk skills into Catskills. There are four tracks ranging from haunting, deep twisted funk to freaky filtered hard hop beats and the gorgeous closing shot of "Fruity" that's really rather sad. 8 albums BABY MAMMOTH

One... Two... Freak

The third long-player from the woolly Hull ones is, in all fairness, something of a disappointment. Laid-back electronics so timid they wouldn't say boo to a fluffy toy, the ambience sadly isn't complimented by anything remotely funky, gruff, leftfield or edgy so that even the vaguely uptempo, jungley cuts come over as ultra-clean to the point of sterility. "Freak" beats? Not here, mate. 6

BERGER, HODGE, MOUFRANG & RUIT Conjoint

KM20, Germany Something of a meeting of great, post-jazz minds here as Moufang (Move D/Deep Space Network), Plus 8's Jamie Hodge, vibes-man Karl Berger and guitarist Gunter Ruit-Kraus jam all along the electronic telegraph. Flitting between abstract, cocktail lounge-core and elusive, low-key strain of jazz as interpreted by the somewhat addled barman in the Jupiter lounge. Curious. 7

SUB DUB Dancehall Malfunction

Asphodel, USA

Illbient meets heavy, heavy subsonic dub as New York's heirs of the Adrian Sherwood/Bill Laswell groove stoke their weirdo bongs with this collection of newies, remixes and live versions. The key here is they way the duo work industrial soundscapes, filtered distractions and abstract textures into the narrow confines of dub to create something altogether cooler and deeper than your average rootsman. 7

KITACHI A Strong Unit Done On Plastic

No, we're not 12 months behind the rest of the world. Just that Northern dub monsters Kitachi have rereleased their debut album on the back of those recent Roni Size/Aloof remixes, along with a bonus live CD from a Belgian gig. Dubby, trippy, industrial and sometimes just plain irreverent, there's still enough THC per beat here to have you groping the floorboards like a rasta without his contacts in. 7

CRUSTATION WITH BRONAGH SLEVIN Bloom

More pretenders to the Portishead crown. There s little offensive about "Bloom". Its production focusses on beautifully arranged strings, swelling chords and languid, trip hop beats, but with Slevin's voice rarely doing more than drifting wispely, melancholically by, there's a detached air of non-caring that makes it breeze over you without ever locking emotional horns, 5

RAMSHACKLE Chin On The Kerb

Edel, Germany Their first album didn't exactly shake the world, so it's no surprise, really, that this follow-up takes the same non-seismic path to trip-pop dullness. A little bit of dub, a little bit of dope and a whole load of over-wheening vocal tosh combined with a distinct tendency towards stadium balladry make this more of a pavement pizza. Shame really, considering Ben Chapman's part

The Italian porn star who ended up being an MP for the Love Party. I saw one of her films around the time of Italia '90 where she shags the key players in all the other teams so they're too exhausted to play against Italy, so Italy win the World Cup. And every player gets a blow-job as a prize!

'Elio E Le Storie Tese' – John Holmes, Una Vita Per II

lt's a tune I bought when I was studying in Italy and it's about the porn star, John Holmes.

Hove this city. The best thing is window-shopping. Not the girls but the incredible stuff you can see in shops, like 37 foot dildos. I go as often as I can. 'Eurotrash'

Great Friday night viewing. It's about the humour side of porn rather than the dirty, sleazy side, which is the way it should be.
The dildo hidden up my girlfriend's chimney

When she was a teenager, my girlfriend was given a vibrator as a birthday present from her friends. She hid it from her mother by sticking it up the chimney. It's never been found to this very day. Or even used!

NITE KING

just past three in the afternoon on a smouldering summer afternoon in Manhattan and we're sitting around on a rooftop somewhere on West 30th Street. Martin, the photographer, is snapping away like a man possessed, trying to spark some life into a bunch of New York house producers. Phillip Damien, the man behind the massive, kitsch-as-you-like Technique records, doesn't really need any persuading.

"Man, those shades are HOT", he hollers, grabbing the sunglasses from my head. "Hey Roland, you need a set of these."

Roland Clark, the singer-songwriter behind South Street Players' classic "Who Keeps Changing Your Mind", lumbers up and tries them on for size. "Yeah man, these are the ones for me," he drawls. "I'll give you 200 bucks for 'em."

I decline. They're my girlfriend's and I'm not taking any chances. The rest of the King Street crew look on, bemused at the antics of Clark and Damien. Everybody's relaxed and soaking up the sun. Even the label bosses are out and having a laugh.

Little wonder, because right now King Street are rocking. Their latest release has just hit Number One on the Billboard dance chart and in the four short years since they opened for business, they've built themselves such a reputation that "Echoes" magazine recently crowned them USLabel Of The Year.

It's easy enough to see why. The back-catalogue of King Street (and Nitegrooves, its eclectic sister imprint) reads like a who's who of house and garage, featuring Blaze, Mood II Swing, Roger S, Louie Vega, David Morales, Murk, DJ Pierre, Kerri Chandler, The Basement Boys and Pal Joey, to name just a few. And not only that, but they're the first to work with new talent too, pushing the likes of Mateo & Matos, Nick Jones, Phillip Damien and Urban Soul into the limelight.

When it comes down to it, everyone at King Street is simply in it for the music. A label for house-heads run by house-heads. The owner, Hisa Ishioka, believes in, "only using the best producers and vocalists and never releasing a record until it's perfect". And it shows.

By now, the photo shoot is over and everyone's heading back to the office. Time to catch up with the team that runs the label and four of the hottest producers working with King Street at the moment.

BRYAN TOLLIN (director of promotions), ROB WUNDERMAN (production manager) AND HISA ISHIOKA (label owner) OF KING STREET AND NITEGROOVES

What can people expect when they pick up a King Street or Nitegrooves release?

Bryan: "Consistent quality, we always strive for that. There's also a real variety in the King Street releases. More so now than ever before. We're using different producers from all spheres of dance music so that King Street and Nitegrooves releases can be played anywhere from big rooms to the smaller underground parties."

Hisa: "King Street is primarily for vocals, whereas on Nitegrooves anything goes. It can be dark, progressive, jazzy, anything." What's been your most successful release to date?

Bryan: "In terms of sales, David Morales' 'Philadelphia' has been the most successful. In terms of profile, Ultra Nate's 'Party Girl' was on a K-TEL compilation that went gold. It was used in 'Party Girl', an underground independent film here in the US."

What makes King Street and Nitegrooves different?

Bryan: "When you compare us to the other larger NY labels, I think King Street has more focus. It has a more solidly defined identity. The strong association between King Street and Paradise Garage means, as long as it's in the garage vain, we can go off in different directions and release music that other labels wouldn't. Basically, if you can dance to it, we'll release it."

Rob: "King Street also has a huge commitment to its artists. We want to see them develop and grow, just like we have grown."
What can we expect from King Street in the coming months?

Bryan: "We're in the middle of a huge restructuring process. We're still concentrating on underground dance music but we're getting more into albums and longer term projects. We're also signing our first artist, Kimara Lovelace. I think King Street is doing what the whole dance industry is doing, in that we've realised people need more identifiable faces. So that's what we're providing. In the first five years we didn't release anything on CD. This year we'll have long-players like 'The Abstract Jazz Lounge' and albums from Urban Soul and Kimara Lovelace."

ROLAND CLARK

Roland wrote, produced and sang on South Street Players' stone-cold classic "Who Keeps Changing Your Mind", while his latest release, "Show Me", is in huge demand thanks to a David Morales remix which is currently doing the rounds on acetate. How would you describe your production style?

"I would say I was more a song-writer than anything else. I don't really rate myself as a producer and I only recorded the South Street Players song because I couldn't find a vocalist to do it."

Who would you most like to work with?

"I've just finished working with Todd Terry on a track for my album. that was kind of a dream come true. But as for people I'd like to work with, it'd have to be Hani. I met him while he was still an intern working at Bass Hit studios, and even then he was better than most of the producers around. I knew when I saw him that he was going to be massive and now he's this super trackmaster."

COOL

PHILLIP DAMIEN

Phillip Damien is the maniac behind the novelty-but-nice Technique records. He never stops talking for more than 10 seconds. And that's only because he's shoving a Big Mac down his throat!
How would you describe your production style?

"Weak! I mean, everybody tells me it is pretty weak, so it must be. But I'm working on it."

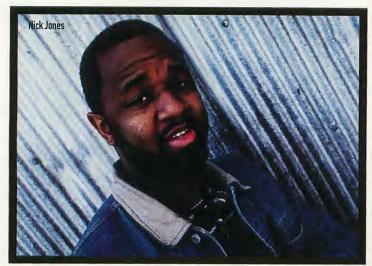

Why King Street?

"For the sneakers, man. That's why I do this shit. Ask anybody. I'm a sneaker freak. I buy a new pair every single day of my life. And house music pays for them. I don't need to do this to survive. I do other things for that. Right now, I'm producing a rock band and I've just finished shooting a movie."

So what inspires you in the studio. All those lonely sneakers out there without a home?

"I like annoying things. You know when you're on the dancefloor and you hear this hook going over and over and you think, 'Man, that shit's doing my head in'. And then, just before you walk off the floor it's like, 'Nah, that's dope'. That's the kind of thing that inspires me to do tracks. The real annoying stuff."

King St/Nitegrooves

NICK JONES

Nick Jones has been DJing in New York for over 10 years now. His Wild Pitch parties were where DJ Pierre got the name for his sound because they reminded him so much of the parties in Chicago. As a producer, he started off on Bobby Kondors' Massive B label before recording for Downtown 161, Maxi, and of course King Street. His latest cut. "Nick's Theme", is one of the best cuts on King Street's "Abstract Jazz Lounge" album. How would you describe your production style?

"Soulful. I like using real instruments. Bass, harmonica, flute or whatever, I like it live." Why King Street?

"I've got such huge respect for Hisa and what he's trying to do. I've known him for a long time and he's really cool to work with." $\frac{1}{2} \int_{\mathbb{R}^n} \frac{1}{2} \int_{$

What inspires you when you're in the studio?

"DJing really inspires me. I've just come back from Japan and people are so open to all kinds of music there, and you can play all night. Ten hours of everything from classics to the latest acetates."

MATEO & MATOS

From their cutting-edge sample workouts for New York killers like Freeze and Henry Street to their deep-as-you-like grooves for labels such as Spiritual Life and King Street, Mateo & Matos have got it covered.

How would you describe your production style?

"Deep. Moody. Soulful."

Why King Street?

"We just have a huge respect for what Hisa is doing. He's been part of the scene right since the Paradise Garage days and we really connect with where he's coming from." What inspires you when you're in the studio?

"Louie Vega's really inspirational. We've been checking him since the early days. Tommy Musto too. And from the disco point of view, we were really into labels like Prelude, SAM and all that kind of stuff."

KERRI CHANDLER

He's made records with his grandpa singing on them. He was born and raised in East Orange, New Jersey, home to a zillion other garage producers. His kick drums are legendary. Like fellow American studio-heads DJ Pierre and Todd Terry, his sound is totally unique. And at the moment he's making some seriously fat tunes. Check "Raw Grooves 3" on Chicago's Large, "Escrabos De Jo" (with Joe Claussell) on New York's lbadan, or his new album, "Kaoz On King Street", on (strangely enough) King Street. You started DJing when you were nine. How did that happen?

"My father was a DJ so I guess it just rubbed off on me. He had all this equipment about the house that I used to mess around on when he was out. Then one day he busted me. He was like, 'What are you trying to do?'. So I told him I was just mixing a few things up. He didn't believe I could do it, so I showed him. After that he used to take me to clubs with him and I'd watch him spin. I remember so many occasions and the different things that were done. Like the first time I ever heard anyone play live over the top of records. There was this guy, Pick Connelly, who used to play the flute while my dad was DJing. He'd be spinning old disco beats and tracks, mixing it up and letting Pick freestyle over the top. I still listen back to the old tapes and they still inspire me. Seeing that kind of thing when I was 11 or 12 years old did it for me, man. And I was so lucky never to get thrown out of the clubs. I'd just sit there, hiding in the booth. My father would sometimes let me play, but I could hardly see over the turntables!" Even without your father's influence, living in the same area as David Camacho, Kenny Carpenter, Tony Humphries and Michael Watford would surely have sealed your fate.

"Oh yeah. That whole Zanzibar vibe was just huge between Newark and East Orange. People used to come from all over the world because it was such a legendary club. Every kind of race, all kinds of fashions, people from every walk of life would go. It was amazing and it was all about the music."

You've rejected big money remixes from the likes of Enigma and Michael Jackson. Why?

"I love vinyl. It's what I grew up with and it's what I do for a living. I play records. I don't get the same feeling from a CD. You can't grab it, snatch it back, rip it up, run things over the top real quick, you know. Sure, you can pitch it and blend it in, but it ain't the same feeling. Because it's the major labels who are trying to phase out vinyl, working for them would be like helping to kill myself. I know when I deal with the independents that they're actually putting their heart and soul into things. It's much more personal. When you deal with major labels, it just feels like. 'Here's a song, there's the cheque, give us the remix'. I guess I'm just one of those guys who's trying to hold onto vinylas long as I possibly can."

Tell us a little about the inspiration behind your new "Kaoz On King Street" album.

"It made me think about my old material where I could really experiment and do things I don't normally try. It's more of a feel album, just a raw, one-take kind of thing. That's the way underground music should really be. If it's all polished and perfect, it's too predictable.

"I like doing things I'm not supposed to do. Everybody seems to be doing tracks because that's what's popular. Tracks are cool, but there's nothing you really remember except 'da-da-de, da-da-da' or whatever the hook is. I like vocals and songs. I also like dealing with male vocalists. Everybody deals with female artists, so I like to cut against the grain with that. You've got to do what others aren't." Have you any plans for the future?

"I'd definitely like to do more albums. I've got them planned in my head already. The next one is another Madhouse compilation, it's a follow-up to 'A Basement, A Red Light And A Feeling'. This one has contributions from Roy Ayers. Michael Watford, Arnold Jarvis, Adeva and a bunch of old jazz musicians. It'll go from hard to jazz to downtempo. I'm not going to do any r&b or shit like that though. I think this year's going to be my live year, the year where I'm going to start scaring people. Like, "Where the hell is he coming from?". It's the same with my DJing, you don't know what the hell I'm going to play. You just know it's gonna be rough."

NEW SINGLE 'BURNING WHEEL' OUT SOON NEW ALBUM 'VANISHING POINT' THE MERCURY MUSIC AWARO NOMINATED ALBUM OUT NOW ON CREATION

95.8 - CAPITAL

BRIAN Transeau, BT to you, is renowned for his more epic than epic house. His signature strokes of pianos, strings and orchestral arrangements have ensured his place as the king of the epic trance/house scene. The oh-so wrongly titled single, "Flaming June" (should have been called "Pissing It Down June" if he was after meteorological accuracy) was a masterpiece of lush production and big, beefy hooks which rocked dancefloors everywhere. The picture on the cover of the single of a synth floating through an idyllic skyscape over a deep blue ocean said it all.

Not that it was always this way. As a kid, BT studied classical music using the Suzuki method.

"It's not the traditional whacking the back of the hand with a ruler method," he offers in Chiswick's outrageously huge Metropolis Studios where he is preparing material for his forthcoming live shows. "It's really cool, your teacher talks to you about the composer's life. You learn by listening and watching rather than reading the notes. It was a pain in the ass for me to learn to read music, actually. I still have a time lapse when I try to read it!"

So how did a classically-trained musician get into this house vibe?

"It's strange how it happened. I didn't know much about dance music when I started, but some of the stuff I'd done made sense in that context. It's really fucking cool for me coming over here and seeing what it's like."

It's different in America then?

"Oh yeah, the way they're just getting into electronic music is pretty embarrassing. It's pants, man! I haven't been following British dance music all this time, but I've been listening to electronic music since I was 10 or 12 years old. Back then I was into stuff like Frank Tovey and Fad Gadget, Kraftwerk, Depeche Mode and then I started getting into the industrial stuff. I'm a bit of a musical mutt, I guess."

The transition from classical boffin to dance monster came about through exposure to electro in the Eighties.

"It was Man Parrish, Mantronix, Newcleus and the rest of it. I listened to all these different things and threw them into one pot and made something out of it. When I did 'Ima', I'd never even been to the UK, I hadn't heard the music in the clubs here."

Expectations weighed heavily on Brian following the success of "Ima" and he found himself getting anxious about what was supposed to be cool. It led to BT escaping to his rural Maryland retreat and making the album he wanted to make, regardless of the commercial pressures. The result is the eclectic mix of "ESCM", which swerves from the epic house of "Flaming June", through a hip hop noise reminiscent of the Chemicals, via some distorted New Order-ish bass work (in the liner notes, BT writes, "Peter Hook, don't be mad, I love you").

"When I had my first meeting with Perfecto about the album, I played them the song ideas on an acoustic guitar, so they shouldn't have been surprised when I turned up with the finished article. They still were though!"

WHAT about the gear, BT? Which boxes are crucial to the sound?

Prophecy, I just don't like it. Some physical modelling synths are cool. The JP 8000 is a nice sounding box, and I haven't heard that new Yamaha one yet [the AN1X] but Paul Van Dyk's been going on about it. I prefer the old boxes, they have character and life in them, you know? They're like people, they can be in a bad mood or a great mood. Sometimes they sound like complete shit, and other times they sound great."

Given the classical training, is his programming technique different from most people's? Less mouseoriented and more keyboard-bound?

"It might be, I don't really know because I don't see that many people do their thing. When I work with friends, I'm usually the one sat at the computer. I'm a control freak. A lot of people have a template of how a song is going to go, they'll block it out so they can see it before they start whereas I work in sections. I'll work on five seconds for a fucking month. My tracks have to flow from beginning to end. It gets difficult when I work with people and they start saying, 'If I hear this 15 second section one more time, I'm going to strangle you', but to me, that's a real part of it."

This fascination for the finer details probably explains BT's love of drum & bass which he has been listening to a great deal of late. Elements of it have cropped up on one of his new tracks, "Orbitus Teranium".

"Drum & bass is the one thing that's recently come out of dance music which has been really inspiring to me. Everything in it is totally backwards to how I would do them. Like, instead of things building, they fade."

It's a part of BT's willingness to step outside of the tight generic boundaries which often exist in dance music.

"I don't think that kind of purism is constructive. I can see it being appropriate in certain circumstances. but I have a real problem with people setting limits to things. The beauty of making electronic music is that it is totally limitless. Why only use a 909 drum machine? If you want to beat on a tree trunk, go for it. If there wasn't that kind of experimentation, there wouldn't be jungle!"

It's all part and parcel of the new improved BT, a man who clearly feels he would be betraying himself to make music that people expect from him. Those very same expectations were also taking their toll on him...

"The turning point came when I was working on a track called 'Hand In Hand'. People had been taking my conceptual ideas which I had put my heart and soul into. People were stealing the ideas but not the emotional content. So then I got caught up in this 'fuck you, I'll turn out harder than they did, I'm gonna make it 27 minutes long with the entire London Philharmonic Orchestra on it'. I got so far up my own ass. And that song was the breaking point."

After six weeks work, it had become, in his own words, "so pretentious".

"All I'd say to anyone who is just starting to get noticed for their music is stick with the people you know around you, stay where you live, because the rest of it just gets so confusing. You were making music for you and your dog, and suddenly there's 50 people at a record label who all have expectations of you." While BT's dog remains pretty happy with his musical diet, the rest of us can relax knowing that BT will be around for some time yet. Woof.

ANEW SINGLE, 'REMEMBER' WITH MIXES FROM MOOD II SWING AND PAUL VAN DYK, IS RELEASED ON AUGUST 25 BY PERFECTO. THE ALBUM, 'ESCM', FOLLOWS ON SEPTEMBER 22

"It's funny because I had to ask the people I get my gear from to stop telling other people what I was buying - 'Don't tell the fuckers what I bought!' No, I'm way into the gear. man," he confesses. He always wanted a Memory Moog, which he now has, and an ARP 2600, which he still doesn't.

"I was absolutely frothing at the mouth for the Memory Moog. I mowed around 500 lawns to get my first sampler, an S900." Although he has used Akai samplers for ages, he recently jumped ship and is now using the Kurzweil K2500.

"It's so fucking powerful," he says. "It's like having a modular synthesiser and a sampler in one. It gives you so much more ability to manipulate sound. Hike grabbing sounds which are of acoustic or organic origin and manipulating them using electronics. Capturing a musical moment, then taking it and tweaking it out."

He can eulogise about it until the cows come home. Kurzweil should think about giving him a job.

"The best thing about it," he continues, "is that you can overdrive the internal oscillators like an analogue synth, so you can make these squelching, screaming barnyard animal noises."

That ability to really twist sounds up, is exactly what's needed in digital instruments, but Brian isn't impressed with some darlings of the digital domain, like the Korg Prophecy.

"I hate it! It just sounds too digital. I loved the Trinity, but that's a totally different sounding machine with its lush pads and so on. It has astonishing FX in it. But the

BEDROOM BEDLAM TOMOBROW'S DJS TODAY

SEPTEMBER 1997 WINNER

NAME: Cliff Chaudhury
CONTACT: 0181-314-5270
BORN: Bournemouth, 1974
EXPERIENCE: Round about 1989-90 I worked with a guy who used to run Under-18 nights for foreign students in Bournemouth. From there I started doing nights in Weymouth (techno and jungle) and it's just gone on from there, but I am still mainly a bedroom DJ.

FAVOURITE DJS: Shafie, Jake Curtains, Stacy Pullen and Derek Dahlarge.

FAVOURITE CLUBS: Heart 'N' Soul (London), Hub Club (Bath) and free parties anywhere!

FAVOURITE LABELS: Universal Language, Reverberation, Plank, Surreal and Planet E.

ALL TIME FAVOURITE TRACKS:

Kraftwerk - "Tour De France", Chaka Khan - "Ain't Nobody", Jackson 5 - "A, B, C", Eric B & Rakim - "Paid In Full", Fu-Schnickens - "I Am A True Fu-Schnick"

WHICH DJ SHOULD MAKE WAY FOR YOU AND WHY: "I don't think any DJ should make room for me, but I do believe there are some serious bandits on the scene who really do sell out!"

WINNING TRACKLISTING: Crosstown Traffic - "Now Dig This", Freshness On Wax - "Real Phunk", Appleheadz - "Spookin Tha House", Carl Craig - "At Les", Appleheadz - "If You Were A Cat You'd Follow Me", Uber Zone - "Botz EP", Tonge - "J. J. EP", Funk-Da-Fried-Party - "The DJ's Project", Makesome Breaksome - "The Vision", Freddy Fresh - "Chupacabra", Urban D.K. - "Sole Survivors", Re-Offenders - "Future Primate", House Of 909 - "Deep", Dino & Terry - "20-20 Vision", Gemini - "Presents... Revolution", Roll Wit Tha Flava - "The Flava Unit MCs", Incognito - "Out Of The Storm (Carl Craia's Planet E Mix)".

MUZIK'S VERDICT: A winning tracklisting by virtue of its quality of tunes. The mixing isn't the best we've heard but at the same time there aren't any major gaffes and the tape flows well. For the most part this tape bolsters the reputation of the British House revival, spearheaded by labels like Pagan, Plank, Reverberations and 20:20 Vision, but also includes US classics like Carl Craigs "At Les" and the breakbeat magic of City Of Angel's Uberzone. Cliff even drops some upfront hip-hop towards the end, creating a different flavour in his mixing. Since this guy only got serious three years ago (and he's just 22 now) and his aim is to be a DJ by profession, he should hopefully make it by sheer determination, coupled with a broad musical taste.

LUCKY BREAKS

SARAH SANDY from the Groove Connection DJ agency, which books LTJ Bukem, Fabio and Grooverider, on the difficulties of penetrating the DJ circuit

"FIRSTLY, breaking into the DJ circuit is more difficult than people think. I do believe that the average person on the street could spend a couple of hours with a pair of turntables and learn the basics of mixing, but I can stand and watch people who can mix well and they'll do nothing for me. I get sent around 50 tapes a week and most of these people are kidding themselves. They select good tunes and string them together but there is no feeling there. All the people I've selected for Groove Connection have an individual style and their personality is mirrored in the way they mix. I can tell how confident a DJ is by the way they mix. I always say they should spend more time on their own technique, rather than copying the big DJs out there. You really have to believe in yourself and some of these young kids just come across as being really insecure, which is not the kind of signal you should be giving off to promoters.

"Personally, I don't take on new DJs unless the ones I'm working with are already on their way. I usually take on two a year. I took on Bukem after years of hearing him play. In the early days, I was never sure if I could work his distinct sound so I kept him at bay. When I took him on, I told him that he needed to give me a year just to promote his name. I need that with everyone. Currently I'm working with DJ Addiction, and I've put him in lots of pressurised situations just to toughen him up. In the old days, people like Fabio and Grooverider would often end up playing for five hours for £25 because you never knew when the next DJ would turn up. That's how you become a professional. I test all the DJs on my books like this. I book them knowing that the next DJ isn't on for a fewhours. Yes, many of them fall apart under pressure. Out of the 50 tapes I receive a week, I would say I get one really good one every three months. My honest advice is that it takes most DJs five years before they make a real impression. But people must keep at it. Most importantly, be out there representing yourself as much as possible."

BEDROOM BEDLAM on Radio One's "Essential Mix"

If you heard TIMMY S on Bedroom Bedlam's second guest slot on the "Essential Mix" on August 2, then you'll need the tracklisting for one of the best ever sets broadcast on Radio One's award winning show. Here goes:

Second Front - "Escape" (Tumblin' Records)... Fat Filters - "Cygnus Loop" (Ugly Music)...
Trackmen - "The Power EP" (Power Music)... Aura Surround Sound - "Samark And Tenth Story Mix" (Mo's Music Machine)... Ultra Violet Two Lights - "Union" (Music Man)... This month, Black Market Record's RAY KEITH gives us a tour around the DJ booth he calls home

What mixer do you use?

"An old Phonic mixer. It's got four different channels and I've had stuff done to it by my mate so it's a bit customised! I can either listen to just the one track in one ear or two at the same time. Other than that it's pretty straightforward. I've got decks, a DAT and a CD player running through it."

Decks?

"I use 1200's. I got them as soon as I could afford them. They're pretty bashed up. I used to have some belt-drives but these are obviously a hell of a lot easier."

"Stanton 500s. The stylus is very important. These Stantons are heavy duty and durable. It's what they use in DMC Mixing Championships."

Headphones?

"Sennheisers HD265. They're the ones with the band over the top and the detachable cables. They're worth about £200. I've had them for about three years now and they've never fucked up. I've been through a lot of headphones.'

"I've got an old PV amp, but I've only had it for 18 months. Before that, it was a Marantz, but this is definitely better.' Monitors?

"I use JBLs and some 10-year-old Jamo 499s at home. They don't make the Jamos anymore, but they really stretch the sound out and make it sound more like a club, whereas the JBLs are flatter. I use the two of them linked together to get a really round sound."

Other bits and bobs?

"Just my Sony DAT and CD player linked to the decks. I've got loads of bits and bobs in my studio but that's my

"I've got my Black Market aluminium box which you can get for about £100 and a heavy-duty record bag which holds around 100 singles. Unlike a lot of other DJs, I've never had any trouble with my records going missing on planes... Touch wood!"

How much do you spend on records each week?

£150 every fortnight but obviously I do get most of my

"I didn't get decks until I was about 21. Before that I used to practise on Citronic decks or Technics in clubs. A lot of people I hung around then did mobile gigs so I'd get a chance to play out then. I've said goodbye to belt-drives private space!"

"Nothing, I work in a record shop! No, only joking... About tunes sent to the shop. I get about 50 or 60 a week."

What gear did you first start DJing on?

News and Reviews

- Freeform Analogue Technology are having difficulty not releasing new gear. The third in line is the THC 00 Resonator, following the FB 383 Freebass and the PCP 330 Procoder (Freebass and PCP, you guys...)
- The Resonator is an 1U, rack mounting, triple band, LFO modulated filter bank and stereo signal modulator. Features are three separate band pass filters, each with resonance depth controls. The filters can be modulated by the internal LFO or from using an external signal, there's also an envelope filter which can control depth, decay and polarity. And there's a stereo panner which is always good for as laugh. What's more, it's a measly £199, full marks for that alone.

New UK company, Red Sound Systems, have released their first product, the Voyager I Beat Xtractor. Designed for use by DJs remixing, it is able to display the BPM of any signal input. Nothing special there, but then the Voyager I generates MIDI time-code based on the BPM

- of the signal. This also means that if a mixed signal from a live drummer is fed into the Voyager I, it will generate MIDI code for it, meaning that all your MIDI gear's tempos can be controlled by your drummer! It costs £249.50, contact them on 01494-429-321.
- Denon have declared the death of DCC and the sidelining of DAT, claiming that the new format of choice for high-end users and studios is going to be MiniDisc. And to this end, they have released their first budget priced machine, the DMD 1300. It retails for £500. For more info, call Denon on 01753-888-447.

NAME: Release

CONTACT: 0181-695-8988

MUZIKS VERDICT: Citing Darren Emerson and Grooverider amongst his influences, Release, aka Ed Cooper, turns in a couple of funky, melodic techno crossover tunes. "Underground" has a chuggy acid line wiggling over a steady 132 BPM beat, breaking down, then rising again with its slicing drum patterns. "Wobble" is similar sounding but by no means a blueprint of the first track. Using more of a breakbeat over the bass, the jungle influence can be heard. A slightly niffy piano line threatens to ruin an otherwise superb contribution, but this could always be the equipment. Ed used an Atari S3000XL, a Roland Juno 2 with an Atari running Cubase. 8

NAME: DJ Tez

CONTACT: 01224-818685

MUZIKS VERDICT: All the way from sunny Aberdeen, DJ Tez contributes two upfront drum & bass tracks. Fatter than a haggis and faster than Kenny Dalglish, "Reflex' bounces along on big bass reverberations in a Ganja Krustyle. Maybe a little monotonous on the beats side towards the end. "They're The Ones" starts off in a moodier but mellower vibe, with machine gun beats and a subtler bass. This is more of a Goldie tune as proven by the synth patterns. Tez wrote this using an Atari 1040 with Cubase, a Juno 2 Keyboard, Alesis Compressor and Novation Bassstation among others. 7

NAME: ABS Trax CONTACT: 01224-869-503

MUZIK S VERDICT: Tez's mate from over the border also sent in a demo and as Muzik didn't want to start a feud this is his donation to the derby. "Put Your Money" uses a "put your money where your mouth is" sample, perhaps warning producers to pick these two up before it's too late. Brassy bass, aggressive staccato drums bang out the funk. "Pull The Trigger" is a dark affair with a great digital breakdown. Mr Trax used Tez's equipment as well as a Kauna Synth Module, a Roland VS 880 Digital Workstation and A Quadraverb GT. 7

NAME: Phletch CONTACT: 0181-761-9155

MUZIK S VERDICT: Phletch sees us back on a housier tip with his first offering "Twister". A twisting analogue line runs over a steady 114 bpm creating a dubby Basic Channel meets Hardfloor hybrid! Slow to build with the beat intermittently dropping out then rising back up again this could rip up the deepest dancefloor! "Pheel The Phunk" reinforces the suspicion that Phletch can't spell, but his music doesn't suffer as a result. A highpitched pinpoint of sound makes the initial rhythm over a Daft Punkesque spinback and tambourine. Phunky as phuck and begging for a deal! 8

'This Life' Your Life-Our life

hippest drama by depicting erstwhile taboos - young people getting laid, drunk and high and generally having a good time.

But just what was it about the show that made it essential videoing material for those festering Sunday comedowns? After all, the soundtrack rarely got more credible than the Sneaker Pimps or Portishead and at times the script was decidedly ropey. For many, the simple fact that "This Life" treated its viewers with a modicum of respect was a good enough reason to watch.

"It's just more tuned in than anything else on TV," says Talkin' Loud's Gilles Peterson, a self-confessed "This Life" addict who regularly namechecks the programme on his Kiss FM slot. "It really matured as a programme and showed strong characters in realistic situations that rung true with the real world. It is great after a messy night at the Bar Rhumba!"

What made it click was not a stream of clinical one-liners dreamt up by a pool of bearded scriptwriters, but the easily identifiable situations that we could all relate to: nearly getting your girlfriend preggers, copping off with your best mate, jacking in your job, buying dodgy gear, getting arrested by the police, chopping up charlie in the bogs, and throwing a mad house party. All these and more figured in a whirlwind televisual mix written and directed by people with a deep understanding of the subjects, who'd grown up with Ecstasy and acid house, not hippy love and the Rolling fucking Stones.

Bizarrely for a programme that attracted so much attention (double page spreads in the tabloids have been ten-a-penny) it's still unclear whether a third series will be commissioned. If the BBC have got even half a brain, they'll make sure we're treated to another dose of the most original piece of homegrown (ooer) television to hit our screens for a long time. And wind up even more of the blue-rinsed perm brigade into the bargain.

words Kieran Wyatt

The greatest television soap series ever? Drugs, sex, more sex and young people behaving exactly like young people ought to do. This Life' rules. Okay?

DRUG taking! Sex! Mad parties! Debauchery! Gay people! More sex! Breasts! Beer! Foul language! Willies! Bisexuals! More drugs! And even more sex! No, it's not Prime Minister's Question Time but another Mary Whitehouse-baiting encounter with the sweet young twentysomethings who make up BBC2's spot-on flatshare comedy drama. "This Life".

With its second series just ended, the energetic portrayal of the lives of a bunch of south London professionals, chancers, users, losers and abusers established itself as the number one viewing choice for Britain's boozing, clubbing and chemical generations. It has meteorically risen from little-known late-night cult viewing to television's

FILM OF THE MONTH

Director: Jay Roach

Starring: Mike Myers, Elizabeth Hurley, Michael York, Robert Wagner

Funnier than any film has a right to be, "Austin Powers" is a magnificently daft, frighteningly well-observed pisstake of everything from "The Avengers" to vintage James Bond. with "Wayne's World" star, Mike Myers in the duel roles of Britain's top secret agent/fashion photographer, Austin Powers, and his nemesis, the dastardly Doctor Evil.

The story runs like this. It's London at the height of the swinging Sixties. The world is terrorised, as ever, by a bald, facially scarred megalomaniac, Doctor Evil. Only Powers is capable of stopping this personification of pure perniciousness. But the wily Evil cryogenically freezes himself to escape, leaving the British Secret Service (headed by York's Basil Endeavour) no choice but to freeze Powers until such time as the defrosted Evil returns to Earth.

Cut to the present day, and sure enough, Evil's back, hatching more nefarious schemes. This is the cue to thaw Powers, who in the company of Miss Kensington (Hurley), the daughter of his original assistant, tracks down Evil to his underground lair for a showdown.

But times have changed for both characters. Powers can't understand how come nobody will fall for his "charms" any more, while Evil discovers a son he never knew he had, and has to undergo therapy with him in order to solve the dysfunctional crisis they are suffering.

Myers understands that the best satire comes from observing the source material in minute detail before magnifying it to more ludicrous extremes. All the cars in swinging London are either Mini Coopers or black cabs, and policemen and beefeaters stand on every corner. The usual James Bond pitfalls and traps are here too but they're pushed to surreal limits. Example? Evil can't find any sharks anywhere, so he plans to throw Powers and Kensington into a tank of irritable sea bass. Everyone plays it straight except Myers, which only adds to the humour. Hurley, particularly, plays it brilliantly, it must be said, keeping her tongue firmly in her cheek throughout the movie.

There are some brilliantly daft scenes, too. When in therapy, Evil's grunge-loving son tells the psychiatrist (a cameo from Carrie Fisher) he doesn't want to follow in his father's footsteps, but he wants to be a veterinarian. "An evil veterinarian?" asks his father hopefully. The catchphrases (mostly revolving round Powers' obsession with shagging) are just as memorable as in "Wayne's World". "Shall we shaq now, or shall we shaq later?" Powers asks Miss Kensington, while most things are, in his words, "Saucy", "Groovy, baby", or "Totally shagadelic".

It's worth staying till the very end, too, to catch Myers' BBC song - a Sixties pop pastiche which, bizarrely enough, sounds like the best song Blur never wrote.

Top fun. 10

Hobbs-Nobbing

She's the replacement for Mark Radcliffe on Radio One's 10.30pm slot and a damn fine job she's doing of it too. Former NME journalist MARY ANNE HOBBS has brought chemical beats, hip hop, jungle and punky attitude to indicland and now it's time to face the music. Listen up!

What's the story behind the supposed ban on dance music on your evening show? When we started, we mixed the music up quite radically. I thought it worked well However, the powers that be at Radio One felt that the transitions were too difficult, jumping from Amon Tobin to The Seahorses. So we decided it would work much better if we isolated the music and built a whole block around it. Hence the "Breeze Block" You're just an indie traitor, aren't you?

[Laughing freely] Ha ha! Is that the way that you view the NME? An indie ghetto? Death to Symposium?! You must remember that I'm the girl who wrote about stuff like Ice-T and Happy Mondays when I was at NME. I'm not quite so much the traitor as you may think. I don't give a shit about that tribal thing. You can move across a much broader church of music and people won't get that upset.

Which dance tunes would you play either side of the new Oasis single?

"Devil In Sports Casual" by Midfield General before, because I like the idea of Satanism basically. To finish? Maybe "Drop Top Caddy" by Aphrodite and Mickey Finn. Oasis think they're bigger than God, but I think there's a case to made that Micky Finn and Aphrodite are bigger than God. In my house, anyway. What's your favourite clubs?

I really love the Heavenly Jukebox. To be honest, what I've been doing recently, much to the detriment of my liver and evesight and general health, is going to a lot of festivals and pogoing until my knees shatter in the Skint and Wall Of Sound tents.

Does it feel like Annie Nightingale is vour mother?

. This is Jo Whiley's claim. She's got these really reverential feelings about Annie. She's more like a big sister anyway. You meet her out at some mental night and there she is still hobbling about on her bloody sticks at three in the morning and she's still more up for it

When was the last time you danced around your handbag in a nightclub? I haven't really got a handbag. It's more of a rucksack because I used to have, up until last week, a 600cc Suzuki Bandit. So I need a rucksack for my back.

Any plans to join the guest DJ circuit? This is something that fills me with great trepidation actually. My mixing skills aren't that great yet, but I practise on my decks at home as often as I can.

Favourite labels?

Skint, Wall Of Sound, Harthouse, Treally like Soundclash and Friendly Fire from Leeds. Where do you stand on speed garage? Oh God! What is that all about? This is kind of like new grave, it's the dance equivalent. Can someone please explain it to me? I think it's one of these tags that we used to make up on a weekly basis at the NME. I think it's something that we won't be trying to cram into the "Breeze Block".

Mary Anne Hobbs' show runs Monday to Thursday. 10.30pm to 1am. The Lo Fidelity All-Stars will be in session on August 18, with Herbalizer, Bentley Rhythm Ace and Propellerheads to follow

Woman About The House

Kiss 100 DJ SARAH HB gives us the lowdown on her home entertainment

Oasis' new single, "Beat At Cinecitta", an album of Sixties Italian soundtracks, some Miles Davis and the Prodigy's new album, "The Fat Of The Land".

On The Video

"Jacob's Ladder". I've seen it before, but it's such a top quality film. Tim Robbins is a cool actor and it's really raw. There are still some poor sods wandering around the States who don't really know what they're doing because of the shit that happened in Vietnam.

On The Computer I'm a "Quake" addict. I've been playing for at least a good year and half solid. I play for about an hour and a half every day. It's a stress-buster.

"Black Dogs" by Ian McEwan and "The Cult" by Anita Burgh.

Not a lot. Maybe "Eastenders" when I'm around. And I do like "Millennium".

On The Floor

Because I've got builders in, I've got records scattered everywhere, as well as papers and dry-cleaning.. My house is a complete mess!

YOU DON'T KNOW JACK BMG CD-ROM

MILSC Techknow

After the 'official' Oasis website fuss, it's refreshing to find the official Prodigy site is truly a place for fans

UPON A TIME IT WAS ALL unofficial round here. Before the Net became the focus of every marketing campaign, the only people providing information were the great unwashed. Websites devoted to one particular act or artist, the on-line equivalent of fanzines, allowed a vast number of fans and enthusiasts tap into views and opinions without fear or favour.

As the Net has developed, this particular aspect has become the subject of increased scrutiny. Every major or minor act now possesses a URL to stick on the back of their new album. The recent Oasis saga set fan-operated unofficial sites (providing nothing but positive information and views on the Gallaghers) on a collision course with the band-endorsed official Net presence. The result? Loss of goodwill towards the band and the feeling that Oasis were blatantly out of touch.

Of course, there's no reason why official and unofficial sites can't coexist happily alongside each another. In many cases, the unofficial site is a far better bet than the official one for up-to-date information, news and gossip, especially when the band's record company have set an embargo on reviews or news.

In the case of The Prodigy, there were already dozens of fan sites available before www.prodigy.co.uk opened for business on June 30 If the album's performance was unprecedented, the site was just as remarkable. It generated 14,000 hits in 48 hours, a number Stephen Morris at Birmingham's tw2, the site developers, is quite happy with. His brief, from the band's management, was simple.

"The aim was to give something back to the fans and to produce a site which would reflect The Prodigy and also reflect The Prodigy philosophy to constantly push back the boundaries and play with people's perceptions," says Stephen. "As the band's message reads at the entrance to the site, 'Keep it raw, keep it real'. It's designed to give online Prodigy fans a focus with the use of exclusively written chat areas and billboard."

The site itself is quite cool without breaking any new ground in terms of content or design. It doesn't set the world alight, but it does steer clear of many of those design conceits which have lately become somewhat common online currency.

Future plans will include on-line merchandising, Shockwave games and VRML chat forums. All very well but why go here rather than to, say, www.vortex.is/~prodigy?

"Although both the band and developers have a lot of respect for people who dedicate their time to building unofficial sites, none of them manage to present such an integrated and stylish representation of the band on-line. We have some of the most talented sitebuilders available, so we're bound to produce a more impressive site."

Stephen stresses that there are no plans to do an Oasis with unofficial sites.

"There is no attempt to stop fans from publishing Prodigy Web pages, we have actually spent a great deal of time collating an extensive list of unofficial Prodigy sites. We have been commissioned to provide a site for the fans and the logs to date show us that we've been successful."

The band's future involvement with the site remains unclear due to busy schedules.

They're Number One in 23 countries so it is pretty difficult for them. There may be an opportunity for a live video WebCast in the future. We also have a secure interface whereby the band can add comments and messages from anywhere around the world as long they can get access to the Internet."

The best thing to do, then, is to keep an eye on the site. And, of course, on the unofficial ones.

★ Those who like a top clubbers tale of hedonism, excess and the morning after should keep an eye on www.clubbed.co.uk which is currently welcoming those who've ever had it large of a weekend and wish to tell everyone about it.

- ★ Grooverider, the big daddy of the drum & bass world, has a site dedicated to his tunes and his muse at www.grooverider.com. Big on details regarding his recent Prototype compilation but rather limited when it comes to other Groove matters, here's hoping for some fresh input rather soon.
- ★ Our fave on-line adventurer of late was the chap who interrupted a heavy IRC discussion on UK electronica in the US with the assertion that he was Keith Flint and that he had come to party. Highly amusing, especially as most of the Yanks took this pseudo-Flint at face value. Come on, firestarter@pemail.com is a bit of a giveaway, isn't it?
- * Another e-zine to check for fine reviews and articles on a wide variety of beatmasters (if you're that way inclined) is Turntable at www.turntable.com
- ★ Two essential bookmarks for those who want to recall the glorious (if rather sweaty) days of the Wigan Casino are the northern soul stop-offs at www.koan.de/~mickfitz and ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/glyn_valleyradio. Make sure you bring a sew-on patch with you.
- In need to a touch of paint and a few new ideas, the Blue Note site (the record label, not the club) at www.parlophone.co.uk/bluenews could do with a bit more sparkle and history rather than just a list of recent and upcoming releases.
- ★ Pining for the loss of Fat Cat? Never fear, you can now order up to 300 new releases every week from the Juno Record Service. Brought to the Net by the people behind the excellent Dance Music Resource Pages, www.juno.co.uk will cover everything from house and garage to breakbeat and downtempo.
- ★ Top enhanced CD of the moment has to be the "Virtual DJ" collection from Breakdown. Besides an impressive tracklisting, there's also bundled software which will allow you (if you have CD-ROM access) to become a virtual DJ complete with turntables, mixer and vinvl.
- ★ Props to some on the much maligned UK-Dance list for an enthralling discussion recently on the merits of print versus on-line journalism. Much better than some of the childish bickering which has begun to dominate the list of late.

Mouse-traps of the month

Warp Records

www.warp-net.com/warp Trust the Sheffield home of the electronic bleep (or blech) to come up with a winner. You couldn't mistake it for anything but a Warp page, but the detailing and idents which make it such are subtle rather than blaring. Besides the lowdown on the current whereabouts and activities of Jimi Tenor, Squarepusher and Autechre, you can also access an archived discography and a cool chatter section.

Teletubbies

www.users.globalnet.co.uk/~mcstev/tu

A bizarre homage to Tinky Winky, Dipsy and friends, this site has all the ingredients you need for the full Teletubbie experience. Featuring the ins and outs of everything from Noo Noo's rather subversive existence to the techie side of the Tubs, this site is enormously detailed, entertaining and really rather brilliant.

Electronic Music

www.electronicmusic.com Currently housing features on Howie B, Speedy J and the wonderful Bob Moog (who gave his name to the synth), Electronic Music goes deeply into areas of intricate hardware and software where other sites rarely venture, with neat layout and graphics.

Eastenders

www.spacelab.net/~albertsq/ This version of the "Walford Gazette" is a tongue-in-cheek peek at the inhabitants of TV's most popular square. Besides the usual quota of news and interviews, there are some brilliant comic touches. Our favourite is the section which allows you to submit scripts. We liked the one where Peggy Mitchell hires Jon Carter to DJ at Phil's birthday party in the Vic, and the rest of the Heavenly Social debauchery squad arrive with him.

Cheap Flights

www.cheapflights.co.uk

Flights collates information on the cheapest flights available to any given destination and all you have to do is click on the name of name of where you're going and you'll get the cheapest options on how to get there. Some flights can be booked on-line or, if not, telephone numbers are provided. The Net does have some practical uses, then...

Dear Daniel, The response from our first classified advertisement in Muzik Magazine by far exceeded our expectations, when the best responses in one day were more than the number of responses we expected to receive in total! We have no hesitation in supporting Muzik as it is a way to reach the people that matter.

Keep up the good word... Mick, George & Lorien

INSOMNIA MUZIK'S ESSENTIAL GUIDE TO CLUBLAND

MUZIK'S TOP 50 NIGHTS OUT WHERE TO GO THIS MONTH AUGUST 13 - SEPTEMBER 9

BIRMINGHAM: ATOMIC JAM - 2ND BIRTHDAY Saturday August 30

Que Club, Corporation Street. 0121-212-0770. 9.30-6am. £12.

Few can doubt their commitment to bringing underground sounds to a mass audience. They've had the biggest names (over the past couple of years their rosters have read like a "Who's Who" of techno, drum & bass, big beatism and deep house) and always deliver top quality production values (like Glastonbury on strong acid). And then there's the crowd, who burn with the energy of a happy hardcore gig but thankfully display none of the moodiness of a purist techno jerk-off.

Lining up the hot wax in the main arena tonight are the mighty Dave Clarke, Chris Liberator (who reckons Atomic Jam to be "the best techno club outside of the free party scene") and Trevor Rockcliffe together with top residents Tony Work and Nathan Gregory. There's also a live show from Funk D'Void. Out in the back room Fabio and Grooverider are joined by local heroes Gecko. Rob Lynch and Jem Atkins dropping oven-ready drums, bass and breaks. When the back room rocks, you'll certainly know it.

Connoisseurs of the new complexity, though, will be checking out Nottingham's Babble sound system with their chunky house sounds straight from the valley of the deep. Their free parties this summer in deserted castles and forests in the depths of Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire and Derbyshire have had the perfect combination of traveller attitude, postclub energy and hard funking basslines. Check out Bov and Andy Macari for a slice of the big outdoors and deckmeister Peter Pan displaying his triple turntable trickery.

Underground? Overground? Forget that shit and get down to Atomic Jam. Birmingham, prepare yourself.

2 SHEFFIELD: GATECRASHER - THIRD BIRTHDAY Sunday August 24

Colwick Hall, Nottingham. 0121-605-8970. 8-5am. £35 advance ticket.

One of the best clubs in the north of England celebrates its third birthday in what is proving to be an eventful month for them. The night at The Republic in Sheffield is as rammed as ever, and now Dave Beer is taking his Back To Basics name to the second room bringing with him the likes of Lee Wright, Ralph Lawson, James Holroyd and Jazzy M. Add to that Gatecrashers third birthday celebrations which take place at Colwick Hall in Nottingham with a DJ line-up which most clubs would be happy to have over a period of five years. In Marquee One you can hear Paul Oakenfold outside of Cream, Tall Paul, Seb Fontaine, Jeremy Healy, Mark Moore and Scott Bond. In Marquee 2 David Morales joins Roger Sanchez, Allister Whitehead, Tom Wainwright and Matt Hardwick. And in the Ball Room check the Nuphonic Records posse of Simon "Diamond" Lee from Faze Action, Jools Butterfield and Andrew Clarke. Other Gatecrasher dates for your diary: Judge Jules, Mark Moore, Scott Bond, Matt Hardwick, Lee Wright and Booker T (August 16), Judge Jules, Tall Paul, Sister Bliss, Jazzy M and Scott Sheridan (23), Chris & James, Jon Marsh, Scott Bond, Lee Wright, Bob Povey and John Coomer (30). Gatecrasher also host an Autumn Ball at The Studio in Wolverhampton with Whitehead, Judge Jules, Tall Paul, Seb Fontaine, Jeremy Healy, Jon Pleased Wimmin and Scott Bond (Saturday September 13).

Bentley Rhythm Ace and Carl Cox.

The Venue, Calton Road. 0131-557-3073. 10.30-3am. £10/£8 members.

Pure has moved away from pure techno to more housier vibes, but tonights line-up looks like being the perfect balance with Weatherall and Chez Damier blowing out the candles with residents Dribbler, The Bill, Twitch and Brainstorm. The weekend bender continues at the Arches in Glasgow the next day (August 23) with Green Velvet live and Chez Damier

Other Pure dates for your diary: Residents (September 6

6 BIRMINGHAM: NUTRONIK Saturday August 30

Branstons, The Venue. 0121-233-0339. 11-3.30am. £7. A new occasional project from former Fungle Junk mainstays Del Agua and Bowen taking place upstairs at Wobble (with separate entrance and door policy) in the newly-refurbished Rizla Suite. Andrew Weatherall guests tonight. If this kicks off, which it surely will, theres talk of a more permanent arrangement. Help make that change.

7 MANCHESTER: HAPPY DAYS Friday August 29

Kaleida, Oldham Street. 0161-446-2938. 9-late. 5. Just when you thought Luv Dup had finally given up, they bounce back with a pledge to push proper house music. So. get rid of all the crap piano house and bring in DJs such as Jon Marsh, The Ballistic Brothers, the Shindig posse and the likes of Kevin McKay from Muzique Tropique. Tonight, Harri is being flown in from Glasgow to perform one of his miraculous and hopelessy emotional deep house sets. Other Happy Days dates for your diary: Rocky (August 15), Kevin McKay (22), Scott & Scooby from Shindig (September 5), Diesel (12), Mark Wilkinson (19) and a very, very special

8 LONDON: HABIT & FLYING PRESENT ROCK CREEK PARK

Sunday August 24

Central London location, SW1. 0171-734-0172. 9-5am. £16.50 advance only.

Great to see the legendary Flying organisation back with a line-up which is to 1997 what their old events used to mean to London clubland back in the halcyon days of 1990. A ticket-only affair in a private Conservative Party dining room with a marquee in the back garden, this is a party which should inspire some of the jaded old clubbers who these days prefer to sit in pubs and moan rather than get out on the dancefloor and rediscover what it was all about. Tonight, then, you get British DJ legendEvil Eddie Richards, Ashley Beedle, Dave Hill (Ballistic Brother and boss of Nuphonic Records) and Jo Mills (promoter of Habit). In the marquee you have Dr Bob Jones, Lofty Mick Hall from Flying and Wayne M from Habit.

9 LEEDS: HARDTIMES – MUZIK PARTY Saturday August 23

Nato, Boar Lane, 01924-488-220, 10-late, £12/£10 members.

Tonight youll find us partying to one of the most anticipated sets of the year with Dave Morales flying in to perform an eight hour set. This will either be one of the most inspiring sets youll hear in ages, or it will send you all to sleep. But you should all give him the benefit of the doubt. You can also find Muziks Bedroom jock DJ Tat in the back room with Jason Boardman. And look out for that Muzik cameraman... Other Hard Times dates for your diary: Alan Russell (August 23) Mark Picchiotti (30), Dave Piccioni (September 6) and Mousse T and Boris Dlugosch (13).

10 LIVERPOOL: THE UNITED CLUBS OF LIVERPOOL

Tuesday September 30

University Of Liverpool Guild Of Students. 0151-707-1669. 9-2am. £10.

Check this for a line-up in Liverpool on a Tuesday night: Voodoo host one room with Laurent Garnier, Sven Vath. Andy Richardson and Steve Shiels. Complicity host Judge Jules, CJ Mackintosh and Spock, while Grooverider, Fabio and Da Intalex spint in the Blade Runner room. Do not miss out on this event.

LONDON: KCC Friday August 22, Monday August 25 and Friday August 29

MUZIK'S ESSENTIAL GUIDE TO CLUBLAND

CLASSIC CLUBS

Soul II Soul's JAZZIEB goes back to life and remembers how the AFRICA CENTRE rocked central London

BEFORE we took up a residency at the Africa Centre we [Jazzie B, Daddae Harvey, Jazzi Q and Aitch B] were throwing blues parties and community events in Finsbury Park. Then we started doing warehouse parties around Old Street. They were often very arty and had lots of fashion things going on and we had flexi-discs instead of ordinary paper flyers. When the whole warehouse thing kicked off we decided we needed a residency but didn't want one in a Mecca club. We wanted somewhere like the Wag Club or Barry Sharp's Cat In The Hat where we could get a West End venue, but run it like a warehouse.

The Africa Centre was perfect – it was slap bang right in the middle of Covent Garden. We did a night there every Sunday between 1984 and 1986 and it was called Africa Centre. Centre of The World. Soul II Soul were the residents and we had guests like Norman Jay. Trevor Madhatter and Ratchett and PAs from Daryll Pandy. Bobby Bird and Afrika Bambaata

The Centre was like a school hall with this balcony all the way around. You had people cutting hair, selling records, selling all sorts of stuff. It was like a market. We'd spend four hours every Sunday afternoon putting up drapes, lights, staging and banners. The big idea was that it was a whole different world in there. And it was so bizarre that it took place where it did. That's why it was known as the Centre Of The World.

We played everything and anything and broke a lot of tunes there. The more obscure a record, the bigger the reaction it got. We dropped raw r&b and rare groove, and spun stuff like Bump 'N' Hustle and Fingers Inc. The police tried to bust it once and that raid was the inspiration for "Keep On Movin". And "Fair Play" is all about the club too. That track developed straight from the atmosphere at the Africa Centre, it was just on the edge before the whole vibe went overground. No two weeks were ever the same there. but the same people went there religiously.

Soul II Soul's new album, 'Time For Change', is released on Island on August 25th Carnival where every year they've set the standards with a progressive music policy. If you miss them at Notting Hill or you simply want to carry on the party, try and hook up with them at one of their three special dates at London's Colliseum. DJs over the three events (the highlight must be on Bank Holiday night) include the full Soul 2 Soul crew, Karl Tuff Enuff Brown. Matt Jam Lamont. Spoony. Timmi Magic, Ty Holden. Catchy. Pete Heller. Danny Rampling and. of course. KCC.

MUZIK'S ESSENTIAL GUIDE TO CLUBLAND

CLUB GOSSIP

- So you thought DAFT PUNK playing live at T In The Park was special? Well the highlight of Thomas Bangalter's summer was performing to 40,000 people at a festival in Belgium sandwiched between, wait for it, Suede and David Bowie!
- WIGGLE is set to move from south London's Woolwich to a new members-only bar in the East End's Brick Lane area in September. Keep your ears peeled if you're hanging out in the Swag or Positive Sounds record shops! Do not miss out!
- At their July bash, Soul Movement's DAVE LEE dropped disco, soul and tracks from the Blaze album -
- and had the bouncers frugging the dancefloor.
 KENNY HAWKES from Space recently played a few dates out in Japan with CARL COX. Over a crackly international line he revealed that the Japanese love "sucking cocks". Or should that be "sucking Cox"? "sucking cocks". Or should that be sucking cox?

 One of the members of Nottingham deep house sound system QUADRANT was recently put away for something that "wasn't good". This means the nucleus of Quadrant now number four, fitting their name perfectly.

 MINISTRY OF SOUND's attempts at trying to add some
- Manumission-style entertainment to their night at Pacha in Ibiza went horribly wrong when a horse paraded through the middle of the main dancefloor and
- ended up killing the atmosphere. Pacha is Pacha because of its class. Don't spoil it. DAVE CLARKE was so into his set at Bugged Out.
- Manchester that he refused to stop at the end of the night and played three encores to the screaming hordes!

 •THE ELECTRIC CHAIR in Manchester recently celebrated its second birthday with James Holroyd, Jason Boardman and residents The Unabombers ocking the house. Who was the gurning lunatic passing around the french horn, though? What's wrong with bugle?
 Fish-throwing continues to be a fortnightly exercise at THE BIG BEAT BOUTIQUE in Brighton. The tiny chill-out room containing a freezer for the OAPs lunchtime fish & chip dinners is regularly raided and the contents thrown at cowering DJs including The Chemical Brothers and
- Norman Cook! THE CLINIC in London's Chinatown celebrated its first birthday recently with storming sets from The Clinical Three and Derek Dahlarge manning the wheels of steel. Summery indie boys Dodgy were spotted podium dancing at SKINT ON FRIDAYS at London's The End from the moment the doors opened until they were carried out at the end!
- Edinburgh's TRIBAL FUNKTION recently played host to Chicago's Gene Farris who after ripping up the Saturday night dancefloor took a tour of Edinburgh. The man was so taken by the city's sights he was heard to exclaim "I've had a calling" and on return to the States begged his wife to move Scotswards! Apparently he's still trying to convince her!
- The saucy sailors on Liverpool's best boat party FAIRY CROSS THE MERSEY recently fell foul of the local constabulary as residents along a four-mile stretch of water filed complaints against the outrageous noise volumes. The first the revellers knew of it was when a police helicopter started tracking the boat. After repeated high-spirited mooning over the side at the expense of the old bill, the boat was ordered back to port at a feeble 11.30 pm!
- The promoters of clubs around the country are increasingly worried about DJs not using their hotel rooms after their gigs. A spokesperson for PROGRESS in Derby exclaimed I dont know where theyre going. Apparently, Jon Pleased Wimmin and Smokin Jo are two main suspects!

joining Dan and John Kahuna, Jerry Dammers, Primal Scream's Paul Harte, St Etienne's Pete Wiggs and Skitz. Other Freaky Dancin dates for your diary: Billy Nasty, Anthony Teasdale, Gilly from Herb Garden and Jerry Dammers (August 15).

DJ OFTHE MONTH

Former Filter boss ROSS ALLEN finally gets out of bed to tell us how he got where he is now and why his radio show on London's GLR is currently the talk of the town

WHERE AND WHEN WERE YOU BORN?

June 1969 in Woolwich, south London.

I had the biggest record collection at school and got asked to spin hip hop at all these 16th birthday parties. I also used to listen to Pete Tong on Radio Invictar, he was an inspiration.

WHAT WAS THE FIRST RECORD YOU BOUGHT?
The BBC compilation "Sporting Themes" because I loved the cricketone—"Soul Limbo" by Booker T and the MGs.

"Mister Hardcore" by Mad Cobra on Greensleeves.

It would be good to make clubs more 'special'. When I first went clubbing it was a real event, it was all about escapism. Now, it's all on one level and there's nothing really different.

I more or less play what I want, I'm not restricted by any boundaries. I'll play anything from Ella Fitzgerald to fullon drum & bass. Maybe a weakness is that when I play outside London I can get a bit too experimental Guidance are on a real roll. I was getting fucked off with house but they've put out some really diverse and soulful music. I also hold dear the Transmat and Planet E stuff.

Gilles Peterson is definitely the one, but I also like Frankie Knuckles, Tony Humphries, Harvey and Junior Vasquez.

FAVOURITE CLUBS TO PLAY?
Bar Rhumba and the Blue Note, both in London, It also always kicks off at The Cooker in Leeds.

WHAT WOULD YOU BE DOING IF YOU WEREN'T A DJ?
Definitely something in music. Probably running a label, which is what I'm meant to be doing during the day! WHAT'S NEXT FOR ROSS ALLEN?

I'm starting a new monthly Friday night at Bar Rhumba with Rob da Bank called "Next Level" (first one September 5). I'm also launching a new label. Channel, which is sort of a continuation of Filter but on a more song-based tip.

ROSS ALLEN — TEN FOR TODAY

_eft Mood - "It's Only You" (Shack)

The Alcoholics & Ol' Dirty Bastard - "Hip Hop Drunkies"

Superstars Of Rock – "Strobe Light Serenade" (Stress)
Mad Cobra – "Mister Hardcore" (Greensleeves) Epic Desire - "Can't Live Without Your Love" (Guidance) Tiny Stars - "Capricorn One" (Kubrick)

Sneaker Pimps — "Post Modern Sleaze" (Clean Up)
Black Jazz Chronicles — "The World Will Rock" (Nuphonic)

INSOMNIA FLOORFILLE

SLAM/MUZIKTENT

T In The Park, Kinross, Perthshire

ANDY Weatherall's awesome set builds from slow-mo electro into the sleaziest stew of hip-grinding bleepology and old-school deepness. It's 10 minutes before Slam play their first ever live gig (in this country at least) and the atmosphere in this, the standard token dance tent at yet another rock festival, is crackling like electricity pylons struck down by a lightning bolt from Zeus, and it's still barely six in the evening. Seven years after Slam pulled out of large-scale events, they decided to make their comeback at the newly relocated T In The Park. The other stages are pitifully lacking in anything other than your standard festival circuit-trudgers such as Cast, Dodgy, Ocean Colour Scene and, inevitably, Dreadzone. But, if you actually manage to fight your way into the 6,000 capacity Slam/ Muzik tent, you're in for a treat that only rarefied Caledonian atmosphere can grant you.

Highlight of the entire weekend is unquestionably Daft Punk. Even those who've witnessed them live several times already can only marvel and collect their jaws from the mud-trampled grass beneath as they perform one of the truly great festival sets. Hearing the entire crowd attempt to sing along to the acid line in "Da Funk" is a memory which will linger for a long time. With "Around The World", next single "Burnin" and oldie "Alive" firmly established as, well, new wave anthems, The Prodigy had better watch their bodily-pierced backs.

Slam's live set is still in the development stage and as a result, they never quite hit the Punk's peaks. Sound system problems don't help either, although "Positive Education" at breakneck speed is spellbinding and finally that Dave Angel remix makes sense. Also worth mentioning is Green Velvet's live show. proving that twisted, coke-fuelled psycho-techno sounds even better when you're surrounded by precisely the kind of kids Cajmere's talking about in "Flash". Death In Vegas skank like the Ballistic Brothers' "Peckings" in a methadone coma, Gilles Peterson is wasted in an 11am Sunday morning slot, and Carl Cox closes the whole shebang with at least 1,000 people trying to fight their way in.

If Tribal Gathering need a new site next year, can we suggest they look no further?

Cajmere - "Eighties". As played live by Green Velvet, and as the last tune by Andrew Weatherall.

T-IT INTHE PARK

The Muzik journo who told everyone Liam Gallagher was there. He wasn't. It was just some bloke in a floppy hat and the sad hack's drugs speaking.

T-IT IN THE PARK TWO

Can it really be true that Liam's brother Paul (who was there, honest!) was caught masturbating in his hotel lobby in the middle of the night?

T-RAGEDY IN THE PARK

Bandulu not playing because they got caught in the riots in Spain. Sneak not playing because he got caught in the BA dispute. And Jon Carter not playing... for no apparent reason.

T-OTAL CHAP INTHE PARK

Cajmere aka Green Velvet, who chartered a private jet after his British Airways flight was cancelled due to the strike.

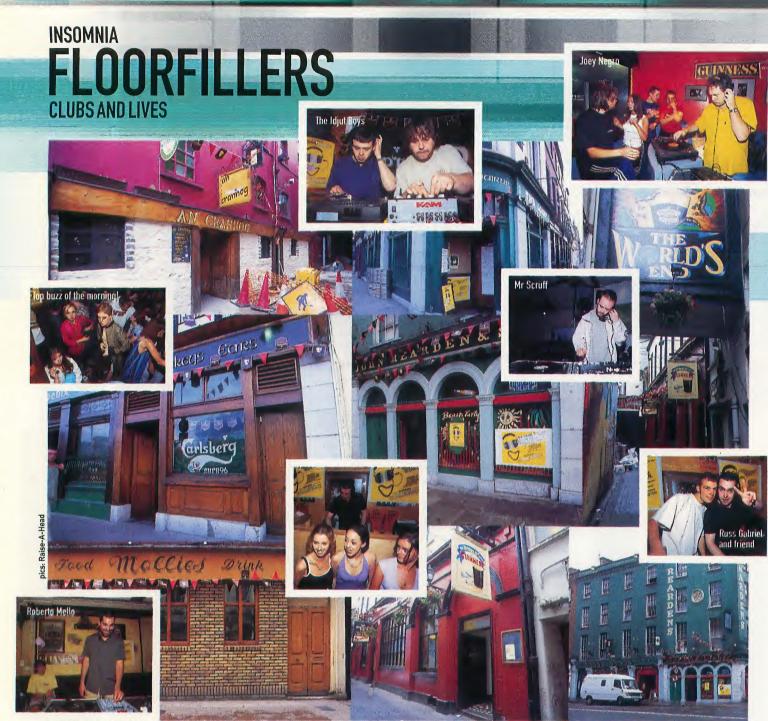

GUINNESS SOUTHERN SOUL & DISCO FESTIVAL Various pubs, Cork, Ireland

THERE have been some great ideas in our time. Technics 1200s. Pyramid tea bags. That car advert with Steve McQueen as "Bullitt". But few of them have approached the sheer genius of this. Get some of the best underground house, garage, nu disco and soul DJs around. Stick them in various boozers throughout a city where every second shop front appears to be a disguise for yet another pub. Arrange over two nights and allow a city not renowned on the DJ circuit to experience its biggest influx of jocks ever. Finally, let them play whatever the hell they want and get Guinness to sponsor the whole lot thus ensuring everyone gets paid and there's vat-loads of freebie black & white liquid gold to boot. Never in the history of excessive alcoholic consumption can so much good music have been heard for free in such a poor state of sobriety.

There are 10 pubs in all, ranging from the splendour of Bodega (a superbly converted old grain warehouse complete with original beams and wooden flooring) to the intimate, rosy-cheeked snug parlour warmth of The Donkey's Ears.

Down at the Iso Bar on Saturday, the first night, Harri has disappeared, which is just as well given the whispering volume of the sound system. Some pub landlords haven't quite got the hang of this DJing lark yet and insist on sticking their guests as far out of the way as possible. In other hostelries, though, the atmosphere is incredible. You can barely move at Mollies where Russ Gabriel is airing his superfly disco collection, while over at the World's End, Robert Mello is experiencing a similar crush.

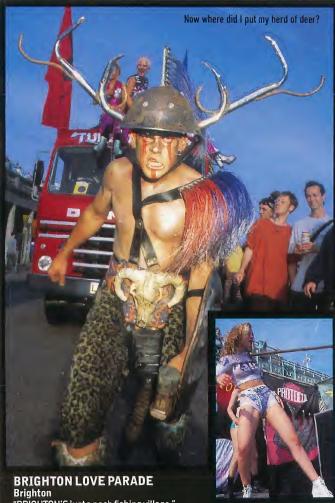

Downing pints as quick as you can, continue to wander and you might stumble into Porky and Mr Scruff, Crispin Glover, Bob Jones, the Grand Central crew, Joey Negro, DJ Tonka or Simon Faze Action. Only the late-night club is something of an anti-climax. Because the university is on hols, the necessary student quota is absent, leaving Basement Jaxx, Jocelyn Brown, Grand Central Collective and, bizarrely, an Errol Brown-free Hot Chocolate playing to a sparse crowd down at the city's Opera House.

But let's not allow that to detract from two otherwise splendid days. The greatest pub crawl yet? Without a doubt. Corkin', no less. Calvin Bush

"BRIGHTON'S just a posh fishing village," insists one tipsy punter at this, the first Love Parade to be held in Brighton, or for that matter, Britain. Today, the south coast seaside town has the feel of a heaving sun-kissed celebration rather than a posh fishing village. Firstly, they're celebrating because the local council have agreed to let the Parade go aboad (it dight't banner last year due to "insufficient").

agreed to let the Parade go ahead (it didn't happen last year due to "insufficient organisation") and secondly, it's sunny and, as a result, the place is mobbed.

With a certain amount of confusion as to exactly what the timetable of events is, old folk find themselves caught in a mid-afternoon hail of techno in normally sleepy pubs and babies in pushchairs are threatened by juggling crusties on stilts. The promenade swarms with a strange brew of eco-terrorists, casuals and reefer-smoking hippies.

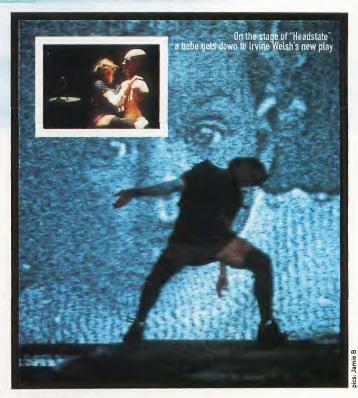

Lined up in the beach car park are about 20 trucks, buses and coaches marauding as floats. No majorettes or carnival queens (at least not of the female variety) here though. With a wide range of sound systems covering most musical styles from the junglist Get A Life lorry to the aerobic techno pumping from the phenomenal Positive Sounds float, it's a question of lorries battling for airspace and punters depending on who has the loudest system.

Clashing with the twisting acid trance of the Blue Room alien lorry, the Defunkt techno bus plays host to the likes of Christian Vogel and Si Begg. Wandering down the procession a bit further. The End/Plink Plonk long vehicle fires out its special brand of electronic warfare, but the hands-down highlight is definitely the Turbo Unit set-up. Replete with mutant stilt-walkers, robotic men in quad bikes and muscle-man pulling the whole shebang, it's the techno travellers who attract the biggest crowd.

With an estimated 20,000 people in attendance (the police and council were expecting 5,000) the parade couldn't have run much smoother, which bodes well for Love Parade 1998!

Reclaim the beach!

HEADSTATE

Trinity Buoy Wharf, Docklands, London

AT the arse-end of Docklands, a few silent warehouses stand on Trinity Buoy Wharf overlooking the industrial sprawl of the Millennium site and the shimmering grey of the River Thames. People are milling around outside an impressive-looking lighthouse, and as the bass starts revving like an engine from within, a tangible bite of expectation and excitement ripples through the air like a Mexican wave.

But tonight we are not clubbing, tonight we are culture vultures in the pursuit of thespian thrills provided by Irvine Welsh's most recent exploit into the (theatrical) arts. As is the norm for Welsh's work, this is not for the fainthearted. "Headstate" is a raw, festering play about paranoia and ultimately murder with the obligatory cultural references to Ecstasy, HIV, acid house, poverty and sex. Despite these themes though, the story isn't too clear. Style appears more important than content, which makes for a performance which is physically and visually challenging, provocative and exciting, but too chaotic to leave you with anything to grasp at mentally – a bit like a comedown. However, style is also its strength and much is done to recreate a club vibe with music, visual FX, strobes and loudhailers. The fact that the audience is left to jostle their way round the set like sheep as the performers barge their way through the crowd on scaffolding, bellowing as they go, only adds to the clubby feel.

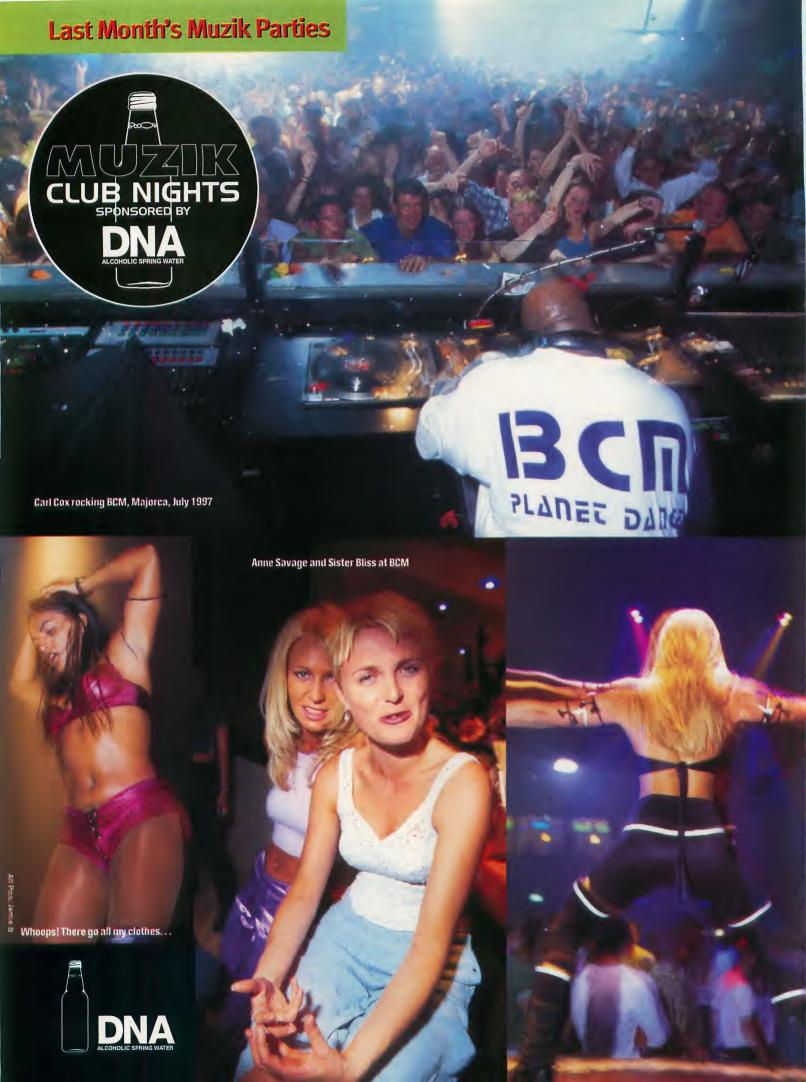

The characters (a butcher, a babe, a transvestite and a human dog), all hardcore nutters who have blatantly overdone it, give heroic, ferocious and vigorous performances (although that may have something to do with the pill they drop halfway through). The lead character (the butcher) played by Tam Dean Burns is a likable but malevolent maniac, the kind of person you wouldn't want to bump into in a dark alley and has the rough, guttural Scottish speech and sense of humour we have come to associate with Welsh's prose.

What's striking about "Headstate" is the meteoric talent of Welsh and the cast who intelligently translate the vibe. language and devises of our culture into a medium which is traditionally the reserve of fringe theatre. Tonight we got a clubbing experience for the head rather than the feet.

HOTSHOTS & HOTSPOT

HOT SPOTS

Consistently the best clubs in the land

1(-) BIG BEAT BOUTIQUE (Fridays fortnightly, Concorde, Brighton) See

2(-) SKINT ON FRIDAYS (Fridays monthly, The End, London)

The End needed a regular night of this stature as did London's big beat crowd. Combined with the lethal hedonism of the more eclectic It's On at Gossips and the odd trip to Big Beat Boutique in Brighton, you should all now be fully serviced with the phat sound of Skint beats.

(-) SUNDISSENTIAL (Sundays. Pulse, Birmingham)

Sunday is officially the new Saturday thanks to speed garage and gay culture in the capital, and thanks to clubs like Sundissential in the Midlands. Much like an indoor version of Space, this is what 97 clubbing is all about.

4(1)ABSOLUTE SUNDAYS (Sundays, The Aquarium, London)

Resident Mickey Simms continues to provide the capital with the best speed garage night around. Rammed by 8pm on a Sunday, this month sees Omar on the sets of steel (August 17) with Frankie Foncett and Nipper making 5(10) BUGGED OUT (Fridays, Sankeys Soap, Manchester)

Voted Best Small Club by Muzik readers at the SAS Dance Awards, it seems only right that Bugged Out move up a few notches in our Hotspot chart. Proving that techno does still bear a huge relevance on clubbing today, brace yourselves for a massive night out with the celebration of Dave Clarke's birthday.

6(-) GATECRASHER (Saturdays, The Republic, Sheffield)

The second wave of Super Clubs is led by Gatecrasher who appear to be on a world domination tip at the moment. Three years old and with the best atmosphere in the north apart from Oakey's room at Cream, watch this club go.

7(-) PROGRESS (Saturdays, Eclipse, Derby)

Still one of the best Saturday night clubs around, thanks to a strong residents policy which allows their regulars to close the club after the main guest. And also for playing speed garage at the night for the past five months without realising it!

8(3)WIGGLE (Saturdays monthly, various locations, London)

Slipping while the club confirm details of their move to London's Brick Lane, the Wiggle vibe can still be found with Positive Sounds at the Brighton Centre on September 13. The Wiggle crowd is still unlike any anything in the UK.

9 (-) THE GALLERY (Fridays, Turnmills, London)

An institution in the capital for true hedonistic party heads, it is here where you will hear the national anthems of tomorrow being slaughtered months in advance. A truly destructive club. And do check Lottie on the decks.

10(4) CREAM (Saturdays, Nation, Liverpool)

Falling this month due to Oakenfold living in Ibiza for seven weeks, Nick Warren being absent while he becomes a proud father, and hundreds of Cream regulars topping up their tans with Oakey in Ibiza. Get ready for the 5th Birthday...

HOT SHOTS

1(-) CHARLES DOCKINS (Baltimore, USA)

Man of the moment in house circles, this 22 year-old from Baltimore is riding high with C-Dock's Heritage on Groove On and (the big one) with "C-Dock's Traffic Jam" on Slip 'N' Slide. Caned by DJs such as Ashley Beedle and Paul "Trouble" Anderson, watch this man's distinct style develop over the coming months. Massive!

2(-) DAVE MORALES (New York, USA)

It's been a long while since ol' beardy's been on the ball, but those Urban Soul and Jaydee remixes should help swell his collection of facial hair trimmers. Let's hope his DJing reflects this on his forthcoming UK dates.

3 (-) WAY OUT WEST (Bristol, England)

Nick Warren and Jody Wisternoff rip apart the prog-house opposition with a long-player of film soundtracks, banging Eanthems and melodic dream house. An album for everyone who's been to Ibiza in 1997.

4 (-) DJ GARTH (San Francisco, USA)
Now here's a man to watch. After the huge "20 Minutes Of Disco Glory" on his own Wicked imprint was used by Deep Dish for the last Cream compilation. Garth returns with a heavy tribal production as Crosstown Traffic with "Now Dig This". Huge with Peterson and the Paper boys alike.

5(-) BAFFLED REPUBLIC (London, England) A lethal speed garage partnership between Baffled (Nathan Lockett & G-Smoove) and Catch's Banana Republic guise (aka Gavin Mills & Brian Tharme), nothing seems to be able to stop these boys. See "Bad Boys" on Catch. 6 (-) GLENN UNDERGROUND (Chicago, USA)

Just when you thought that Chi-house sound was getting stale, along comes GU's "House Of Blues" (Guidance) to change your life. Again.

7(-) JACQUES LE CONT (allegedly from Paris, France) Remix after remix coming up trumps (especially for Mono) and now sashaying in 4/4 with the "Jacques Your Body EP". Is he from Paris? Is he fuck.

8(-) SEAN "PUFFY" COMBS (New York,

It's not all pansy swing for the Puff Daddy these days - check the "No Way Out" album and his production on the new SWV for an altogether tougher, rougher sound.

9 (-) STEVE SULLIVAN (London, England)

The future of British techno is safe in the hands of Steve Sullivan and his posse of artists on the Mosaic, Green and Bluetrain imprints. 007 features Sullivan with former Fat Cat / Eagles Prey man Lee Grainge. while 008 has a Steve Bug remix.

10 (-) ERWIN VAN MOLL (Valkenswaard, Holland)

Back with Max 404's "Before And After EP" on Universal Language (Nick Warren's Single Of The Month), Van Moll is the man who gave us that bassline-bleeder "The Great Lover" from the beautiful "Awakening" EP on Lucid.

BIG BEAT BOUTIQUE (Fridays fortnightly, The Concorde, Brighton)

FROM the smiley face that's stamped on your hand upon entering, to the smiley faces of the punters welcoming you to the Big Beat Boutique, Brighton's answer to the (original) Heavenly Social rocks! Described as "the scout hut opposite the beach" the Concorde club in Brighton has played host to this fortnightly Friday-nighter for 15 months and bursts to capacity every single time. Promoted by the local Skint imprint, their blueprint is good-time music with a lager top!

A very un-Skint door lady

With queues above and beyond the 500 capacity usually assembling long before the original 10 o'clock opening time (reminiscent of the nocturnal queueing for the Harrods sale), this particular boutique have had to bring their opening time forwards to 9pm. Even before the first person into the venue has finished their pint the doors have closed behind them on a full house... Every time!

Residents Midfield General (Damien Harris, Skint label boss), Cut La Roc and Fatboy Slim (aka Norman Cook) churn up the crowds and regular guests Wall Of Sound, Jon Carter, Death In Vegas and the Chemical Brothers threaten to crack the plasterwork each forinight.

Sometimes it could be mistaken for a school disco with young people throwing lager down their throats as they stand in an awkward semi-circle around the dancefloor... Except it doesn't take as long to get them moving.

With regular crowd-pleasers ranging from Madonna's "Into The Groove" to Fifties salsa numbers, this club is about as big beat as Beethoven. Obviously Skint, Wall Of Sound et al appear on the playlist but not in hideous quantities and the emphasis is on hedonistic smiling. not moody shoe-gazing. So, if you're in any doubt, grab your sleeping bag and start queueing for the busiest boutique around!
